Prof. Daniels left for his home at Onsted on Thursday night.

The General Supply Co., are still receiving new goods and are busy with their holiday trade at prosent.

Mrs. Winder, in her old age and declining years is made to rejoice over the good news received from her son a few days since. He has been in the employment of the same company since 15 years of age, being 28 years in their service. The following clipping was handed us:

On the 22nd October a handsome testimonial was presented to Mr. J E. Winder by a few friends in the Southern Division, London and North Western Railway, on his appointment as district cashier at Chester. The presentation was made by the chief cashier, the different departments at Euston being well represented on the occasion.

Mrs. Hall returned from her visit at Brooklyn with her daughters, Mrs. Bush and Miss Hall; also Wendell, her grandson, who will spend a few days with her.

The following program will be furnished at the next meeting of the library circle on Tuesday evening of next week.

Music—Miss Flota Smith.
Dec.—John Baker.
Song—J. D. Arner.
Debate—Resolved, that Authors exert a greater influence than orators. Aff.—R. H. Nelson, and G. P. Waring. Neg.—Chas. Hiscock and Geo. D. Arner.
Music—Lena Smith.

Several of the young people are preparing a play; also some music which they will present to the public at Cottage Hall, on Monday evening next. The proceeds, after paying all the necessary expenses will be used in releasing the debt on the sidewalks already laid and to build more. There should be a good attendance of those in the village who have the advantage of the walks this muddy season of the year.

Last Saturday, about a dozen of our nimrods under guidance of that famous scout, Joe Hunter, went hunting for bear. We understand the party had hardly got out of the village when Hank Taylor who was on the right wing, shouted "ship ahoy," which was the signal agreed upon to be given when "bruin" was started. The whole party at once gave chase, ten of them chasing Joe Hunter toward town and the balance of the dozen in hotpursuit of the black object which was making great strides toward the bear swamp. He was however surrounded and captured alive, and is now on exhibition at J. B. Collar's drug store, where this brave lot of hunters are wont to gather of an evening and tell how "we" caught the bear.

We drop the mask
To give and ask
A Merry Christmas, full of cheer,
And words of gold
To close the old
And to begin the coming year.

Friends, tried but new,
Friends, old and true,
We wish you happiness and mirth!
May days unborn
Bring brighter morn
Than ever shone upon this earth!

Like little boys
Who find with toys
Their Christmas stockings overflow,
We pray your lot
Be not forgot
By Him who doth all good bestow.

Though tears will rise
In loving eyes
Where grief her mastery hath won,
May yours be few,
And like the dew
Refresh whate'er they fall upon.

If, friends, our jest
Be e'er expressed
As to inflict too deep a smart,
In kindness see
Each slip to be
But of the tongue and not the heart.

Believe in sooth
That love of truth
And love of mankind guides our pen,
And that our prayer
Is "Everywhere
Be peace on earth, good will to men."

—WILLIAM E. S. FALES

THE CHRISTMAS ANGEL.

"Papa, what are the bells ringing for?"

"They are the chime bells, dear boy. to-morrow will be Christmas Day."

"Papa," continued the dying child, in a faint, reproachful voice, "you never told me about Christmas; but mamma did, and read to me about the Child in the manger, and I know—I know—Oh, papa, it is all dark—will it ever be Christmas morning?"

The strong man bowed his head over the small, cold hand he held in his and the hot tears fell upon it, for well he knew his boy would never see the morning of another day. The child moved restlessly and in pain on his pillows, looking from one kind face to the other and again listening to the faint chimes of the bells, as they rang out now far, now near, like voices in the sky. When the last paroxysm of deadly pain had passed the child turned his bright eyes towards his father.

"Papa, are the bells calling me? They seem to say, Come, Charlie! Is it that, and what do they mean?"

"Charlie," said the grave old doctor, bending over the dying boy, "you know there was once a Child born in a manger on Christmas eve. He came to tell us all of a beautiful home where you will not have any pain or be sick or sorry any more. He loves little children, and they are His, and if you go to sleep to-night and waken in that beautiful house where He is, it will only be a little while before mamma and papa will be there with you. Just say your little good night prayer, my boy, and go to sleep; you will find it morning when you awake?"

"Christmas morning?" asked the child feebly. "I—wonder what Santa Claus will bring—papa—if—I—am—good—give—all—my — presents — to some poor child—in—a—manger—because—he—won't have—any—"

"Yes, dear boy," and then father and mother bent over him, for he was smiling brightly. What he saw they could not see—what he heard they could not hear—his eyes were fixed—the breath fluttered on his lips.

"Oh," he said softly, with a smile of infinite peace, "they did want me—it's the bells' voices—Come, Charlie—Come, Charlie—and the children too—they're—coming—oh papa—mamma—it's Christmas morning.

* * * * * * *

A miserable shadow stole along the street in the very echo of the bells that rang out "Peace on earth, good will to men," and in its arms it carried another shadow, a gaunt spectre of want and woe. These two had done no wrong, yet there was not a hand uplifted to help them. The mother-heart under the rags of poverty, had failed at last, and given up the great struggle for daily bread—the wedding ring had gone from her finger that the child might have medicines—but he had wasted away beneath her anxious eyes day after day, and that was but a waxen emblem of humanity she held in her thin arms. Where she was going in her mad flight she had no definite idea; but it seemed as if the Christmas bells had driven her mad, and she had swept out of her wretched garret, with a desperate longing to get somewhere beyond it all. She had passed a church where the children were singing in white robes, and a Christmas tree shed a hundred lights and glistened with the beauty of a hundred surprises for children who had enough and to spare—her boy had nothing—and then the sweet, glad voices of the little children in the white robes rang out soft and clear:

"Glad tidings of great joy I bring
To you and all mankind."

"Not to us, baby," said the shadow in the darkness outside. "It only means people who have homes and money. Glad tidings are not for such as us," and she went on, not knowing or caring where, and then the wonderful instinct of self-preservation became strong again, and she resolved to do what she had never done before—beg.

So she waited until the good minister came out, well wrapped up and warm, and as he stepped into the street humming in a soft tone,

"Glad tidings of great joy I bring,"

She stepped before him like the dark shadow she was, and asked humbly for an alms to keep her and her child from starving, and he who had talked so to his people about Christ of Bethlehem, said in a sharp, cold voice, "There are charitable homes for the deserving poor, I cannot encourage professional beggars," and waved her aside with his hand.

Then she sat for a long time on the [illegible] listening to the bells and idly thinking that they said "To the river," "To the river," and then the door opened and she hid in the railings, as shadows do, as two men came out. One was bareheaded and looked up to the stars:

"Oh!" he said in a voice of terrible grief, "it cannot be, that Charlie is dead. It cannot be—it cannot be!"

"No," said the other, in a calm, grave tone, "Charlie lives, after a few to-morrows you will see him."

And so one went away, and the other, with a great sob, went in and shut the door.

Then the shadow arose and went softly up the steps and laid a light burden, wrapped in a thin shawl, on the door sill, and with one swift, sudden peal rang the silver-handled bell and was gone.

Years have come and gone since then, and again the Christmas chimes are ringing, and an excited boy chorister, with fair curls, and eyes of heaven's own blue, has come home and is telling all about the singing and the Christmas trees, and he says as his mother takes off his wraps, "I'm to sing a solo to-morrow, the minister said so, and, papa, my skates were on the tree and just fitted a boy who hadn't any, and I gave brother Charlie's cap to Jim, the coal boy, and he said 'Thankee, sir,' and all the children from the 'sylum are coming up-to-morrow to Charlie's feast, and won't it make them happy to get so many nice things from Santa Claus, and mamma's going to tell them stories about Christmas."

And this was the boy the shadow had carried half dead with cold and hunger in her arms and left at the rich man's door with a prayer from the heart of a dying mother, and the child had blessed them from that hour when he came like Charlie's angel and pleaded for entrance to their hearts, and they had accepted him at last in memory of their boy who had gone:

"In the fair land to shine and sing
Before the beautiful, the King,
Who every day doth Christmas make,
All starred and belled for Jesus' sake."

HIS YEARLY GREETING.

Father Time welcomes Santa Claus and the New Year.—Frank Leslie's Weekly.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS.

An Old English Custom Now Fallen Into Disuse.

In Shakespeare's time carols were sung in the street at night during Christmas by the waits or watches, who expected to receive gifts for their singing. Many a writer of old times and customs refers to the "wakeful ketches of Christmas eve." It was after the reformation that they ceased to sing Latin hymns in the churches and substituted the sweet Christmas carols. For there were two kinds of carols in vogue—those of a devotional nature, which were sung not only in the churches, but also through the streets from house to house upon Christmas eve, and even after that morning and evening, until Twelfth day.

In those times men were able to spare more than one brief day for the celebration of Christmas, and kept up the festival for at least twelve days. Other carols were of a livelier natures and were especially adapted to the revel and the feast where the lord of misrule had potent sway. These carol, were also called wassail-songs, and probably originated among the Anglo-Normans, who were of a convivial nature. No Christmas entertainment was complete without the joyous singing of carols, and thence came the mom. "No song, no supper," for every guest at the table was expected to join in the carol. One of the rules laid down by the ancient customs was that "ancientest master of the revels, after dinner and supper, to sing a carol, a song, and to command the other gentlemen present to sing with him and the companies."

Christmas Petitions.

A little boy in Georgia who wrote to Santa Claus for a pony was wise enough to add: "Poscrit. If he is a mule, Ples ty his behine legs."

In a petition to Santa Claus a small boy in Troy wrote: "Wont you pleas bring me for crismas a nice torchlite prosession on horseback so I can ride myself."

Merely a Suggestion.

A new snow shovel will please your son quite as much as an orguinette for the time being, and is not apt to be a nuisance afterward.

THE CHILDREN'S DAY.

Christmas Should Be Especially Devoted to Making Them Happy.

The subtle charm which sheds its kindly light over cold December, filling the air with the sense of delightful mystery and joyful anticipation is so all-pervading as to quicken the universal interest.

The stores crowded with eager customers, the street thronged with masses of struggling humanity, would lead one to suppose that not a single child was to be forgotten by Santa Claus this year, and yet we know that there are multitudes of little children to whom all days are alike; full of privation and suffering. They crouch and shudder in the haunts of drunkenness and crime; they starve and shiver in homes where honesty does daily battle with the wolf at the door. Shall we, who have enough and to spare, forget on this the Master's day that He has said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto Me."

Christmas is especially children's day. Their claim to it was established years ago when the wise men of the East journeyed from Jerusalem to Bethlehem bearing precious gifts to the

DREAMING OF SANTA CLAUS.

Christ-child born that day. How any one, unless it be Old Scrooge himself, can willingly defraud one of these little ones of its Heaven-born legacy is past understanding.

In the illustration kind parents and friends are shown to have made provision for the happiness of their sleeping little ones, and we can imagine with what glad exultation will come their awakening.

Long ago when each Christmas seemed to measure an eternity, don't you remember how we children used to dream and wonder what Santa Claus would bring? Don't you remember how stockings were hung up in blessed faith and hope and how little bare feet kept merry time to the heart's rejoicings, when we wakened to the blissful realities of the Christmas morning, and the delights of doughnut boys and girls and sugar cats and roosters and all the nice things that children used to love in good old fashioned times? And don't you remember the merry games, in which everybody big and little joined?

There were scores of other things we used to do, don't you recollect? Are your memories of childhood so bleak and barren that they reflect no pleasant pictures of the blessed Christmas tide? Did you ever hang up your stocking for Santa Claus to fill, or have a Christmas bag or anything children ought to have? If you never did, it is not too late now while the Christmas bells are ringing, to learn something of the joys which you have missed by making up to other little lives what has been lost out of your own. Stockings may be lean and Christmas fare frugal, but even then the children will be satisfied, if that sweetest and best of all gifts glorifies their lives: the gift of patience, sympathy, and tender love.

A Dream of Santa Claus.

"I had a dweem last night, mamma," said little curly-head. "I dweemed that I was all asleep in my little bed, and Santa Claus he came into my room and he looked all round, till he saw my stocking hanging up, and he said: 'Ha, ha, what a little, short stocking that is,' and then he peeped over the foot of the bed and said: 'Next Christmas borrow the largest, longest stocking you can find; I can't fool away my time filling up such little bits of stockings,' and then he acted mad and he went away. Wasn't that a funny dweem, mamma?"

WILL HE COME?

Three pairs of little stockings,
"By the chimney hung with care;"
Three little elfs, each saying,
"Saint Nick will soon be there."

Three pairs of little, pattering feet,
Going boldly off to bed,
Where mysteries and visions
Fill full each little head.

* * * * * * *

Three little night-clad cherubs,
Stealing softly down the stairs;
Forgetting, in their curious haste,
To say their morning prayers.

Three little voices shouting,
"Oh! Santa Claus did come,"
And Merry Christmas echoes swell
Throughout a happy home.

—CLARK W. BRYAN in Good Housekeeping

A CHRISTMAS WISH.

May Christmas echoes linger
Till Christmas comes again,
Thy heart a seeming manger
Where Little Christ hath lain
All purified and shining—
As when a sunbeam falls
Upon the chilling shadow
Within cathedral walls.

And so, in sweet enshrinement,
The passing years may keep
The story of the Shepherd
So loving to His sheep;
Who now, above the shadows
Enclosing earthly ones,
Awaileth ever loving—
The Kingly Son of sons.

Beyond the mystic river,
Beyond the hills of time,
Angelic hosts are singing
In harmony sublime;
And once a year their voices
To loving hearts reveal
His glory, ever shining
Within the land "Immanuel."

CHRISTMAS IN THE COUNTRY.

The catastrophe that happened to Br'er Skift's family when going to a Christmas party.

CHRISTMAS CHIMES.

"M. Quad's" Touching Tale of the Bankrupt Merchant.

He had failed in business—true he was a young man but what of that. He had started out with a grand sweep to make his life a success, and now at 30 years of age he was worse off than when he started. He had been generous and open-handed, but never reckless; he had worked honestly, but now he wished he had done as others did—saved himself; he would pay every debt, but it left his family penniless. And in the holidays, too, when his wife expected friends to visit them, and presents to be made; and the children were to have a Christmas tree, and he was to have been Santa Claus! How could he disappoint them all so, and to-morrow they would know; and Alice was so proud of her fine home and their beautiful children.

He locked the library door and sat down before the uncurtained window. It was a grand night. The pale, cold, moonlighted skies looked far off and tranquil—far, far above the petty strife and turmoil of life; the stars looked so pure and peaceful, but cold and inexorable. The ruined merchant thought of the Star in the East as of some old fable. There was no Christ-child born in a manger. What folly! He clenched his hand in his pocket over something that was cold and metallic.

Then there came suddenly to his ear a sad, sweet strain of music, so faint, so sweet, that it might have been a lost echo from the song the Chaldean shepherds sung when they watched their flocks by night, and as the weird strain died away with a soft, imploring melody he remembered that on this night his children were to practice the Christmas anthems, and it was their fresh young voices he heard, and a few moments later a hand rattled the door knob, then a small voice came in through the keyhole.

"Papa, is u telling Santa Kaus about my sled, cos I finks he knows already? Papa, can I come in to u?"

All the demons of darkness seemed to flee away before that little voice. The merchant lit his room up cheerily and opened the door. One—two—three little ones tumbled in like "blue-eyed bandits" and captured his heart. Was there money enough in the United States mint to buy one of these treasures?—and he thought he had lost all!

He put that which was in his pocket away and went out and sung chorals with the children, and when his boy asked him: "Papa, was there ever a Christ-child?" he answered: "Yes, and ever since there have been Christ-children:" but the boy only smiled and said he was glad, and looked with fond eyes into the face that represented his world.

The Gamins' Christmas.

They had no stockings and something had to be done.

Having completed their preparations the poor lads await a visit from Santa Claus. We hope he will not disappoint them.

Catarrh

Is a constitutional and not a local disease, and therefore it cannot be cured by local applications. It requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, working through the blood, eradicates the impurity which causes and promotes the disease, and effects a permanent cure. Thousands of people testify to the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for catarrh when other preparations had failed. Hood's Sarsaparilla also builds up the whole system, and makes you feel renewed in health and strength.

"I used Hood's Sarsaparilla for catarrh and received great relief and benefit from it. The catarrh was very disagreeable, especially in the winter, causing constant discharge from my nose, ringing noises in my ears, and pain in the back of my head. The effect to clear my head in the morning by hawking and spitting was painful. Hood's Sarsaparilla gave me relief immediately, while in time I was entirely cured. I think Hood's Sarsaparilla is worth its weight in gold." MRS. G. B. GRAY, 1029 Eighth Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

"I was caught in a python's folds and saw fierce eyes glaring down into mine. If slant tremendous coil were tightened around me, I knew that I might at once check my luggage for the undiscovered bourne. In this crisis of my fate I saw the great python's tail in close proximity to his mouth. I grasped the snake's tail and pushed a yard or two down his yawning jaws. Serpents seldom bite their prey; they lubricate it and suck it down. With such a long and cold-blooded creature, I calculated that it would take over a half a minute before the sensations of his tail could be conveyed to his head, and render him aware that he was committing suicide."

REVIEW OF THE QUARTER.

LESSON XIII, FOURTH QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, DEC. 29.

In All History There Is No Other Lesson in Government so Awful and Impressive. From David to Jeroboam—From God's Service to Vile Idolatry.

In the lessons terminating with Sept. 29 are given the thrilling details of that momentous transition period in Israelitish history—the change from a commonwealth ruled by judges to a centralized monarchy, the errors and follies of Saul, the first monarch, and then his melancholy failure and destruction. Following in natural order, the lessons of the quarter now closing tell of the consolidation of power in David, the rise of the Jewish kingdom and its marvelous glory under Solomon, followed, alas! all too soon by apostasy, idolatry, division and the beginning of a long decay.

In all the histories written by man there is no such instructive lesson in government as is contained in these chapters. Each succeeding age, since the civilized world became Christian, has studied this history with new light as events taught wisdom, and successive governments have prospered or decayed as they obeyed or neglected the teachings of these chapters. Even if we could lay aside the purely moral lesson and study this history as a guide in the science of government, we should still find in every chapter of it a prophecy of what painful experience has so often shown modern nations, namely, that all the nations which forget God shall be given over to destruction. Israel's kings obeyed God and received wisdom and guidance; wisdom and the favor of God brought national freedom and glory; prosperity and glory corrupted ruler and people and they apostatized; apostasy brought division, decay and destruction, and that right speedily. Shall the divine lesson be lost in our own beloved nation?

The quarter opens with the union of the tribes under David. It was the final act in the construction of a nation. Seven years and a half he had reigned in Hebron, and he was to reign thirty-three years in Jerusalem; but his first duty was to complete its conquest from the Jebusites. It then became the capital of the nation, and, despite the later division between the tribes, it remained the great Israelite center for 1,116 years, for David conquered the Jebusites 1046 B. C., and Titus destroyed Jerusalem 70 A. D. But during some fifty years of this period Jerusalem lay desolate, the people having been dispersed or taken into Babylon. Little by little in the first six centuries of the Christian era a new and inferior Jerusalem rose upon the ruins of the old, and today, 2,935 years after David's conquest, Jerusalem remains the hope of the Israelites and a place of pious pilgrimage to Christians—a continuing witness of the fulfillment of prophecy.

The successive lessons of the quarter tell us of the national union under David, the bringing of the ark to Zion, the triumphs of David by which he secured peace to the people, his sin, punishment, repentance and death. The scene then suddenly changes. The man of war has cleared the way and partially collected the materials, now the man of peace is to build the temple and usher in the golden age of Jerusalem. Solomon takes the kingdom, adds vastly to its wealth, receives from God a special gift of wisdom, builds and dedicates the temple, and the fame of his wisdom is great among all the nations of the east. This was the golden age of Judaism, and here the devout Christian and the patriotic Israelite alike would fain pause and dwell lovingly on such a situation. But the time was short. Solomon sinned against light and knowledge. He had before him the divine command not to "multiply wives lest his heart turn away." But he transgressed the law, and soon it was said of him that "his heart was not perfect with the Lord his God, as was the heart of David, his father." He took wives of the neighboring nations, though expressly forbidden to do so (Deut. vii), and they led him into idolatry.

"For Solomon went after Ashtoreth (or Astarte), the goddess of the Zidonians, and after Milcom, the abomination of the Ammonites," imaginary deities, worshiped with obscene and disgusting ceremonies.

"Then did Solomon build a high place for Chemosh, the abomination of Moab. * * * And likewise did he for all his strange (that is, foreign) wives, which burnt incense and sacrifice unto their gods," and the punishment came swiftly. God spared him for his time, but told him his son should lose most of the kingdom. And so it proved, for Jeroboam stirred up a rebellion against Rehoboam, son and successor of Solomon, and all Israel followed Jeroboam except the tribe of Judah and the tribe of Benjamin.

Then began the decline of Israel, and for about 250 years the kingdom of Judah and the kingdom of Israel continued side by side, sometimes at peace, often at war, ever jealous of each other and in a condition of perpetual decay. At length the condition of Israel became wretched to an extreme, usurpation, conspiracy, revolt and murder of kings became common. Baasha massacred the offspring of Jeroboam; his son, Elah, was murdered while drunk by Zimri, and Zimri was in a few days overthrown by Tirzah, Zimri being burned in his own palace. And so the regime of murder, tyranny and idolatry went on till the Assyrians came, and about 721 B. C. utterly destroyed the remains of the miserable kingdom and scattered the degraded inhabitants through Asia. These are the "Ten Lost Tribes," whose location was long a matter of speculation to the learned; but it is now known that they never gathered into one place, but remained "a hissing and a byword," and fragments of them are found to this day in all the east, even to the "Black Jews" of China and India.

The Bible does not give particulars, but we can easily see how the miserable Israelites looked back with mingled pride and sorrow to those days when Solomon still enjoyed the favor of God and the glory of the Lord was visible on Mount Zion, when the nation was one, when the Almighty was Himself its lawgiver and His choice was Himself its anointed king. How often must they have shed bitter tears at thought of the apostasy of their fathers and the idolatry of their great king, how often did they cry aloud for mercy and long for a return of the scepter to Israel. But in vain. The whole tenor of Bible history teaches that a nation may sin away its day of grace—the scattered Israelites must wait and suffer till God's appointed time to recall them. Meanwhile their presence in all lands is a continuing witness of prophecy—a miracle as stupendous as any recorded. Would be wise men have sought to discredit the miracles of the Bible, but not one of them has ever been able to answer the solemn fact that the Jews today, in all nations, are exactly as the prophets of God told them they should be in case of apostasy two thousand and three thousand years ago.

HOW CAN THE LONG LINE BE THE SHORT ?

A line may be a very long one and yet be the shortest between given points. For instance the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railroad has over 3000 miles of road, magnificently equipped and managed, it is one of the greatest railway systems of this country; for the same reasons it is the traveler's favorite to all points in Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Montana. It is the only line to Great Falls, the future manufacturing center of the Northwest; to the fertile free lands of the Milk River Valley; and offers a choice of three routes to the coast. Still it is the shortest line between St. Paul, Minneapolis, Fargo, Winnepeg, Crookston, Moorhead, Casselton, Glyndon, Grafton, Fergus Falls, Wahpeton, Devils Lake, and Butte City. It is the best route to Alaska, China, Japan, and the journey to the Pacific Coast, Vancouver, Tacoma, Seattle, Portland and San Francisco will be remembered as the delight of a lifetime once made through the wonderful scenery of the Manitoba-Pacific Route. To fish and hunt; to view the magnificence of nature; to revive the spirit; restore the body; to realize the dream of the home-seeker, the gold-seeker, the toiler, or the capitalist, visit the country reached by the St. Paul, Minneapolis & Manitoba Railway. Write to F. I. WHITNEY, G. P. & T. A., St. Paul, Minn., for maps, books and guides. If you want a free farm in a lovely land, write for the "Great Reservation" read it and resolve to accept the golden HAND OF FORTUNE!

DR. ERASMUS MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE FAR WEST.

TECUMSEH, Mich., Nov., 1889.

On one pleasant July evening, the outgoing train for the west left Ridgeway on time, and we were soon crossing the high trestle bridge near Tecumseh at a slow rate of speed which presently brought us to a stop. There are few towns more pleasantly located than this, and in any richer part of the country. From Tecumseh on to Battle Creek, where a change was made to the Grand Trunk Ry. and on to Chicago. Nothing could be seen on account of the darkness of the night. The suberbs of Chicago were reached in the early morning, and through which the cars travel for 13 miles before halting at the union depot—a handsome and magnificent structure of light stone, and furnished with every convenience for the traveler.

By the recent census taken of this city, which includes its suberbs, it has over 1,000,000 inhabitants, and stands second in rank in the United States. It is the largest grain market in the world. It has entirely recovered from the effects of the great fire of 1871, when about 2300 acres in the business center were burned over, causing a loss of some $200,000,000. The city is pleasantly situated near Lake Michigan from which it receives its ample supply of good water. There are five large union depots in the city, besides other single stations, which together with the fine public buildings, elegant residences and stores, and beautiful parks, make Chicago the "Queen City" of the west. The cable cars run the length, breadth, and in one place, under the city and the river.

When leaving there by the Wisconsin Central R.R., we soon passed over the great extent of level land which was everywhere covered with beautiful gardens, and after some 15 hours ride through the central part of Wisconsin, and some very pretty cities and towns, we arrived at St. Paul. This city of 50,000 inhabitants is on the south side of the Mississippi, and like most western cities is full of busy life. From there we traveled by the Northern Pacific, and soon reached Minneapolis, St. Paul's twin sister, only a mile away. At great speed we rush along through the pleasant towns of Minnesota, and after daylight the next day whenever a stop was made in the country, many would quickly jump from the cars and gather wild flowers, which were very abundant, especially the wild rose. In time we crossed the Red River of the North and were in Dakota—the country of blizzards. However we were troubled only with clouds of mosquitoes coming into the cars. The land of that new state is very level, and being very destitute of trees the eye has an almost unlimited vision of that vast country covered with green, and with now and then a pleasant home of some well-to-do farmer, or only a small hut of some new settler perhaps. Wild flowers are seen all along the way until we cross the Missouri river at Bismark. When the morning light appeared a different scene greeted the eye. Such a vast contrast to the fertile green fields we had left, were the "Bad Lands" covered with cactus and sage brush, and now and then a pile of earth which seemed to have been dropped from above. These stood singly and some distance apart. In the distance some looked as large as churches. The towns in this part of the state were smaller and seemingly less prosperous than in eastern Dakota.

After reaching Montana, for many miles the cars ran along the side of the Yellowstone river, whose name is very suggestive by the color of the water. We pass near to Ft. Keogh, Big Horn and Custer. The Indians that we saw now and then, however, seemed to be happy, strolling around wrapped in their gay colored blankets, and begging of the passengers whenever we stopped at any station. The prairie dogs sitting on the mounds constructed by themselves, were very numerous in this locality and about as large as a full grown cat. Helena, the capital city of Montana, is built in a valley up among the mountains, and where it seemed to be very pleasant. Its rapid growth from about 3,600 to 15,000 inhabitants within 10 years seems to insure its being a large city in the future. All along the way now, one could enjoy the mountain scenery, the windings around and up the mountains, and at one place we could look down 229 feet upon a cozy little house and garden below, and then over the tops of the trees on the mountain sides. After passing a short distance through Idaho and Washington territories, the desert lands were soon left in the distance. We were making up lost time and going at a rapid rate through the old barren lava beds, and along the beautiful Columbia river through The Dalles, and other picturesque parts of Oregon to Portland, which is a fine and growing city. There we boarded an elegant steamer which made daily trips up and down the river, for about 100 miles, stopping at places on the way. About 15 miles farther down was the mouth of the Columbia river and its sand bar. Ever four days one of the steamers from San Francisco arrive at or leave Portland, making the trip in two days with good weather. It is from this river that so many fine salmon are caught, and on whose banks so many canneries are to be seen. In the small city of Astoria, containing 3000 people there are twenty-eight such institutions. There are four methods by which the fish are caught. By hook and line, large nets drawn in by horses on the shore, by a wire wheel in the stern of a boat, which scoops them out of the water into the boat, and by the men drawing in by hand the large nets. These nets are some 450 fathoms long, and knit during the winter. An outfit of net, boat, sail, etc., costs some $450. The fishing season is the best in June and July, but August 1st all operations in that line are suspended for a time, by law, to allow the fish to go up the river to their spawning grounds. The fishermen are paid from 60c to 90c each for their fish, according to whether the outfit belongs to themselves or to the canneries. The cans are made at the canneries, and the process of cleaning, cutting, cooking and packing ready for market, is quickly and neatly done in rapid succession by the fish being passed from one workman to another, most of whom are Chinese.

At the mouth of the Columbia river can be seen the two government forts—Canby and Stevens—one on each side of the river, the light house, and the new breakwater or jetty in course of construction, costing some millions of dollars. The manner of building it is by driving two rows of spiles some distance apart, and filling the space between with rocks alternating with bundles of pine or hemlock boughs, whose crevices will in time be filled up with sand washing in, and become solid.

At Bismark, Dk., we had to turn back our watches one hour from Central to Mountain standard time, and again in Montana one hour more to Pacific time, making two hours difference in all from Tecumseh time.

The Pacific Ocean at times is as peaceful and quiet as its name implies. But the squally March weather with its snow and wind made the passage a rather rough one at that time. But when entering the "Golden Gate" walled on each side by high rocks, all thoughts of rough seas pass from the mind, when at last upon the more quiet waters of San Francisco Bay, Angel Island, which belongs to the government with its fort, is here seen. Chap. Winfield Scott with his family, had for some time been stationed here, but recently was appointed to a station in New Mexico. S. M. O.

[CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.]

THE LIBRARY ENTERTAINMENT.

The Tecumseh Library was organized April 12, 1883, with 645 volumes. P. S. McKinnon was the first president. The following success shows the good management on the part of the officers and librarian, who have sacrificed a good portion of their time and convenience to the development of this, the greatest public benefit. There can be no question, but that a public library in any town or city is a great public benefit. It becomes your duty and ours as well as the officers and members of the Library association, to lend a helping hand at every possible opportunity. There are now 1119 volumes in the library, and it is for the purpose of increasing the number that this committee was formed. "A Scrap of Paper," a comic drama in three acts, is the result of their combined efforts. We don't suppose our best local talent is equal to Fannie Davenport and her support but they are not to be sneezed at. The play was written by the same author as La Tosca. S. P. Hosmer, the fore cart wheel, with Mrs. Met Conkling, Mrs. Crowell, Jehiel Davidson and Henry Sweet complete the cast, driver, horse and all. Stella Cleveland, Mame Crowell, and Clara Hayden; Charlie Bidwell and Will Hayden have enough of the old Adam in them to do the business up brown. They will add to honors already won at previous entertainments. It was the pleasure of our reporter to be at the rehearsal at the residence of Wm. Hayden last Thursday evening, and he had a chance to judge of its merits. To say it was good would be drawing the line mildly. It was immense.

Come one, come all, both great and small, let everyone turn out. This is no Uncle Tom's Cabin troupe. Fill up the opera house, and by so doing, show the association that we appreciate their efforts. The admission has been placed at the nominal price of 25c. Reserved seats without extra charge. What is 25c each? the merest trifle, so walk up like a man with your 25c, and enjoy a good laugh.

SAD DEATH OF A STUDENT.

Arthur D. Baluss, of Ogden, a Pupil of Adrian College, Fatally Injured by Falling Rails.

The home of Mr. Charles A. Gustin, located half a mile east of the County House, in Madison, was the scene of a very sad accident Friday afternoon.

Two brothers, Arthur D., and Fred C. Baluss, sons of Mr. Daniel D. Baluss, of Ogden, have been attending the college, and boarding with Mr. Gustin. Shortly after dinner the younger boy started for home, to spend the holidays with his parents, but Arthur remained on the farm, and went out to haul some rails, that were standing on end, about twenty rods from the house.

Fred had not gone over ten minutes before Arthur was noticed approaching the house on horseback, all bent up. Reaching the door, he alighted, walked into the house, informed Mrs. Gustin he had been hurt, laid down on a bed, and in a few minutes more passed peacefully away.

Dr. F. E. Andrews was called to examine the injured youth, but when he arrived the body was stiff in death, and on examination was made further than to ascertain that no bones were broken.

He had complained of a pain in his back and abdomen, but the only mark found on his body was a bruise across his chest.

He said he had been hurt by a pile of fence rails falling on him, so a visit was made to the pile, after his death, to learn how it had happened. From the center of the pile the rails were thrown outward, as if he had been compelled to push it aside to extricate himself.

The wagon on which he was loading the rails stood at the end of the heap, and was struck by the mass, when it fell, with sufficient force to break both axles, snapping the wheels off close to each hub, and letting the box of the wagon fall to the ground.

From the position of one rail, resting over the front end of the wagon body, it is supposed young Baluss must have been standing between the two wheels, with his back to the pile, when he was hurt.

How he was able to get from under the heavy load, unhitch the horse, mount it, and ride to the house, are questions which cannot be answered.

Dr. Andrews claims that death was caused by internal injuries. There were five hundred or more rails in the heap.

Mr. Baluss was a young man full of energy and promise, and the sad affair will cast a deep shadow of gloom over parents and friends alike.

A messenger was dispatched to his home soon after his death, and his father arrived here during the night. —Adrian Times.

THE TRIBUNE FOR 1890.

There is something very fine and admirable in the loyalty of The New York Tribune to the Republican party. Published in a town in which the Republicans are in almost a hopeless minority, where importing elements predominate in business circles, where the daily press and the magazines are nearly all in the hands of Democrats and free traders, and where money can be made by catering to un-Republican ideas and principles, The Tribune is, nevertheless, faithful to its ancient flag, and it still remains the one great Republican newspaper of the metropolis, as well as the one great National newspaper of the Republican party of the United States. It is the official newspaper of the Republican clubs. Its success, however, is not entirely due to the principles which it represents, but rather to the great ability with which the paper is conducted. No American Weekly newspaper, issued from the office of a daily, has such a large and strong editorial page, or is filled with such a variety of features of general interest. For 1890 The Tribune has provided a delightful literary repast for its readers in every one of its issues. Its prospectus in another column to-day shows that articles are furnished for 1890 from Carnegie, Depuy, Powderly, Mrs. John A. Logan, Senator Ingalls, Senator Stewart, 'Josiah Allen's Wife' and a whole host of other well-known and distinguished people; and that there will be besides, a lot of War Stories, a good G. A. R. page, and papers on particular branches of farming. Prizes worth $2,440 are offered to club agents, and a long and varied list of popular premiums to its readers. We should say that 2 cents could not be better invested, before subscribing for a general paper this winter, than in the new 20-page Catalogue of The New York Tribune.

Ringing Noises.

In the ears, sometimes a roaring buzzing sound are caused by catarrh, that exceedingly disagreeable and very common disease. Loss of smell or hearing also results from catarrh. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, is a peculiarly successful remedy for this disease, which it cures by purifying the blood. If you suffer from catarrh, try Hood's Sarsaparilla, the peculiar medicine.

The Lance is booming right along since its enlargement, and Editor Grandon seems to be well pleased with the venture thus far.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Hudson's electric lights have been started and they work like a charm.

Mud seems to be exceedingly plenty in all sections of the county at present.

The late rains have been of immense advantage to the growing wheat crop.

The Clinton lecture course is a decided success thus far. Col. Sanford was the last man, who lectured Saturday evening.

Editor Joe Kempton had a lengthy leader last week in the Courier, urging the Mackinaw road to locate their general shops at Addison.

There is one admirable feature about a wire fence. The patent-medicine man can't paint a legend upon it in regard to his liver cure.

Gen. Wm. Humphrey will be the new postmaster at Adrian. This is an excellent selection. No man in the city is better fitted for the position.

One hundred and forty-eight granges throughout the state have voted for red clover as the National flower. A number of other granges favor golden rod.

A committee of "Patrons of Industry" interviewed our merchants on Monday, but with no satisfactory results we understand.—Brooklyn Exponent.

It is stated in a Detroit paper that Lenawee county farmers growl because their dogs are taxed $1 a head, while canines at the county seat, which do a large proportion of the sheep-killing for five miles around, are untaxed.

One of the teachers of the Industrial Home for girls at Adrian told her class the other day how the United States census is taken. Not long after a Times reporter was there picking up items for an article, when a girl who had heard the teacher's remarks asked, "is that the incense taker?"

Be a man of means: A man of money? Not necessarily so. Many a man of wealth is a man of ends—that is his wealth is the end of effort—he is a rather a man of meanness than of means. He a man of means, be he poor or rich, who has the ability—moral, mental or physical—to accomplish results.—The Voice.

Tipton is cogitating over some plan to get a few sidewalks, and possibly they will pass the hat up there some Sunday. Tipton people have a habit of stepping four feet now, which results from the practice they have had in picking their way along from one place to another near the corners.—Adrian Press.

The Addison House is said to be partly composed of the oldest frame building in this locality. Be that as it may, the corner has not presented so good an appearance as now since the days of our childhood; nor have the internal accommodations been as good for the care of guests, either regular or transient. Mine host Hills is a man of large experience in hotel business, and will doubtless improve the reputation of the house.—Addison Courier.

It is stated that an upholsterer in Battle Creek was recently repairing an old sofa brought to him and found the following articles which had slipped down at the back of the cushion: 47 hairpins, 3 mustache combs, 19 suspender buttons, 13 needles, 8 cigarettes, 4 photographs, 217 pins, some grains of coffee, a few cloves, 27 cuff buttons, 6 pocket knives, 15 poker chips, a vial of homoeopathic medicine, 34 lumps of chewing gum, 59 toothpicks, 28 matches, and 14 button hooks. The sofa belonged to a man who had seven unmarried daughters.

On Wednesday a tank car of crude oil for the electric light company arrived in Hudson. The hose was attached in the regular way, and Mr. Crawford, one of the employes, tried to engineer the same. But something was wrong, and as a result four or five barrels of the sweet scented liquid escaped, completely drenching Mr. Crawford, who however, had the presence of mind to replace the plug. But it was a case where absence of body would have been far preferable to presence of mind.—Hudson Post.

Foreman McCarty, of the Mackinaw section gang, attempted to jump on the work train between the engine tender and first car, as it was passing the depot Monday. The train was going at a pretty good rate, and McCarty made a miscalculation and fell. Those who saw the accident expected to see him crushed beneath the wheels, but fortunately he happened to alight in a sitting position on the brake beam of the car, which saved his life. He lost no time in pulling himself up from his low and rather perilous seat, and will not undertake the trick again, if he knows himself. —Hudson Gazette.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Ware, of Grand Rapids, were in Tecumseh for Christmas.

Mr. and Mrs. Z. Cook of Raisin, J. D. Tallman and his son Zach, are spending the holiday's with relatives at Oak Park Ill.

Arthur Carr of Dundee, son of editor Carr, was in town Christmas day and remained over to attend the Christmas Dance.

D. E. Soper of Newaygo spent Christmas tide, as the guest of Mr. McCowen's family. Dan is rushing business as usual in his town.

Wm. Hayden's hospitable mansion was the scene of a family gathering on Christmas day. Every chick and child was at home, excepting Levi.

The Hyers Colored Comedy Company of talented colored artists will open an engagement of two nights at the opera house, commencing Friday evening, December 27.

The fifth annual Christmas party which was given at the Opera House last evening eclipsed all former efforts in that direction. To call it a success would hardly be doing the affair full justice. "Isn't it a splendid party, though?" was the exclamation of everyone who attended.

The concert given by Tony Leon's orchestra, before the grand march was formed, was a fine musical entertainment, of itself, and called forth many compliments. The decorations about the hall were more elaborate than usual and were arranged with exquisite taste. The grand march contained 41 couple and fifty dance tickets were sold altogether. The galleries were crowded to overflowing until a late hour. The dancers of Tecumseh were out in force and the surrounding towns were all represented.

As we are overcrowded with local matter today we are compelled to abridge this report, but we can sum it up in these words: Socially, financially, artistically and musically it was a grand party and could not well be excelled. That tells the whole story.

FRANKLIN UNION LITERARY AND LYCEUM.

The above sodiety met at the residence of Mr. E. J. Whelan, Dec. 20th. There was a much larger attendance than was expected considering the condition of the roads, and all felt well paid for their trouble. After the miscellaneous business the following program was carried out:

Inst. Music—Mr. and Mrs. Witherell
Dia.—Mrs. A. B. Wisner and Rena Allen.
Dec.—Ed. Spaulding.
Dia.—Dora Davenport and Anna Allen.
Music—Mr. and Mrs. Witherell.
Mrs. Davenport, of Jackson county, rendered some very excellent instrumental music.

The main feature of the evening was the debate which lasted from 9 to 11:30. Question, Resolved, that the people of the present time are more open to corruption than at any former time. The question was well handled by both sides and was decided unanimously in favor of the Neg.

The next meeting will be held at Mrs. A. B. Wisner's, Jan. 3rd. The young people will do the debating. Question, Resolved that the Patrons of Industry have done more harm than good. Leading speakers are Clarence Wisner, Aff., and Alton Whelan, Neg. A good program has been prepared for the occasion.

TECUMSEH, MICH., DEC. 26, 1889

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

We cannot remember
A softer December.

Wm. Starr and son are home from Sturgis.

Wm. Hendershot, of Leslie, was in town Tuesday.

Wendle Bush, of Brooklyn, N. Y., is in the village.

Wilson Jordan, of Jackson, is visiting in the village.

Miss Mabel Hayden is home from Detroit for the holidays.

Mrs. R. A. Heesen went to South Bend, Tuesday, for a two weeks visit.

C. H. Hopkins will pass the holidays at Battle Creek and Goshen, Ind.

The schools of the village closed last Friday for a vacation of two weeks.

We surrender all of our available space this week to Christmas reading.

The blow of last Saturday night damaged several shade trees about the village.

Mrs. Judge Stacy has gone to Elgin, Ill., to spend the holidays with her son George.

E. A. Tribou has been confined to the house for several days with an attack of rheumatism.

Remember the Southern Michigan Poultry show which will be held at Adrian, Jan. 7 to 10.

John B. Whelan and family, of Detroit, ate their Christmas dinner with Mr. Whelan's parents.

C. F. Patterson has been taking a brief respite from work, visiting friends at Cleveland, O.

Mr. and Mrs. S. A. James and Mr. and Mrs. Alf. W. James, of Detroit, are spending Christmas week at the old home.

Will Hayden and Will Bennett have purchased Garlinghouse Bros. livery business and will take possession the first of January.

The experience of the last three weeks has demonstrated the necessity of a good pavement on Chicago street, between Pearl and Ottawa streets.

Harry Hanford, of Cincinnati, is spending holiday week with friends in Tecumseh and Franklin. He will also visit Detroit before returning home.

C. H. Hopkins has completed the portraits of the late Jonathan Hall, and Mrs. Hall, upon which he has been at work for some time. They are two elegant pictures.

E. H. Custer, of Monroe, arrived in town Tuesday, and will spend the holiday season with Lieut. Elliott Gray's family. Mr. Custer's health is quite good, notwithstanding his advanced age.

Representative Allen has introduced a pension bill in congress, making the fact of service for 60 days after enlistment conclusive proof as to the physical soundness of a soldier at the date of enlistment.

The publisher of the Household evidently believes in encouraging matrimony, as will be seen by his offer in another column to send a wedding present to every bride who may apply for the same. See his offer headed "To Young Housekeepers."

Scribner's Magazine for January begins the fourth year and seventh volume with the promise that during the current year it will follow its well-approved course of printing articles of interest in themselves, by writers who really have something to say.

B. L. Baxter is improving so rapidly from his late injury that he was down town last Tuesday. He is obliged to carry his arm in a sling, and it will be some time before he will be able to handle the reins again. The accident however doesn't interfere in the least with his capacity to tell a story.

Hannibal Osborn shipped a fine lot of mammoth turkeys last week. One specimen bought of Granville Mills, of Macon, weighed, when dressed, 43 pounds. It fairly made a man's grinders quiver to look upon it. It was the largest specimen of turkeydom we have seen this fall. Mr. Mills turned off a big flock of very large fowls this month.

The Universalists of Michigan will have a summer resort of their own. A committee was appointed at the state convention held last October and they have purchased a track of forest on west side of Old Mission peninsula in Grand Traverse bay. A meeting will be held at Lansing Tuesday, Dec. 31, to complete an organization and make arrangements for opening the resort next summer.

Dr. Bennett can be consulted at the Lilley House on Wednesday, Jan. 1, and every four weeks thereafter for the year 1890. The results already given in years past fully prove his ability to do what he claims by his new method of treating chronic troubles. He gets them well and they remain so. "Simply cures them." Do you doubt it go and get names of those recently cured, then judge for yourself.

Miss Mary Hosmer went to Freeport, Ill. to spend Christmas.

The last annual report of the Postmaster General is at hand.

Frank Hall and Will Baker, of Detroit, are home for the holidays.

A. W. Haight is among the prodigals who returned home for Christmas.

Geo. Knapp, of Mt. Pleasant, is spending the holidays with his parents.

Read the new announcement of Wood Crane & Wood on the eighth page.

A subscription to the HERALD for 1890 would be a fine New Year's gift to a friend.

Miss Clara Waldron, of Cadillac, is spending the holiday vacation with her parents.

Geo. Gainsley, of Dundee, took in the Christmas dance at the opera house last evening.

Mrs. Chas. Aten fell down stairs last Friday and received injuries which will confine her to the house for some time.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Raynor Lilley, of Indianapolis, Ind., came home Tuesday to spend Christmas at the old home.

There is talk of extending Hayden's side track north to Brewer's foundry, to accomodate that thriving industry, thus giving it better shipping facilities.

Holiday prices will prevail at the opera house during the Hyers Comedy Company engagement, Dec. 27 and 28. The admission to all parts of the house only 25 cents.

The quilt which Mrs. Dunmore, of Dundee, canvassed the village for a few weeks ago, was taken by No. 20, which was held by Mr. Friedenburg, of Monroe.

Mr. C. E. White, the general agent of the Security Building and Loan Association is in town a few days, for the purpose of organizing a local board. He has just established a strong local board at Adrian.

Rev. F. Adkins is circulating a subscription paper to raise $1000 to liquidate a debt on the church. About two thirds of the amount is already pledged and he expects to bring it all up before New Years.

Homer Bickford of Raisin sold to Birdsall and Glenn the other day two yearlings, which were remarkably fat and plump. The eight quarters were hung on the rack together on Christmas morning, and were enough to excite the envy of an epicure.

We have received the proceedings of the last annual meeting of the Michigan Press association from the secretary, Fred Slocum, of Caro. It is a very neat job and sets forth the salient features of the meeting very fully.

Our thanks are due to A. R. Pardington for a copy of the second annual report of the Methodist Episcopal Hospital, of Brooklyn. N. Y. This institution is growing into a very large establishment. Arthur is a member of the faculty now.

The Baptist Sunday school had a pleasant time on Tuesday evening. A bountiful supper was served and old Santa Claus appeared in person and distributed pop-corn to the children. There was a large attendance and both young and old entered into the spirit of the occasion with equal zest.

We have received a copy of Mabley and Company's annual for 1890. It is an elegant pamphlet, gotten up in the highest style of the printer's and engraver's art, and giving a brief description of the various departments of that mammoth mercantile establishment.

A Sunday School Concert was given at the Presbyterian Church last Sabbath evening. A literary and musical program of much merit was presented which was listened to by a large audience. The services began promptly at six o'clock and were about an hour and a half in length.

The Christmas dance at Armory hall on Tuesday evening, was an unqualified success. Sixty-four dance tickets were sold, which was about all the size of the room would justify. The new Tecumseh orchestra, composed of Prof. Skinner, Chas. Skinner, Jr., John Southwick and Frank Teachout furnished the music, and it is needless to say that the music filled the bill fully. Considering the modesty of the charge, it was a splendid party.

Will Osborn is home from Chicago.

Miss Linda Hall is seriously ill with typhoid fever.

Wm. Jordan and wife are visiting in Grand Rapids.

Louis Hardenburg is home from Hillsdale college for the holiday vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Dewey, of the Agricultural college, are home for the holidays.

Sheriff J. E. Fessenden, of Mt. Pleasant, is visiting his daughter, Mrs. E. A. Wilson.

Mrs. Carter, mother of Mrs. N. C. Arnold, died at her home in Clinton township, last Tuesday night.

Misses May DeWolfe and Allie Satterthwaite returned home from Brooklyn, N. Y., last Tuesday.

The temperance ladies will not give their tea, on Friday of this week, on account of the illness of Lena Hall.

The lucky numbers that drew the smoking sets at Baker & Hall's Tuesday night were: 647, 954, 176, 572, 96, 792, 957, 388, 469, 118.

A New Year's Party will be given at Cheever's hall, the old G. A. R. hall, on Tuesday evening, Dec. 31st. Bill only 50c. Good music will be provided.

S. B. Hyers' Colored Comedy Company at the opera house Friday and Saturday, December 27 and 28. Ladies admitted free the first night when accompanied by gentlemen.

Mrs. Will C. Blood, Grace M. Spafford, of Battle Creek, and Uncle Charley, of Manitou, partook of the turkey at Geo. S. Spafford's, and will spend a few days with friends and relatives in and about town.

W. W. Marsh has purchased a new engine and boiler, which he uses to cut up meat. Farmers can bring all the meat they desire and he will cut it to order and they can carry it home with them. He has a dandy market, comple throughout and his customers appreciate his enterprise.

Sometimes, if not often, it pays to chew tobacco. For instance—W. L. Marshall, of Medina twp., was home a few days ago ruminating on things in general when he took out a sample of his favorite Hero Plug, and bit into it for a "chaw." His teeth came in contact with something hard—it made him mad and he vowed he would never use Hero Plug again. He examined it more closely and found a tag, and thereon read "Send this to Moreland Bros. & Crane, Adrian, and get a prize." Mr. Marshall obeyed the instructions, and back to him came a half-dozen silver knives of the Rogers make. Marshall now swears by the Hero Plug, and truly rolls it as a sweet morsel under his tongue.—Morenci Observer.

Ring! Ring!
Christmas Chimes!
Holly shines on sheltered hills,
Snow the cedar thicket fills,
Through the world a message thrills—
"Peace, good will to men."
Ring, through all the leafless land;
Chime, where hut or mansions stand,
Christendom with outstretched hand
Yule-tide greets again.

Ring! Ring!
Christmas Chimes!
Mistletoe's rare olive sheen,
Clasps the fir's fringed branches green,
In the heavens the Star serene
Shines in blessing down.
Beams with holy light, to show
To the restless tide below
Peace and gladness forth—for so
Heaven its own shall crown.

Ring! Ring!
Christmas Chimes!
Yule fires glow from hearth and hall,
Lights gleam out from torches tall,
Ringing carols round us fall,
Mirth and gladness reign;
Christmas joy be yours, good friends
Holly bough with palm-spray blends,
And His peace, the Christ-child sends
Through his fair domain!

A CHRISTMAS THOUGHT.

The Lesson of the Day Which All Should Learn.

There is no reason why we may not all rejoice— all of us—Jew, Christian, infidel. It may or may not be the case that nearly two thousand years ago there was a babe born which was laid in a manger, and over whose coming even the very stars sang together in their joy. Whether a reality or not, it is one of those beautiful things which does the world no harm, and, on the other hand, is something about which the better qualities of human nature may rally. Even if it be a fiction, it is one of those creations which not only do no injury, but which mankind is the better for having known. Whatever may have been the use to which sectarians have put the teachings of Jesus Christ, there can be no question that what He taught, if followed, would make this world vastly different from what it is at the present time. Such a course would give us an era in which there would be no war, no hatreds, no unkindness. There would be peace from one quarter of the globe to the other. But such can not be; and all that remains for erring human nature is to make the best of the situation, and, on such a day as this, to drop all animosities, and, for the moment, make ourselves as like as may be the model which He afforded to human kind.

THE CHRISTMAS TREE.

Bringing in the Evergreen from the Forests' Depths.

While a large part of the enjoyment of the Christmas time comes with the loading of the tree with the presents and decorating its boughs with pretty things, there is a peculiar fascination in getting the tree out of the woods. The snow-laden trees in the calm depths of the forest, whose silence is only broken by the flutter of some startled bird discovered by watchful Carlo's bark, look weird and ghostly in their white mantles. The snow itself seems different from that found on the plain, the woods give back with hollow sound the echoes of father's axe as he chops the shapely evergreen, and you grasp his hand [illegible] shoulders his burden and [illegible] homeward journey. The [illegible] of the Christmas tree brings [illegible] sensations to children, at least [illegible] to the writer long years and years ago.

Christmas in Midsummer.

Wouldn't you think it funny to see Christmas come in the middle of the summer, to have no ice and snow on the ground, and nothing to remind you that it was winter? Well, away off on the other side of the world Christmas does come in the middle of summer. In Australia on Christmas morning the children say, "Oh, dear! how hot it is. I do wish Christmas came in the winter-time." For when it is winter here it is summer there, and when you are lying under a shady tree in July, the Australian children are running around with winter clothes on, blowing on their fingers to keep them warm.

But whether it comes in summer or winter, wherever the English language is spoken, it is a time of jollity and plenty; of tender feelings and kindly gifts; of "peace on earth and good will to men."

The picture on the back of a $10 bill would make an excellent Christmas chromo for a poor family.

Big-footed people have one consolation. Their stockings will hold more on Christmas.

CHRISTMAS IN GERMANY.

How the Holidays Are Spent in the Fatherland.

Though the holidays be at the same time the world over, yet I do not think says a correspondent of the Cleveland Leader, that there are two nations who spend them in the same manner.

I well remember my first Christmas in America; and I must say that the American mode of celebrating it did not strike me very favorably at the time.

In Germany the people generally make preparations three or four weeks in advance; such as knitting, sewing, etc. About a week before the festivities, begins the baking of pies, cakes, and, best of all, what is called "huzelnbrot" (dried pear bread), of which they always bake enough to last till after New Years. On the day before Christmas there always seems to be a certain mysterious air about every household; that is, as far as the younger members are concerned. There is something going on in a certain room, but they can not find out what. All they do know is that "Kris Kringle" is around, and that they must be very good, else he won't bring them anything.

The ornaments of the tree generally consist of gilded nuts, candy figures, wax tapers, etc. On the top is the figure of an angel holding aloft a star, surrounded by tapers, and on the end of almost every branch is also a taper. Presents are never hung upon the tree; each child has a basket, which is placed upon a table in the "family" room, ready for Santa Claus. As soon as the children have gone to bed the tree is brought in, set upon a large table, and the baskets placed around it. This done, all but the parents retire. Then comes the distribution of the presents. First, the baskets are nearly filled with nuts, apples, and candies, then come other presents, and if the basket is not large enough to hold them all they are placed around it.

I well remember how early we youngsters used to wake up on Christmas morning—about 4 o'clock. It was almost impossible to keep us in bed and, then, how we would speculate as to our "Christgesheak." We used to think that the time to get up would never come.

About 5 o'clock a. m. "der vater" would be heard in the family room trying to make a fire, but somehow the fire never would burn on Christmas morning: anyway, the room never would be warm when we'd get there—perhaps, though, we couldn't wait for it to get warm. Presently "die mutter" brings a lamp into the bed room, which is the signal for a general jump. Such a rush!

I remember, on one occasion, I was in such a hurry to get dressed that I put on my vest without knowing it, and ran around the room yelling like a savage because I couldn't find it.

At last we are all ready. The door of the family room is opened and in we rush pell-mell, but stop suddenly, for the blazing Christmas tree blinds us so that we cannot distinguish anything for a few moments. As soon, however, as our eyes become accustomed to the light, there is a rush for the baskets.

After everything has been examined, and as soon as "Paterfamilias" can make himself heard, he commands silence. Some one goes to the piano and strikes up the old and well known Christmas anthem, "Ehre sei Gott in der Hohe," after which the head of the family offers up a prayer of thanks for many blessings received.

By this time it is daylight, and each attends to his or her household duty the same as any other day. Breakfast over, the children don their "Sunday go to meetin's," take up their basket and start off to grandpa's to get their Christmas present. From there they go to their sponsor's upon the same errand. It is an old custom in some parts of Germany for sponsors to give to their—what shall I call them—"sponsorial charges?" a Christmas present until they are 14 years of age.

At 10:30 a. m. the church bells ring forth their merry Christmas summons, which none that are able fail to answer. As you go along, smiles and happy faces greet you on every side, and such a happy congregation as one meets there, all peace and good will. It is a glorious day, this birthday of our Savior, and it makes my heart glad to look back upon the time when I was among them. At 2 o'clock p. m. service is again held.

About dark the "Christbaum" is lighted and Christmas carols are sung, after which the presentation of the children's Christmas gifts to the parents takes place.

Everything is quiet out on the streets; no quarrels, no drunkenness. Everywhere "peace on earth and good will to men."

"Now, Johnny, you've had a merry Christmas, and you must be good till next Christmas to pay for it." "Oh, yes, of course, be good. I don't believe you can hire me to be good a whole year for a tin horse and a story book just like what Bill Jones was going to trade me for three marbles. Not much."

A Sound Legal Opinion.

E. Bainbridge, Munday Esq., County Atty., Clay Co., Tex. says: "Have used Electric Bitters with most happy results. My brother also was very low with Malarial Fever and Jaundice, but was cured by timely use of this medicine. Am satisfied Electric Bitters saved his life."

Mr. D. L. Wilcoxson, of Horse Cave, Ky., adds a like testimony, saying: He positively believes he would have died, had it not been for Electric Bitters.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 23 day of December in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of David C. Boyd, Minor.

On reading and filing the petition of John B. Boyd, guardian of said minor, praying for the allowance of his first annual account as such guardian; and for such other order and decree as to this court shall seem proper.

It is Ordered, That Monday, the 30th day of December, 1889, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition; and that the next-of-kin of said minor, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

CLEOPATRA.

Being an Account of the Fall and Vengeance of Harmachis, the Royal Egyptian.

"Why placest thou thy hand within thy robe?" she asked presently; for, indeed, I clutched the dagger's hilt. "Is thy heart stirred?"

"Yea, O Queen," I said, "it beats high."

She gave no answer, but once more made pretense to read, and the while she watched me.

I took counsel with myself. How should I do the hateful deed? If I flung myself upon her now she would see me and scream and struggle. Nay, I must wait a chance.

"The auguries are favorable, then, Harmachis!" she said at length, though this she must have guessed at.

"Yes, O Queen," I answered.

"'Tis well," and she cast the writing on the marble. "The ships shall sail. For, good or bad, I am weary of weighing chances."

"This is a heavy matter, O Queen," I said. "I had wished to show upon what circumstance I base my forecast."

"Nay, not so, Harmachis; I have wearied of the ways of stars. Thou hast prophesied; that is enough for me; for, doubtless, being honest, thou hast written honestly. Therefore, save thou thy reasons and we'll be merry. What shall we do? I could dance to thee—none there are who can dance so well—but it would scarce be queenly. Nay, I have it: I will sing." And, leaning forward, she raised herself, and, bending the harp toward her, struck some wandering chords. Then her low voice broke out in perfect and most sweet song.

AND NOW HER LIPS MET MINE.

And thus she sang:

Night on the sea, and night upon the sky,
And music in our hearts, we floated there,
Lulled by the low sea voices, thou and I,
And the wind's kisses in my cloudy hair;
And thou didst gaze on me and call me fair—
Enfolded by the starry robe of night—
And then thy singing thrilled upon the air,
Voice of the heart's desire and Love's delight.

Adrift, with starlit skies above,
With starlit seas below,
We move with all the suns that move,
With all the seas that flow;
For, bond or free, Earth, Sky and Sea
Wheel with one circling will,
And thy heart drifteth on to me,
And only Time stands still.

Between two shores of Death we drift,
Behind are things forgot:
Before the tide is driving swift
To lands beholden not.
Above, the sky is fair and cold;
Below, the moaning sea
Sweeps o'er the loves that were of old,
But, O Love! kiss thou me.

Ah, lonely are the ocean ways,
And dangerous the deep,
And frail the fairy bark that strays
Above the seas asleep!
Ah, toil no more at sail nor oar;
We drift, or bond or free;
On yon far shore the breakers roar,
But, O Love! kiss thou me.

And ever as thou sangest I drew near,
Then sudden silence heard our hearts that beat,
For now there was an end of doubt and fear,
Now passions filled my soul and led my feet;
Then silent didst thou rise, thy love to meet,
Who, sinking on thy breast, knew naught but thee,
And in the happy night I kissed thee, Sweet,
Ah Sweet! between the starlight and the sea.

The last echoes of her rich notes floated down the chamber and slowly died away; but in my heart they rolled on and on. I have heard among the woman singers at Abouthis voices more perfect than the voice of Cleopatra, but never have I heard one so thrilling or so sweet with passion's honey-notes. And indeed 'twas not the voice alone; 'twas the perfumed chamber wherein was set all that could move the sense; 'twas the passion of the thought and words, and the surpassing grace and loveliness of that most royal woman who sang them. For, as she sang, almost did I seem to think that we twain were indeed floating alone with the night, upon the wide, dark, summer sea. And when she ceased to touch the harp, and, rising, suddenly stretched out her arms toward me, and, with the last low notes of song yet quivering upon her lips, let fall the wonder of her eyes upon my eyes, almost did she draw me to her. But I remembered, and would not.

"Hast thou, then, no word of thanks for my poor singing, Harmachis?" she said at length.

"Yea, O Queen," I answered, speaking very low, for my voice was choked; "but thy songs are not good for the sons of men to hear—of a truth they overwhelm me!"

"Nay, Harmachis; for thee there is no fear," she said, laughing softly—"seeing that I know how far thy thoughts are set from woman's beauty and the common weakness of thy sex. With cold iron we may safely toy."

I thought within myself that coldest iron can be brought to whitest heat if but the fire be fierce enough. But I said naught, and, though my hand trembled, once more I grasped the dagger's hilt, and, wild with fear at my own weakness, set myself to find a means to slay her while yet my sense remained.

"Come hither, Harmachis," she went on, in her softest voice. "Come, sit by me, and we will talk together; for I have much to tell thee." And she made place for me at her side upon the silken seat.

And I, thinking that I might the more swiftly strike, rose and seated myself some little way from her, while, flinging back her head, she gazed on me with her slumberous eyes.

Now was my occasion, for her white throat and breast were bare, and, with a mighty effort, once again I lifted my hand to clutch the dagger hilt. But, more quick than thought, she caught my fingers with her own and gently held them.

"Why lookest thou so wildly, Harmachis?" she said. "Art sick?"

"Ay, sick indeed," I gasped.

"Then lean thou upon the cushions and rest thee," she answered, still holding my hand, wherefrom the strength had fled. "The fit will surely pass. Too long hast thou labored with thy stars. How soft is the night air that flows from yonder casement heavy with the breath of lilies! Hark to the whisper of the sea lapping against the rocks, that, though faint it is, yet, being so strong, doth almost drown the quick, cool fall of yonder mountain. List to Philomel; how sweet from a full heart of love she sings her message to her dear! Surely 'tis a lovely night, and most beautiful is nature's music sung with a hundred voices from wind and trees and birds and ocean's wrinkled lips, and yet sung all to tune. Listen, Harmachis; something have I guessed concerning thee. Thou, too, art of a royal race; no humble blood pours in those veins of thine. Surely such a shoot could spring but from the stock of Princes! What! gazest thou at the leaf mark on my breast? 'Twas pricked there in honor of Osiris, whom with thee I worship. See!"

"Let me hence," I groaned, striving to rise; but all my strength had gone.

"Nay, not yet awhile. Thou wouldst not leave me yet! Thou canst not leave me yet. Harmachis, hast thou never loved?"

"Nay, nay, O Queen! What have I to do with love? Let me hence! I am faint—fordone!"

"Never to have loved—'tis strange! Never to have known some woman-heart beat all in tune to thine—never to have seen the eyes of thy adored a-swim with passion's tears as she sighed her vows upon thy breast! Never to have loved!—never to have lost thyself in the mystery of another's soul; nor to have learned how Nature can overcome our naked loneliness, and with the golden web of love of twain weave one identity! Why, 'tis never to have lived, Harmachis!"

And ever as she murmured she drew nearer to me, till at last, with a long, sweet sigh, she flung one white arm about my neck, and gazing upon me with blue, unfathomable eyes, smiled her dark, slow smile, that, like an opening flower, revealed beauty within beauty hidden. Nearer she bent her queenly form and still more near—now her perfumed breath played upon my hair, and now her lips met mine!

And, woe is me! in that kiss, more deadly and more strong than the embrace of death, were forgotten Isis, my Heavenly Hope, Oaths, Honor, Country, Friends, all things save that Cleopatra clasped me in her arms and called me Love and Lord.

"Now pledge me," she murmured—"pledge me one cup of wine in token of thy love."

I took the draught, and deep I drank; and then too late I knew that it was drugged.

Back I fell upon the couch, and, though my senses still were with me, I could neither speak nor rise.

But Cleopatra, bending over me, drew the dagger from my robe.

"I've won!" she cried, shaking back her long hair, "I've won, and for the stake of Egypt—why, 'twas a game worth playing! With this dagger, then, thou wouldst have slain me, O my Royal rival, whose myrmidons e'en now are gathered at my palace gate? Art still awake? Now, what hinders me that I should not plunge it to thy heart?"

I heard and feebly pointed to my breast, for fain was I to die. She drew herself to the full of her imperial height, and the great knife glittered in her hand. Down it came till its edges pricked my flesh.

"I'VE WON!" SHE CRIED.

"Nay," she cried again, and cast it from her, "too well I like thee. Pity 'twere to slay such a man! I give thee thy life. Live on, lost Pharaoh! Live on, poor fallen Thing, blasted by a women's wit! Live on, Harmachis—to adorn my triumph!"

Then sight left me; and in my ears I only heard the song of the nightingale, the murmur of the sea, and the music of Cleopatra's laugh. And as I sank away the sound of that low laugh still followed me into the land of sleep, and still it follows me through life to death.

CHAPTER XV.

OF THE AWAKING OF HARMACHIS; OF THE SIGHT OF DEATH; OF THE COMING OF CLEOPATRA, AND OF HER MANY COMFORTABLE WORDS.

MORE I awoke; 'twas to find myself in my own chamber. I started up. Surely I, too, had dreamed a dream. It could be nothing but a dream. It could not be that I woke to know myself a traitor! That the opportunity had gone forever! That I had betrayed the cause, and that last night those brave men, headed by my uncle, had waited in vain at the outer gate! That Egypt from Abu unto Athu was even now waiting—waiting in vain! Nay, whatever else might be, this could not be! Oh, 'twas an awful dream that I had dreamed! A second such would slay a man! 'Twere better to die than to face such another vision sent from hell. But though the thing was naught but a hateful fantasy of a mind e'erstrained, where was I now? Where was I now! I should be in the Alabaster Hall, waiting till Charmion came forth.

Where was I? And, O ye gods! what was that dreadful thing whose shape was as the shape of a man!—that thing draped in blood-stained white and huddled in a hideous heap even at the foot of the couch whereon I seemed to lie!

With a shriek I sprang at it, as a lion springs, and struck with all my strength. Heavily fell the blow, and beneath its weight the thing rolled over upon its side. Half mad with terror, I rent away the white covering; and there, his knees bound beneath his hanging jaw, was the naked body of a man—and that man the Roman Captain Paulus! There he lay, through his heart a dagger—my dagger, handled with the sphinx of gold!—and pinned by its blade to his broad breast a scroll, and, on the scroll, writing in the Roman character. I drew near and read, and this was the writing:

"Greeting, Harmachis! I was that Roman Paulus whom thou didst suborn. See now how blessed are traitors!"

Sick and faint I staggered back from the sight of that white corpse stained with its own blood. Sick and faint I staggered back, till the wall stayed me, while without the birds sang a merry greeting to the day. So it was no dream, and I was lost! lost! lost!

I thought of my aged father Amenemhat. Yea, the vision of him flashed into my mind, as he would be when they came to tell him his son's shame and the ruin of his hopes. I thought of that patriot priest, my uncle Seps, waiting the long night through for the signal which never came. Ah, and another thought followed swift! How would it go with them! I was not the only traitor. I, too, had been betrayed. By whom? By yonder Paulus, perchance. If

"SO MY MESSENGER HAS FOUND YOU!"

'twere Paulus, he knew but little of those who conspired with me. But in my robe had been the secret lists. O Amen! they were gone! and the fate of Paulus would be the fate of all the patriots of Egypt. And at this thought my mind gave way. I sank and swooned even where I stood.

My sense came back to me and lengthening shadows told me that it was afternoon. I staggered to my feet; there still was the corpse of Paulus, keeping its awful watch above me. Desperately I ran to the door. 'Twas barred, and without I heard the tramp of sentinels. As I stood, they challenged and grounded their spears. Then the bolts shot back, the door opened, and radiant, clad in Royal attire, came the conquering Cleopatra. Alone she came, and the door was shut behind her. I stood like one distraught; but she swept on till she was face to face with me.

"Greeting, Harmachis," she said, smiling sweetly. "So my messenger has found thee!" and she pointed to the corpse of Paulus. "Pah! he has an ugly look. Ho! guards!"

The door was opened, and two armed Gauls stepped across the threshold.

"Take away this carrion," said Cleopatra, "and fling it to the kites. Stay, draw that dagger from his traitor breast." The men bowed low, and the knife, rusted red with blood, was dragged from the heart of Paulus and laid upon the table. Then they seized him by the head and body and staggered thence, and I heard their heavy footfalls as they bore him down the stairs.

"Methinks, Harmachis, thou art in an evil cause!" she said, when the sound of the footfalls had died away. "How strangely doth the wheel of Fortune turn! But for that traitor," and she nodded toward the door by which the corpse of Paulus had been carried, "I should now be as ill a thing to look on as he is, and the red rust on yonder knife would have been gathered from my heart."

So it was Paulus who had betrayed me.

"Ay," she went on, "and when thou camest to me last night, well I knew that thou camest to slay. When, time upon time, thou didst place thy hand within thy robe, I knew that it grasped a dagger-hilt, and thou wast gathering thy courage to the deed which little thou didst love to do. Oh! it was a strange, wild hour well worth the living, and greatly, from moment to moment, did I wonder which of us twain would conquer, as we matched guile with guile and force to force.

"Yea, Harmachis, the guards tramp before thy door, but be not deceived. Knew I not that I do hold thee to me by bonds more strong than prison chains; knew I not that I am hedged from ill at thy hands by a fence of honor more hard for thee to pass than all the spears of all my legions, thou hadst been dead ere now, Harmachis. See, here is thy knife." And she handed me the dagger. "Now slay me if thou canst." And she drew near and tore open the bosom of her robe, and stood waiting with calm eyes.

"Thou canst not slay me," she went on, "for there are things, as I know well, that no man—no such man as thou art—may do and live; and this is the chief of them—to slay the woman who is all his own. Nay, stay thy hand! Turn not that dagger against thy breast; for if me thou mayst not slay, by how much the more mayst thou not slay thyself, O thou forsworn Priest of Isis! Art thou, then, so eager to face that outraged Majesty in Amenti? With what eyes, thinkest thou, will the Heavenly Mother look upon her son who, shamed in all things and false to his most sacred vow, comes to greet Her, his life-blood on his hands? Where, then, will be the space for thy atonement—if, indeed, thou mayst atone!"

Then I could bear no more, for my heart was broken within me. Alas! it was too true—I dared not die. To such a pass was I come that I did not even dare to die! I flung myself upon the couch and wept—wept tears of blood and anguish.

But Cleopatra came to me, and, seating herself beside me, she strove to comfort me, throwing her arms about my neck.

"Nay, Love, look up," she said. "All is not lost for thee, nor am I angered against thee. We did play a mighty game; but, as I warned thee, I matched my woman's magic against thine, and I have conquered. But I will be open with thee. Both as Queen and woman thou hast my pity—ay, and more; nor do I love to see thee plunged in sorrow. Well was it and right that thou shouldst strive to win back that throne my father seized, and the ancient liberty of Egypt. Myself as a lawful Queen had done the same, nor shrunk from the deed of darkness whereto I was sworn. Therein, then, thou hast my sympathy, that goes ever out to what is great and bold. Well is it also that thou shouldst grieve over the greatness of thy fall. Therein, then, as woman—as loving woman—thou hast my sympathy. Nor is all lost. The plan was foolish—for, as I hold, Egypt never might have stood alone; for though thou hadst won the crown and country, as without a doubt thou must have done, yet was there the Roman to be reckoned with. And for thy hope learn this: Little am I known. There is no heart in this wide land that beats with a truer love for ancient Khem than does this heart of mine; nay, not thine own, Harmachis. But heavily have I been shackled heretofore, for wars, rebellions, envies, plots have hemmed me in on every side, so that I might not serve my people as I would. But thou, Harmachis, shalt show me how. Thou shalt be my counselor and my love. Is it a little thing, O Harmachis, to have won the heart of Cleopatra, that heart—fie on thee!—that thou wouldst have stilled? Ay, thou shalt unite me to my people, and together will we reign, linking thus in one the new kingdom and the old. Thus do all things work for good—ay, for the very best—and thus, by another and a gentler road, shalt thou climb to Pharaoh's throne.

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membranes of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic researches, however, has proven this to be a fact, and result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to the applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N. B.—For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet of this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. VINEGAR BITTERS

Grandest Modern Discovery.

Triumph of Pharmacy.

The only true practical

ELIXIR OF LIFE AND HEALTH.

Is one that promotes digestion, improves the appetite, cleanses the liver, purifies the blood, and stimulates brain and nerves without injurious reaction, and one that may be taken alike by adult or infant. Profane compounds, made of vile rum or bad whiskey, sweetened or flavored, under the titles of bitters, tonics, &c., produce effects far worse than the disease for which they are taken.

Vinegar Bitters is a pure tonic, a nervine without being narcotic, a blood purifier without poison a liver tonic without purging, and above all, a life-giving stimulant without alcohol. The only medicine with such powers in the world.

A GENUINE TEMPERANCE BEVERAGE,

far surpassing alcohol in any shape as a tonic, and it might be called

since it stimulates, invigorates and regulates digestion, nutrition, secretion, excretion, respiration, and all the functions whereby life is maintained—we literally take in vitality in spoonsful.

It is not too much to assert that the equal of Vinegar Bitters does not exist, and no counterpart or compound with similar virtues has ever been known.

CALIFORNIA,

is remarkable for nothing else, would be immortalized by the production of the medicinal fruits, roots and herbs of which this Bitters is composed. Many of them used by the Indians and the medical profession in the treatment of chills and fevers, rheumatism, catarrh consumption, neuralgia headache, liver complaint, kidney disease, jaundice, gout, piles, boils, skin diseases, &c., &c., too numerous to mention, but easily understood when the action of the Bitters on the vital functions is remembered. The discovery was partly accidental but the present

PERFECT BITTERS IS THE RESULT OF SCIENCE.

Millions of sufferers have gratefully and gladly endorsed, during the past quarter of a century, the wonderful success of this

PHENOMINAL TONIC OF THE WORLD.

In order to meet every probable demand, two formulas of the same ingredients are now put up.

THE OLD STYLE IS STRONGER, SLIGHTLY BITTER AND MORE CATHARTIC.

THE NEW STYLE, PLEASANT TO THE TASTE AND EXPRESSLY ADAPTED TO DELICATE WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

REMEMBER,

There is no disease of low vitality, debility of functions, or nervous prostration for which

VINEGAR BITTERS IS NOT CURATIVE,

THE DEADLY MICROBE AND OMNIPRESENT BACTERIA

in malarial diseases cholera, consumption, internal diseases, &c., and so great is its power as a germicide that it is an

UNEQUALLED VERMIFUGE.

A book could be written of its virtues, and another of testimonials but it is only necessary to remember its general action upon the liver, blood, brain and nerves, to realize its use in a majority of the ills that flesh is heir to, and that no family should ever be without a bottle of

FOR SALE BY

J. WILSON & SON,
TECUMSEH.

N. Y. TRIBUNE FOR 1890.

During 1890 the New York Tribune will be greatly improved in quality and made more lively, fresh and readable than ever before in its history. Among the special contributors during 1890 will be Andrew Carnegie, Gail Hamilton, Terence V. Powderly, Chauncey M. Depew, Senator John J. Ingalls, Mrs. John A. Logan, Rev. Dr. John R. Paxton and others. Other contributors will be announced hereafter. The articles will cost many thousands of dollars and appear in The Tribune only.

SOLDIERS' STORIES.

The Tribune will also print, in addition to its regular G. A. R. and S. of V. page, a number of entertaining stories of actual experience in the war, not less than 25 in number, each a page of The Tribune in length, by privates and officers of the Union, of a rank not higher than that of captain. Veterans are invited to contribute to this series of stories. Every tale accepted will be paid for at regular newspaper rates. Prizes of $250, $150 and $75 will be paid for the best three. Manuscripts must be enclosed to "The Tribune, New York," and inscribed "Soldiers' Department."

PAPERS ON FARMING.

In addition to our regular and extremely able agricultural department (two pages a week), The Tribune will print a number of long and carefully prepared articles on particular branches of farming, written by practical experts. Farmers who want to make money out of their farms must read these special contributions in The Tribune. The best Tribune ever seen will be supplied to readers during the coming year. A large number of desirable and novel premiums are added to our list, and they are offered at terms which will enable our readers to obtain them practically at wholesale rates. Send 2 cent stamp for our 30 page catalogue.

VALUABLE PRIZES.

One hundred special prizes will be distributed on May 1, 1890, among the club agents who have, up to that date, sent in the largest 100 clubs of local weekly and semi-weekly subscribers. These prizes will include a $700 piano, a $200 cabinet organ, a $150 solitaire diamond, a free trip to New York, with expenses there paid, etc., etc., etc., being worth a total of $2,440. Prizes are fully described in our new 20 page catalogue; send 2 cent stamp for a copy. Sample copies of the Tribune free.

Subscription rates: weekly, $1 a year. Semi-weekly, $2. New subscribers receive the paper until January 1, 1890, free. Daily, $10 a year. Library of Tribune extras, 12 numbers a year, $2. The Weekly Tribune clubbed with the HERALD at $2.

A man who has practised medicine for 40 years, ought to know salt from sugar; read what he says:

TOLEDO O, Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen:—I have been in the general practice of medicine for almost forty years, and would say that in all my practice and experience have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrah Cure, manufactured by you. Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours Truly,
L. L. GORSUCH, M. D.
Office, 215 Summit St.

We will give $100 for any case of Catarrh that can not be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Taken internally.

Attacked by Rheumatism.

I have been selling Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) since 1878, during which time I might name a great number of very remarkable cures that it has affected. One in particular, was a person who was attacked with rheumatism. The case was so bad that he was helpless for a long time. He took hundreds of dollars worth of other medicines without receiving any benefit. He was at length happily and permanently cured after using a few bottles of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.)

THE HERALD FOR 1890.

On the 25th day of May last the HERALD entered upon the fortieth year of its publication. The 15th day of November last completed fifteen years under its present management, and we can truthfully say that the paper never had more friends or truer ones in Northern Lenawee than it has today. It never had a larger subscription list than now, and its prospects for a long career of future usefulness and influence were never more promising. But, like Cæsar, we are ambitious. We aim for a larger list and a wider field to swing in, and our terms for 1890 have been adjusted with that purpose in view. The offers we now present are more attractive and substantial than usual and the variety is such that every man who takes any kind of a newspaper can be accommodated. Read them carefully and note the advantages offered and then pass in your subscription before the opening of the new year.

OFFER NO. ONE.

We have made arrangements with that wide awake illustrated farm magzine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct to the address of any of our subscribers who will come in and pay up all arrearages on subscription and one year in advance from date, and to any new subscriber who will pay one year in advance. The regular subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. It costs you nothing. The two papers at our full rate of $1.50 per year.

OFFER NO. TWO.

The modern magazine may be taken as embodying the best literature of the world, as the magazine editor pays the highest prices to novelists, scientists, statesmen, soldiers and even kings and princes for the best they can furnish in the literary line. The well edited magazine becomes an educating influence in the family circle whose importance cannot be overestimated. The special arrangements which we have made with the Cosmopolitan presents very unusual inducements. That magazine, though only in the tenth month under its new management, is already recognized as one of the most interesting publications of the day. You can obtain a magazine which gives you in a year nearly fourteen hundred pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including six hundred pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point of interest and execution at its regular price, only $2 50, and the HERALD free.

OFFER NO. THREE.

Ropp's Commercial Calculator is a practical arithmetic for practical purposes. It contains a large variety of useful, accurate and convenient tables, together with simple, short and practical methods for rapid calculations. It is a veritable vade mecum for the farmer, accountant, or merchant. It surpasses all books of a like character that have ever fallen under our notice. It is bound in limp leather, is of a size convenient to carry in a large pocket, and is sold for $1.00. Any subscriber paying up arrearages and one year in advance, or any new subscriber paying one year in advance at full rates, $1.50 per year, will receive a copy of this book free.

OFFER NO. FOUR.

The tendency of the times is to lower prices, except in those cases in which competition is killed by trusts. The HERALD is not a believer in trusts, but holds to the good old fashioned doctrine that competition is the life of trade. Hence we offer a liberal reduction in rates for the coming year. We have adopted both a cash and a credit rate. You can pay your money and take your choice. We will furnish the HERALD alone

The Forum.

A MONTHLY REVIEW OF LIVING SUBJECTS

By the Foremost Writers in the World.

JOHN G. CARLISLE.

THE FORUM has won the highest place reached by any periodical; for it publishes articles by more authoritative writers and by more workers along instructive lines of activity than any other publication. It contains eleven studies of great subjects every month. It is impartial, giving hearings alike to each side. It is financially independent, and it belongs to no sect or party or "interest." It is never sensational, but it aims always to be instructive.

The FORUM is of great value to that part of my college work which deals with practical politics and current questions. Two sets are hardly enough for daily use by students.—Prof. ALFRED BUSHNELL HART, of Harvard.

I consider THE FORUM as furnishing the most intelligent and sympathetic audience that a thoughtful writer can find to address in any land.—Prof. ALEXANDER WINCHELL, of the University of Michigan.

THE FORUM continues to hold its place as the foremost of our magazines, for the variety, the value, and the weight of its contributions.—THE NEW YORK TIMES.

There has come forward no problem of grave importance since THE FORUM was established that has not been discussed in its pages by masters of the subject. Announcements of forthcoming articles can seldom be made long in advance, for THE FORUM'S discussions are always of problems of present concern. Every such problem that the year 1890 will bring forward will be discussed, whether in politics, or religion, or social science, or practical affairs. The January number will contain a reply by ex-Speaker J. G. CARLISLE to Senator Cullom's recent article on "How the Tariff Affects the Farmer."

BOTH ONE YEAR FOR ONLY $2.25

The American Agriculturist is a National Rural Magazine of 48 pages, with cover. A year's volume has not less than 576 pages and over 1,000 illustrations.

It is the recognized authority on all matters pertaining to agriculture, and the oldest and most ably edited periodical of its class in the world.

IN ADDITION WE WILL FORWARD

FREE to every subscriber to the above combination sending 15 cents extra for mailing expenses a copy of

THE FARM AND HOUSEHOLD CYCLOPEDIA.

544 Pages! 249 Illustrations!

This book is a complete ready reference library for farmers and housekeepers, being filled with useful facts, hints and suggestions upon all subjects pertaining to rural and domestic affairs, embracing the results of experiment and research by scientific and practical men and women in all civilized countries. It contains the cream or substance of more than a dozen ordinary agricultural and household books, and is the only first-class work of the kind ever sold at less than six dollars. It is a book to be consulted every day in any emergency, and to be read at all times with interest and profit. It is such a book as every farmer and housekeeper needs and ought to have, supplying the universal want of a reliable counsellor upon every topic relating to the farm and household. The work is profusely illustrated, and is divided into two general headings, viz., THE FARM and THE HOUSEHOLD, each of which occupies half the book. These are again subdivided into a number of departments, as follows:

Rural Architecture, Fences and Gates, Field Crops, Fertilizers, The Garden, Orchard and Vineyard, Small Fruits, Live Stock, The Poultry Yard, The Dairy, The Apiary, Farm Implements, Around the Farm, Cooking Recipes, Ladies' Fancy Work, Floriculture, The Home Physician, The Toilet, The Laundry, Hints and Helps.

All of the above subjects are fully and ably treated in this valuable book. It is a vast storehouse of useful facts, hints and suggestions of the utmost value to farmers and housekeepers, and no man who has a home and an acre or more of land can afford to be without it.

Remit by postal note, money or express order, check, draft, or by registered letter.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Mrs. Allison was on the sick list a few days last week.

Fred Heisel, of Monroe, was here on a visit with relatives last week.

Walter Bailey, of Hudson, spent the Sabbath with relatives, returning Monday.

The thunder shower on Tuesday evening of last week reminded us of spring.

The young men and boys of the village spent Christmas afternoon in a game of ball.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. R. Wilson spent Wednesday and Thursday with Franklin friends.

Prof. H. C. Wilson, of Constantine, has been spending his holiday vacation at his parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Linn visited David Allison and family, at Stoney Creek, over Sunday.

Eva Hinde, who was under the doctor's care last week, is slowly recovering at present writing.

School will begin on Monday morning again, with Prof. Daniels and Miss Clara Temple as teachers.

Wm. H. Arner and wife visited relatives at Pittsford, Mich., last week, returning Saturday evening.

Mattie Rappleye, of Dundee, is spending her vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Rappleye.

Mrs. Allison and Mrs. Sarah Rappleye have pansies in full bloom in their flower gardens on their lawns.

Miss Ray Luce was married to John Lewis, at the home of her sister, Mrs. Lafe Pooklington, on Christmas evening.

Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Coller, son and daughter, of Detroit, visited at Mrs. Coller's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Miller, last week.

Remember the L. O. S. will be held at the home of Mrs. John F. Temple on Friday evening of the present week.

The exercises given by the Sunday School Christmas evening were very successfully carried out and a pleasant time enjoyed by all.

Christmas has come and gone, but not without a visit from old Santa, who left here and there a token from some friend as a reminder of their respect and esteem.

There was a very good attendance at the entertainment given Monday evening. The play was given with much interest and each part was impersonated with much credit to those taking part. The managers desire to thank those who were present for their presence and for the perfect order kept; also to those who assisted and helped to make everything a success.

We often hear our neighbors and friends wishing they were in Florida where the winters are more agreeable and pleasant. It seems that a person who is not contented with the past month for a fine winter would not find much enjoyment in the sunny south. The rumbling of the last thunder shower has hardly died away and flowers are in blossom in our dooryards, with here and there an orange bud ready to burst forth in full bloom, while some whose fragrance have filled the air are on the wither.

ONSTED ODDS.

The days are lengthening.

Andrew Taylor is still quite poorly.

Dr. Ross is having a well dug for family use.

Mrs. C. Austin was attacked with fever the other day.

Frogs have been heard to sing during the past few days in this locality.

Vern Greenleaf saw a live snake the other day and it was not in his boots, either.

Adam and Howard's picket, fuel, and sawmill in town is booming these days.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Riley, of Rollin, called on friends in this locality last Monday.

Look out for some good rhetorical exercises by the scholars at the schoolhouse in the near future.

Christmas passed off quietly here, but the people got away with the good things of this life just the same.

Mrs. Norman Taylor was taken quite sick the other day with liver difficulties, but is on the gain at present.

Richard Pawson and son Eugene have bought the old Denslow farm of forty acres and Eugene has moved thereon.

Will Knapp has purchased the tenant house of Fred Morton and will move it into town and fit it up as a residence for himself and family.

SPRINGVILLE SPRINGS.

J. Brimley is made happy by the timely arrival of a pension.

Arthur E. White leaves next week for Vandanoi, where he will enter school.

O. Lewis and daughter Bernice, of Pentwater, are spending the holidays with the families of W. H. White and D. Lewis.

Mrs. J. H. Smith and Mrs. Winnie Waring, of Tecumseh, were recently visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Rogers.

Warren G. Shepherd has just closed a very successful term of school in the village. The officers have wisely retained him as teacher for the remainder of the school year.

The agony is over. After many popcorn and peanut soirees for the raising of funds, and innumerable items in the various county papers, Onsted has at last finished her sidewalk.

Fred Grogers' shingle mill is again in operation. The Lake Mills, also, are doing a thriving business. Since the purchase of the property by the present owners, Marsh and Brazee, many improvements have been added.

The principal event of the past week was the celebration of Christmas by an entertainment of the M. E. Sunday School. The children pleased the audience with a delightful variety of recitations and musical selections, and were made to rejoice by the distribution of a whole tree load of presents under the direction of Santa Claus; likewise pastor and teachers. The decorations were beautiful and appropriate and received much praise.

The farmers in this vicinity, termed by the Adrian Times the remote part of the County, are not grumbling over the poor condition of the roads, but are utilizing the warm weather in improving their farms. The convenient money order system now in operation enables the farmer to purchase at the lowest prices in the eastern cities. No more tedious journeys to the county seat for the farmer's household. Shopping by mail is indeed a luxury.

MACON CENTER CHIPS.

No need going to Florida to find mild weather.

R. R. Bennington, who has been sick for a few weeks, we are glad to learn is slowly recovering.

There will be a social at Grange Hall Wednesday evening, Jan. 8th. Everybody invited. Look out for fun. Social, supper and literary program all for 10 cents.

Farmers have been busy raising the means and paying their taxes the past few weeks. A larger per cent than usual at this date remains unpaid. Wonder why this is so? Will some one rise up and explain?

At the last regular meeting of Macon Grange, held last Friday evening, the following persons were elected for the coming year:

Master, J. W. Osborn.
Overseer, Wm. R. Wilson.
Lecturer, Louise Rogers.
Steward, C. V. Skinner.
Ass't Steward, Robert Bailey.
Chaplain, J. W. Baker.
Treasurer, Richard Clarkson.
Secretary, Cyrus Mead.
Gate Keeper, J. W. Baker, jr.
Pomona, Georgiana Baker.
Flora, Anna Osborn.
Ceres, Nella Russell.
Lady Ass't, Susie M. Osgood.
Organist, Mettie Miller.
Chorister, M. J. Martin.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

(Delayed Letter.)

Mrs. S. R. Rogers is very low and is unable to recognize any one.

Mr. Will Begel, of Maple Rapids, Mich., arrived in the village on Christmas night.

Leon, the youngest son of Allen Kelley, is quite sick, being under the care of Dr. Woodward.

Mrs. Robert Preston is having a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year at the home of her parents in North Morenci.

Charlie Sherpinning took a trip to Dundee to spend Christmas and also to do a little prospecting. Look out! Something may drop in the near future.

The Christmas tree at the Presbyterian Church was very beautiful and was the source of much enjoyment on Tuesday evening, it being loaded with unique and useful presents.

Mr. Walter Binns arrived home from Indiana on Tuesday for a holiday visit, and was tendered a reception at the family residence. Miss Anna Binns has since gone to Bay City and Wm. Binns, Esq., is traveling on British soil.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

The Best Salve in the world for cuts, Bruises, Sores, Tetter, Chapped Hands, Chilblains Corns, and all skin Eruptions, and positively cures Piles, or no pay required. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box FOR SALE BY C. A. Wright & Co.

BRITTON BUDGET.

M. D. Britton is on the sick list.

Prof. Lennskom has gone to Ohio for a few days.

Mrs. John Temple of Ridgeway visited her Britton relatives on Tuesday.

Dr. Swarthout of N. Y., has been shaking hands with his Britton friends this week.

Keister & Tripp's mill is shut down for repairs, in anticipation of a rush as soon as snow comes.

Carlisle Roberts is building a commodious upright to his dwelling. That's right. Score one more for our side of town. We are growing right along.

I. L. Sleeper of Adrian, was in town Monday and Tuesday attending to shipping hogs, sheep, cattle, etc. Did you ask what made him grunt, wheeze and squeal so? No sir, its not from association with the pigs; it's just "La Grippe."

Mr. and Mrs. W. Lenardson, who have been making a week's visit at Toledo, returned to their home Monday morning, looking as though they had enjoyed their visit to its fullest extent.

Mike Gillen is doing some fine hand writing on the front wall of Irve Osborne's store building, and from the occasional strains of "Roll, Jordan, Roll," that floats down from the scaffold, we conclude that the work is progressing in a manner highly satisfactory to the artist. What's this we hear about Mike's going to occupy this building himself as proprietor of a P. I. store. Say Mikey, don't do it. You ain't posted. Just listen to what is going on down the street a bit. They are at it now boys, getting all the goods they want for ten cents on the dollar, pay ten cents and get trusted for the other ninety. But harke'e lad, they do say Lawrence is going to "do 'em"—getting up a new trust called Patrons of Outdustry—sells you anything you want for five cents and returns you a nickle at the door, and a self-binder thrown in.

The discription given last week of the hunt and capture of the little bear, has raised a breeze; no gentle zephyr either, but a veritable whirlwind of wrath which culminated in a meeting on Saturday evening of the aggrieved parties, together with some who were not aggrieved, at the popular store of J. B. Coller for the purpose of taking some action in the matter. And action was taken; if you have any doubts about the matter, read on. First, informally discussing the situation for some time, for the purpose of working up sufficient courage, like a boy swinging his arms around to work up his muscle, to grasp the aforesaid situation. After the working up process had been going on for some time, and the room was so full of wrath that the front windows actually bulged out, Mike suddenly mounted the head of a half barrel of salt fish and shouted, "lets organize," and not having a table to sound and emphasize his two word speech, brought his foot down on the head of the fish barrel. Well, my! "Shockasy setting a hen," but there was a commotion among the fishes as the head went out and Mike went in. As soon as order could be restored, the meeting proceeded to act upon the suggestion which had just been given, and founded the Britton Bear Club. The object of the organization is to hunt down and exterminate the HERALD correspondent. The club to be a secret society, similar to the P. I's or the S. O. V's. It was decided not to complete the work of organizing at this meeting, but take time to do the work as it should be done. However, a grand hailing sign of distress was adopted, which consists of sitting up like the little bear, gently pawing the air with the hands, turn the head to the right and snap the jaws together like a dog catching flies; these motions to be kept up for about half a minute, then bow gently forward until the face nearly touches the ground; don't stop the pawing and snapping; during this proceeding keep up a low growling noise way down in your stomach—this indicates distress. If the party hailed does not recognize your signs you can safely conclude that he is not a "Bear." It was decided that next Saturday afternoon, in order to perfect members in this sign, Jess, would wind up the little bear, and the charter members would arrange themselves in a row in front of the store, and as the L. B. is touched off, the club will imitate his motions in concert. The next meeting will undoubtedly be a stormy one as the work of completing the organization, electing officers, etc., will necessarily cause a general growl. Particulars of the meeting next week, provided the extermination is not sooner consummated.

RIPTUS TOPICS.

Christmas has gone, New Year has come but still the roads are rather rough.

Frank Pitcher came home Christmas and expects to stay about two weeks.

The Patrons of Industry held their last meeting of the year Tuesday evening.

Abner Simmons, who has been on the sick list for some time, is now on the gain.

Mrs. A. Vedder, of Tecumseh, was the guest of Mrs. C. Vedder last Friday evening.

Mrs. Weston, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Palmer, returned home this morning.

The concert at the M. E. Church last Friday evening was a success, both the crowd and entertainment.

A surprise party in honor of Wallace Palmer, Monday eve, was a pleasant affair, and everybody enjoyed themselves in the best possible manner.

THE FARMERS' UNION.

The Union met at M. Sueltzer's on Friday evening, Dec. 27, with a large attendance. The literary part of the program consisted of Christmas exercises, and was of unusual merit.

In the discussion of the question—Is our present rate of high taxation a just one?—much interest manifested, and the prevailing opinion was, that, in the main, they were just, though in some respects, were not properly equalized. Some complaints were made concerning the exorbitant township tax of Tecumseh this year. The next meeting will be held at B. F. DePuy's, Friday evening, Jan. 10. Program:

Music—Ed. and W. Spaulding.
Dec.—John Boice.
Dialogue.
Music—Thos. and Mont Florence.
Question—Resolved, That it would be beneficial to the farmers for the general government to loan them money at the same rate of interest that they do the national banks.
Speakers—Wm. Comfort, George Howell, M. Davidson, E. L. Russell, B. F. DePuy, John C. Mills, Coonrod Lowe, Alex. Richards.

TECUMSEH AND FRANKLIN FARMERS' CLUB

Notwithstanding the terrible condition of the roads, quite a number found their way to the home of Mr. VanValkenburg, Thursday evening, Dec. 26. The exercises partook entirely of a Christmas nature, and were very interesting. The president was absent which fact was much regretted. It has been requested to have the musical medley, which was sung, repeated for the president's benefit.

Next meeting will be held at A. K. Waldron's, Wednesday eve., Jan. 8. Program.

Song—Quartette.
Rec.—Jennie Osborn.
Reading—B. Hurry.
Dec.—Eddie Hoag.
Charade—Mrs. H. W. Dubois.
Solo—Mrs. W. J. Waldron.
Reading—Adah VanValkenburg.
Dec.—Lloyd Hanford.
Medley—Mr. Van Valkenburg and daughter Ada.
Dialogue.
Rec.—Mrs. Chas. Ives.
Music.

In place of a discussion, the program will close with an agricultural quiz.

A PLEASANT REUNION.

On the 31st of December, 1889, occurred one of those happy gatherings of relatives and friends at the home of Stephen Bowerman in Raisin, the occasion being the celebration of their 25th marriage anniversary. And a pleasant and profitable occasion we trust it was, as friend clasped hand with friend and reviewed the incidents of the past. Mrs. Rees read the beautiful 49th psalm, then bowed in fervent prayer, thanking God for the many blessings He had given this family and asking God to bless them still, and all gathered on this occasion. A short family history was read by Mrs. J. D. Baker, of Hillsdale, earnestly requesting a proper cultivation of the social nature as a means of doing service for Christ, asking in the poet's language.

Let us gather up the sunbeams,
Lying all around our path,
Let us keep the wheat and roses,
Casting out the thorns and chaff.

A bountiful dinner was provided, and enjoyed. Rev. Mr. Rees presented in an appropriate manner, in behalf of the relatives, a set of chairs, a base rocking chair and a robe, and many other useful presents from neighbors and friends. The aged father and mother of Mrs. Bowerman, who had celebrated their golden wedding, were present, and many other aged people, as well as those in the prime of life, and the young to the number of 70. It was a joyous occasion, and all wish Mr. and Mrs. Bowerman might celebrate their golden wedding.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, JAN. 2

That twelfth juror in the Cronin case had a pretty hard time standing up against the eleven obstinate cusses who opposed him.

The fifty-first Congress goes to work with two able preachers to pray for it. Let us hope that the tax-payers will get some relief before the session closes.

Speaker Reed has treated Congressman Allen in a decidedly shabby manner. He is the fourth member of the committee on agriculture, and upon no other committee whatever.

Grover Cleveland's Boston speech was a bugle call for reform, that stamps him as a statesman of wonderful sagacity. Cleveland is the most popular American to day, either in or out of office.

The Republicans of Michigan are beginning to appreciate the fact that they overdid the business in this state a year ago. Had they carried Michigan by only 5000 majority the leaders would now be receiving the recognition from the President which their merits entitle them to.

The Forum for January contains a powerful article from the pen of John G. Carlisle on the effect of the tariff upon the farmer. Every farmer in this broad land should read it, and those who take the HERALD will have an opportunity to do so at an early day.

The Russian influenza—excuse us, La Grippe is the proper name—is spreading over Europe, and has already invaded some of the large cities of this country. Well, let her come. People who are acquainted with the catarrh breeding climate of this latitude will not be frightened by a Russian sneeze.

The last number of the Michigan Farmer contains a very significant paper written by Editor Gibbons, in which he acknowledges the iniquities of the present tariff law and recommends a radical revision of the same. But a year ago the same editor was preaching to the farmers of Michigan that our benign war tariff was the sum of political wisdom, and that any revision of it would ruin agriculture. A tardy repentance is better than none. The leaven is working.

Mr. Bent, of Philadelphia, Pa., the president of the Pennsylvania Steel company, has come out for unlimited free trade. Here is what he said a few days ago: "Give me free ore and I'll sell pig-iron in Liverpool and send steel rails to London. What American industries most want is free opportunity and not legislative protection or restriction. Our company pays $750,000 per year tariff tax, which must either come from the wages of American workingmen or from the profits of the American manufacturer."—Dayton Workman.

What is the remedy for the existing hard times? An exchange says:

"Organization," cries number one.
"Co-operation," shouts another.
"More greenbacks," says the third.
"Moral suasion," bellows the fourth.
"Prohibition," feebly cries the fifth.
"Too much population," wails the sixth.
"Eight hours," says the seventh.
"Ethical culture," says the eighth.
"Strike," hisses the ninth.
"Dynamite," whispers the tenth.
"Overproduction," shouts the capitalist.
And "Protection," yells the greatest robber on earth.

And while all this hullabaloo is going on, the land speculator quietly sits in his office wondering if the World's fair is coming to New York to raise the price of real estate.

The following from the Vermontville Echo, which is a Republican paper, by the way, has the ring of the true metal:

It is gratifying to the publishers of the Echo that the doctrine of radical tariff reduction which it has boldly advocated for the past year, in the face of all opposition and in spite of the threatened boycott of our Republican friends, is at last recommended by President Harrison, and strongly urged by Clarence A. Black, one of the directors of the Michigan Club, the strongest Republican organization in the state, and which must be adopted by the National Republican party to procure its prolonged existence. We may try as hard as we will to ignore the fact, but the people are tired of this excessive taxation, whether it comes in the form of tariff, drain assessments or direct taxation. The people demand protection, but it is protection from the infernal greed and extravagance of our law makers. If this is treason to the old Republican party, then write us down as traitors.

THE OLD AND THE NEW.

This week rings out the old year and rings in the new. Good-bye, old year. Father Time has turned another leaf in the world's history. Eighteen hundred and eighty-nine has made its record, has completed its work, and has been relegated to the realms of the past. A new year begins its work with the freshness, vigor, and ambition of youth, and is beckoning us on, pointing to the rainbow of future hopes and aspirations. It is a fitting time, as we turn another leaf in the book of time, to review the twelve months that are gone, and to make fresh resolves for the twelve months that are to come.

The New Year's festival is an artificial one, as it does not mark the beginning of a climatic season. Janus, the God from whom the month takes its name, acted as the door-keeper between peace and war, and was the original God of commencement. Many of our holiday festivals have sprung from heathen legends or grown from the traditions of mythology. This particular day therefore seems more appropriate than any other on which to begin the new year. It is a fitting winding up of the festivities of Christmas tide, a good time to strike a balance sheet with the yearly cycle, just gone, and take our reckoning for the cycle to come.

The old year has been prolific in great events. True, it has been free from wars among the nations, but it has been marked by great calamities. The awful shipwreck at Samoa, the mighty flood which buried Johnstown, the great fires at Boston and Lynn, the burning of Seattle, the fatal land slide at Quebec, and railroad accidents of unusual magnitude, have marked the course of the year with a bloody trail. Politically it has been a year of surprises. It has witnessed the restoration of the Republican party to power, and a remarkable revulsion from the same party within eight months thereafter. It has seen a peaceful revolution in South America that stands without a parallel in the world's history. The emperor of a mighty nation, whose reign has been a benign one, and who was popular with his people, has surrendered his crown, abdicated his throne, and abandoned his empire without a protest. The greatest empire in the Western Hemisphere was transformed into a republic in a single day. Such a revolution, effected so completely without bloodshed, will shake the European dynasties to their foundation.

In many other directions the old year has stamped its impress upon history's page. Four new stars have been added to the American flag, and Uncle Samuel is cutting out the material for three or four more. The contest for the location of the World's fair of 1892 has stirred the nation from center to circumference. Henry M. Stanley has carved his name on the roll of fame as a second Columbus. The Pan-American conference, with its big possibilities, has made its staring tour of the Union. The "elixir of life" has gone up like a rocket, and come down like a stick. John Bull has attempted to bull the beer market by buying up American breweries. Corporal Tanner has blazed forth like a planet of the first magnitude and as suddenly subsided. Mahone and Foraker have fallen outside the breastworks. The Russian "la grippe" is sneezing its way across the Atlantic. John Bright, the great English commoner, Jeff. Davis, the last remnant of the "lost cause," and Henry W. Grady, the eloquent apostle of the "New South" have joined the great majority. A new territory has been planted between the setting and rising of the sun. We have tasted a piece of 4th of July climate on Christmas day. McGinty has gone to the bottom of the sea dressed in his best Sunday clothes.

What hath the new year in store for us? That is given to no human eye to foresee. It may be prolific of wars. It may advance the arts of peace. It may witness more and greater calamities of fire and flood. The ups and downs of life come with every year. We must all prepare to take the bitter with the sweet, for no man knoweth what a day may bring forth. But one thing all can do for it is within the power of the humblest mortal. Each and every one of us can resolve to act well his part, to be true to himself, faithful to his friends and to deal honorably with all men. Life, to a great extent, is what we make it. The man who learns to govern himself is mightier than he that ruleth a city. True, we can neither foresee nor provide against the ravages of earthquake, storm and epidemic, and yet it is also true, that many of the calamities which are heaped upon us are due to the neglect of man. Let us begin the new year with a firm determination to make the most of the opportunities that God has given us; if misfortunes come, to meet them with manly courage; to accept our prosperity with a proper sense of obligation to the Giver of all Good. And whatever betide, let us extend to all, our wishes for a Happy New Year.

CLEVELAND'S BOSTON SPEECH.

Deep Impression Made Upon His Listeners—It Puts Him to the Front Among the Reformers.

Mr. Cleveland's speech at the dinner of the Boston Merchants' Association proves to have been an event which is worth more than the comment of a day. It was the most carefully prepared of all his public utterances since he left the Presidency, and the circumstances attending its delivery and the deep impression which it made upon the minds of those who heard him, regardless of party, combine to render it a national event. The fact that it was delivered before an audience composed largely of Republicans, and that they gave him far more than the approval that the courtesy of the occasion required, shows how strongly his eloquence appealed to their best convictions, and into what an atmosphere of purity and inspiration he lifted them. To-day his name is upon the lips of many who heard him, and of many others who wish that they had been fortunate enough to be within the walls of the Vendome. This speech will be read all over this country and across the sea. It will stamp Mr. Cleveland as more than ever a man of deep convictions upon the most urgent public problems of the day, and a man with positive ideas as to the method of solving those problems. One of the founders of the Republican party, but for the last five years a supporter of Mr. Cleveland, remarked to-day that he stands higher among the people by the force of his own personality and by the confidence of the mass of the people in his honesty and ability than any other ex President since Washington. Though he is only a private citizen, yet Mr. Cleveland has shown that he is as earnest for the good of the republic as when he was at its head, that he is devoted to honesty and freedom in elections, no matter what party may come under his condemnation, and that he is clearly convinced that the Government should be for the benefit of all the people, not for the few, nor for any class that may be able to control legislation. His statesmanship is of the broadest type, and his speech, interpreted by his course, proves that he is a man of action as well as words, and that his ideas are no abstract thing, to talk about around a dinner-table, with no thought of their taking practical form. The effect of his strong words was to excite in those who heard them the determination that something must be done to reform the evils whose presence every well-informed citizen admits, and to attain the high ideal that he held before them.

This speech of Mr. Cleveland must have positive political consequences. He has shown that he is in close touch with the people in their demand for reforms in the methods of voting and in the onerous tariff system that now burdens the country. He is the man that they will look to as their natural leader. Hill of New York could no more hope for the support of the people when such a man as Cleveland is available than could "Blocks-of-Five" Dudley in a national Republican Convention. Mr. Cleveland has spoken his mind freely, untrammelled by any consideration as to how his course will affect his party and with no apparent consideration for his own political future. It was not the speech of a trimming politician, calculating how he could please the largest number of people and offend the fewest. He stood on the solid ground of principles which the consciences of his Republican listeners asserted to be right, and delivered his forceful sentences like direct blows between the eyes of the evils that he would destroy. He has built a firm platform upon which he can stand. If he has any political future, it must be with the distinct understanding that those are the principles that he entertains. If the people do not want a man who believes that those principles are true, then he is not the man for them. But the effect of this masterly delivery of argument and of appeal for extending the benefits of the Government to all classes of the people, for securing freedom to the voter, for stopping the political corruption which has been such a shame to our honesty as a nation, and for reform in the civil service, will be to make him more distinctly than ever before the natural candidate of his party for the Presidency three years hence. It has been the current feeling here that there was no doubt about his renomination, but this has made assurance doubly sure. Not only will he command the united support of his party better than he did when the spoils members were cursing him behind his back because the offices were not distributed to them by a wholesale discharge of Republicans, but it will be one of the easiest things in the world for many of such Republicans as we have here, to vote for him after hearing such a speech as that of last night. They admired him because they could not help it. He made a most favorable impression upon many who had not seen him before. If it was the purpose of the managers of the Merchants' Association to provide the best possible speaking for their guests and members, then they succeeded admirably in inviting Mr. Cleveland. If they had any thought of politics, and were looking with half an eye to the supremacy of the Republican party, then they made a grave political blunder. But the speech has been made and the world has heard of it.

It has been remarked to-day by men who have been somewhat familiar with Mr. Cleveland that he has developed in his public powers since he left the Presidential chair. They say that he has improved in his delivery, and that the literary quality of his speeches has changed for the better, that he appears to better advantage and that he can speak with a freedom which he could not enjoy while he held the position of President. A leading Federal official remarked after hearing the speech that Cleveland was a greater man than he ever supposed before. Interviews which have been held to-day with many of his listeners show a remarkable agreement in the impression that he made upon them. He is stronger, abler, more of a statesman, a better orator, a greater man then they had supposed. He captured their approval by his manly disregard of it in his demand for what he believed to be for the welfare of the people, and they are most of them manly enough in return to confess in words of warm praise that they were mistaken in their former opinion. Hence the speech of last night is a national event that will in all probability have important consequences.—N. Y. Evening Post.

THE TARIFF IS A TAX.

Our Republican contemporaries are disturbed by Mr. Cleveland's Boston speech. The Chicago Inter-Ocean says all "this palaver translated into strong English means the tariff is a tax."

For the first time in its existence the Inter-Ocean sees the point. The tariff is a tax imposed by the classes on the masses for the benefit of the rich. Against this tax Mr. Cleveland made his protest in Boston. He referred to the merchants of the past, "when the merchant was a man"; when their ships sailed to every port; when together they resisted the tea tax and every effort of the mother country to hem in their commerce, and putting at risk their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor, asked in the words of Emerson:

"Of what avail the plow or sail,
Or land or life, if freedom fail?"

Mr. Cleveland appealed from the Boston of to-day to the Boston of '76, and judging from our Republican contemporaries his appeal must have had a tremendous effect. Let the good work go on.—Courier Journal.

Epoch

The transition from long, lingering and painful sickness to robust health marks an epoch in the life of the individual. Such a remarkable event is treasured in the memory and the agency whereby the good health has been attained is greatfully blessed. Hence it is that so much is heard in praise of Electric Bitters. So many feel they owe their restoration to health, to the use of the Great Alterative and Tonic. If you are troubled with any disease of Kidneys, Liver or Stomach, of long or short standing you will surely find relief by use of Electric Bitters. Sold at 50c. and $1 per bottle at

Rheumatism

Is undoubtedly caused by the lactid acid in the blood. This acid attacks the fibrous tissues, and causes the pains and aches in the back, shoulders, knees ankles, hips, and wrists. Thousands of people have found in Hood's Sarsaparilla a positive cure for rheumatism. This medicine, by its purifying action, neutralizes the acidity of the blood, and also builds up and strengthens the whole body.

WHAT IS

SCROFULA

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or the many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. Some of these cures are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula, be sure to try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"My daughter Mary was afflicted with scrofulous sore neck from the time she was 22 months old till she became six years of age. Lumps formed in her neck, and one of them after growing to the size of a pigeon's egg, became a running sore for over three years. We gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla, when the lump and all indications of scrofula entirely disappeared, and now she seems to be a healthy child." J. S. CARLILE, Nauright, N. J.

The Forum.

By the Foremost Writers in the World.

THE FORUM has won the highest place reached by any periodical; for it publishes articles by more authoritative writers and by more workers along instructive lines of activity than any other publication. It contains eleven studies of great subjects every month. It is impartial, giving hearings alike to each side. It is financially independent, and it belongs to no school or party or "interest." It is never sensational, but it aims always to be instructive.

The FORUM is of great value to that part of my college work which deals with practical politics and current questions. Two sets are hardly enough for daily use by students.—Prof. ALFRED BUSHNELL HART, of Harvard.

I consider THE FORUM as furnishing the most intelligent and sympathetic audience that a thoughtful writer can find to address in any land.—Prof. ALEXANDER WINCHELL, of the University of Michigan.

THE FORUM continues to hold its place as the foremost of our magazines, for the variety, value, and the weight of its contributions.—THE NEW YORK TIMES.

There has come forward no problem of grave importance since THE FORUM was established that has not been discussed in its pages by masters of the subject. Announcements of forthcoming articles can seldom be made long in advance, for THE FORUM'S discussions are always of problems of present concern. Every such problem that the year 1890 will bring forward will be discussed, whether in politics, or religion, or social science, or practical affairs. The January number will contain a reply by ex-Speaker J. G. CARLISLE to Senator Cullom's recent article on "How the Tariff Affects the Farmer."

THOUSANDS OF TESTIMONIALS FROM HAPPY HEARTS.

"When he was within twenty yards I stooped down, and grasping Gumbo by the ankles from behind, lifted his legs from under him, making him fall forward on his hands. I ran him right at the lion, wheel-barrow fashion, the bewildered nigger instinctively putting one hand before the other before he knew what he was about. This brought us within a spring of the lion. I hurled his legs forward over his head with such force that when they struck the ground his body rose and he described a convulsive somersault. This carried him two lengths ahead of me—into the very jaws of the lion, if the latter had stayed"—

LESSON I, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JAN. 5.

Text of the Lesson, Luke i, 5-17—Commit Verses 13-16—Golden Text, Malachi iii, 1—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Whether we study the Old Testament or the New we are studying the same book, written by the same author, the Holy Spirit, and it is all concerning the one Glorious Person, the Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord God of the Holy Prophets. The saying of a servant of God, that "the New Testament lies hid in the Old, and the Old lies open in the New," is worth oft repeating. The last prophet in the Old Testament is heard saying, as the voice of Jehovah: "Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me" (Mal. iii, 1), and the lesson for today is the record of the announcement by the Angel Gabriel that the messenger was soon to be born, so that, although some 400 years intervene between Malachi and Luke, there seems to be no break in the story.

5. "A certain priest named Zacharias." Five persons are mentioned by name in our lesson and in the verses immediately following, but the two with whom we have specially to do are the priest Zacharias and the angel Gabriel. It will be helpful to remember that this lesson is in the time of the iron kingdom of Dan. ii, 40, and the fourth beast of Dan. vii, 7, 23; that Rome now ruled the world; that Palestine was divided, not into twelve divisions as in the lessons just closed, but into three—Galilee, Samaria and Judæa—and that Herod was the Roman ruler of the southern province of Judæa, in which Zacharias and Elizabeth lived. It will be seen in I Chron. xxiv, 10, that Abia or Abijah was the eighth of the twenty-four courses or orders into which David divided the priests. Elizabeth being also of the priestly tribe of Aaron or Levi shows that they were obedient to the law which required them only to marry in their own tribe (Num. xxxvi, 5-9). Zacharias signifies Jah is renowned or remembered, and Elizabeth the oath of God; let the diligent eat the meat.

6. "They were both righteous before God." They were in fellowship with the righteous Lord who loveth righteousness (Ps. xi, 7); and were therefore like Noah, righteous before Him (Gen. vii, 1), because like Abram they believed God (Gen. xv, 6; Rom. iv, 3). By nature "There is none righteous, no, not one;" and by the deeds of the law no one can become righteous; but the righteous Lord has provided a righteousness for all who will accept it, even His own, even Himself.

7. "They had no child." It was with Elizabeth as with Rachel and Hannah and Manoah's wife; but she, like they, looked unto God, and surely Joseph and Samuel and Samson and John the Baptist are among the greatest of men, and all sons of women who had been barren. When in days to come we see the significance of Isa. liv, 1, we shall then readily recognize these shadows.

8. "He executed the priests' office before God in the order of his course." What a glorious motto for every day are those two words, "before God," calling to mind such texts as Gen. vii, 1; xvii, 1; 1 Sam. xii, 3, 7; Acts x, 33, etc., and reminding us that we ought to live as in His sight, doing all things for His glory (1 Cor. x, 31).

9. "His lot was to burn incense." This incense was made according to God's express command for the service of the sanctuary, and it was forbidden to make any like it for any other purpose, upon pain of death. The priest was to burn it every morning and evening when he dressed and lit the lamps (Ex. xxx, 7, 8, 34-38). Dr. Brown quotes from Lightfoot as follows: "The part assigned to each priest in his week of service was decided by lot. Three were employed at the offering of incense—to remove the ashes of the former service, to bring in and place on the golden altar the pan filled with hot burning coals taken from the altar of burnt offering, and to sprinkle the incense on the hot coals, and while the smoke of it ascended to make intercession for the people." This was the most distinguished part of the service (Rev. viii, 3), and this was what fell to the lot of Zacharias at this time.

10. "The whole multitude of the people were praying without, at the time of incense." The connection of prayer and incense is seen in Ps. cxli, 2; Rev. viii, 3, 4; and the incense is significant of the merits of the Lord Jesus, whose least word and smallest act was fragrant to God, because he sought neither his own will nor his own glory, but did always those things which pleased his father (John vi, 38; viii, 29, 50). It also teaches us that, apart from the merits of Christ, nothing we do, not even our prayers, can be acceptable in God's sight; but, inasmuch as he ever liveth to make intercession for us, the weakest may with boldness come, and the feeblest may do him service, since what is done by any redeemed soul, as unto him, is made acceptable by his merits.

11. "There appeared unto him an angel of the Lord, standing on the right side of the altar of incense." This was in the Holy Place, into which the priests went every day, where were the tables of shewbread, the golden candlesticks, ten of each (II Chron. iv, 7, 8), and the golden altar, or altar of incense, before the veil, and by the side of which the angel now stood. The angels are God's ministering spirits (Heb. i, 14), and are often spoken of in Scripture as ministering to His children; but in all the Bible we only know two of them by name, this one, Gabriel (vs. 19), being the same who appeared to Daniel, and shortly after this lesson to Mary.

12. "When Zacharias saw him, he was troubled, and fear fell upon him." So it was with Mary (vss. 29, 30), and Hagar, and Gideon, and the women at the sepulcher, and the disciples (Gen. xxi, 17; Judg. vi, 22, 23; Mk. xvi, 5; Lu. xxiv, 37); and so we suppose it would be with most of us should a heavenly visitor suddenly appear to us; but if Manoah's wife was not afraid, why should any of us be (Judg. xiii, 22, 23) if we are walking in fellowship with God, and abiding in that love of His which casteth out all fear (I John xxi, 18).

13. "Fear not, Zacharias." Thus God and His angels are always seeking to comfort those who look to Him; and notice how often they call people by name, "Fear not, Mary" (vs. 30); "Fear not, Abram;" "Fear not, Hagar;" "Fear not, Joseph" (Gen. xv, 1; xxi, 17. Matt. i, 20). One of the most precious "Fear not's" to me in the Bible is Isa. xli, 13, which the Spirit spoke to my soul in the summer of 1875, making it wonderfully true to me that season, and times without number from that day to this.

"Thy prayer is heard." All true prayer for things according to His will, in the name of Jesus, is surely heard, and the answer will be manifest in due time. Let us live on "expectation corner," that we may be always on the lookout for the answer, and recognize it when it comes. Consider carefully Mk. xi, 22-24; I John v, 14, 15.

"Thou shalt call his name John." Among those whose names were given them by God before they were born note Ishmael, Isaac, Josiah, Jesus (Gen. xvi, 11; xvii, 19; I Ki. xiii, 2; Matt. i, 21), and learn that God is interested even in our names. John signifies the grace of God; and he enjoyed a large share of it.

TO THE GALLOWS.

Otto Leuth, the Boy Murderer of Cleveland,

Sentenced for Murder in the First Degree.

His Awful Crime and Outrage—His Victim Little Maggie Thompson—History of the Crime.

CLEVELAND, December 28.—Otto Leuth, the fiendish youth who outraged and murdered little Maggie Thompson in this city last May, was yesterday found guilty of murder in the first degree. The trial of this case occupied four weeks, and the jury was out yesterday just four hours. The circumstances connected with this awful crime are no doubt still familiar to all. Leuth was sixteen years old and his victim only eight when the brutal outrage and its shocking sequel was perpetrated. In afternoon of May 9, 1889, as little Maggie was returning from school she was accosted by Leuth, who induced her to accompany him into the house of his parents, situated on Merchant avenue. Leuth's parents were away at the time. The innocent child was led to a bedroom on one of the upper floors where one of the most blood-curdling tragedies in the history of Cleveland was enacted. After outraging the helpless child the incarnate fiend battered her head into a jelly with a heavy iron hammer. After the mutilated body of the murdered child had been permitted to lay on the bed in the room where the double crime was committed for a day and night Leuth, in his desire to conceal the ghastly evidence of his guilt, conveyed the corpse to the basement under the tenement house occupied by his parents.

The mysterious disappearance of Maggie caused her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Thompson the greatest alarm and no pains were spared in the search for a clue to her absence, and the matter became a subject of general inquiry. Just one month from the date of little Maggie's disappearance the police were called to investigate the Leuth residence in reference to a bad odor, of which the neighbors had been complaining. This investigation led to the solution of the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Maggie Thompson. The body of the once pretty child was found concealed in the cellar, where Leuth had placed it. The Leuth family, five in number, were all at home at the time of this terrible discovery, and all were placed under arrest, and Otto made a full confession on the following day.

One Killed and Three Injured.

WILLIAMSPORT, PA., December 28.—One span of the new bridge over the river at Market street, which had not been fully fastened in position, went down in the afternoon, when a heavy load of timber was driven upon it. The team and four men went down with it, falling about thirty feet. William Somers, one of the men employed on the bridge, whose home is in Rochester, N. Y., was killed. Burt Thompson, driver of the team, John Daley and Frank Cable were more or less injured, none of them fatally. The driver was warned not to drive across the bride, but disregarded the notice.

President Harrison Visits the Old Home of His Great Grandfather.

NORFOLK, VA., December 28.—President Harrison and party came down to the mouth of the Potomac on Commodore Bateman's steam yacht Meteor, and crossed Chesapeake Bay. In the morning they went up the James river to Lower Brandon, where the finest ducking grounds in Virginia are located. The old residence of ex-President William Henry Harrison, the President's grandfather, is located just above Brandon, and it is thought he will pay a visit to the old homestead before returning to Washington. The party are expected here today.

Labor Leather Workers.

WOBURN, MASS., December 28.—The striking Knights of Labor leather workers have issued a statement of their case to the public. They admit the shrinkage of value of manufactured products during the year, but assert that this has been fully balanced by reduced cost of raw material and lower wages. They say the manufacturers refused to treat with them and a strike was necessary. They express willingness to arbitrate the disputed questions.

FOREIGN FLASHES.

The Pope's Letter to Don Carlos.

LISBON, December 28.—Don Carlos has received an autograph letter from the Pope congratulating him on his accession to the throne.

Six Per Cent. Die of Influenza.

PARIS, December 28.—An estimate is made on medical authority that of persons attacked by influenza in this city six per cent. die.

Nova Scotian Fire.

HALIFAX, N. S., December 28.—A fire which had lasted 46 hours in Canada's coal shed has just been extinguished. The damage amounts to a considerable sum and there is no insurance.

American Cattle Disease.

OTTAWA, ONT., December 28.—The high commissioner for Canada in London, England, has issued a return showing that during the past season eighteen eighteen vessels sailing from United States ports arrived at Great Britain with 113 head of cattle affected with pleuro pneumonia. Despite the denials a feeling exists that the disease has a foothold in the western states.

India Rubber Monopoly.

PARIS, December 28.—The government of Para, Brazil, has established in its own interests a monopoly of the India rubber trade. This action has aroused emphatic protests from many exports houses, chiefly American and French doing business of three hundred million francs annually. M. Spuller, minister of foreign affairs has cabled to the French minister in Brazil for details.

Proclaimed King.

LISBON, December 28.—The ceremony of proclaiming Carlos I. King of Portugal, took place today. The weather was cloudy but this had no effect upon the crowds of enthusiastic people, who thronged the streets through which the King passed on his way to the Palace of Necessidades. The king left the castle at 11 o'clock and the journey to the palace where he took the oath of office before the cortes, was made without the occurrence of any unfavorable episode.

A BASE SLANDER.

REPORT THAT THE PRESIDENT SHOT A HOG FOR COON

Is Branded as a Canard With Much Indignation by Secretary Halford.

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 30.—It is officially denied at the white house that the president, on his recent hunting trip in Virginia, shot and killed a large hog, thinking it was a coon. Secretary Halford says there is no truth in the story and he is surprised that it should be telegraphed all over the country.

SEXTON'S SAY.

Liege's Technical School—Big Shortage of Coal in Belgium.

LONDON, December 30.—A remark by Mr. Sexton at his farewell banquet in Dublin has caused some comment in political circles. In toasting the Queen—a necessary ceremony that is generally slurred over with as little grace as possible by the Nationalists on such occasions—Mr. Sexton said the Nationalists will vote for the royal grants so long as her majesty does not refuse to sign the measures enacted by the people. This may be taken in a double sense as indicating loyalty to the crown and as hinting at a fear that the Queen may abuse her prerogative abrogating the will of the people as expressed through parliamentary enactment in favor of Irish self rule.

A technical school is being founded at Liege by Italian monks at which 1,000 boys can be accommodated. The object is to furnish mechanical training with such religious accompaniments as it is hoped will check the growth of Socialism among the industrial classes.

There is a serious shortage of coal in Belgium owing to labor troubles in the mining regions. Manufacturing interests are beginning to suffer and the government is unable to obtain its usual supply of fuel.

Dropped Dead.

Physiologists estimate that the heart does 5,000,000 pounds of work each day. No wonder people drop dead with worn out hearts. This could be prevented by Dr. Miles' new and great discovery, the New Cure. Always commence when you first begin to get short of breath, have weak, faint or smothering spells, pain or tenderness in side, etc. Sold at Baker & Hall's.

The Crandall Type-writer is the best machine for the price in the market. Call at the HERALD office and see our new Crandall perform.

M. P.—A New Discovery.

Weakness and deranged livers, stomachs and bowels should never be acted on by irritants like common pills, brain, etc., by a new method Sample free at Baker & Hall's.

Forced to Leave Home.

Over 60 people were forced to leave there homes yesterday to call for a free trial package of Lane's Family Medicine. If your blood is bad, your liver and kidneys out of order, if you are constipated and have headache and an unsightly complexion, don't fail to call on any druggist to-day for a free sample of this grand remedy. The ladies praise it. Everyone likes it. Large-size package 50 cents.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION.

Narrow Escape of a Wealthy Texas Cattle Man From Death.

DENNISON, TEX., December 30.—H. R. Greenhill, a prominent cattle man of the Indian territory, narrowly escaped assassination in this city at a late hour Friday night. A man on horseback called at the residence of Mr. Greenhill on Walker and handed him a note which requested that he call at the home of Patrick Collins, in a distant part of the city, as Collins was dying. Greenhill, while on route to the home of his friend, was attacked by two men, one of whom attempted to stab him, but Greenhill sprang to one side and escaped the thrust of the knife. He then ran, when one of the would-be assassins fired a pistol, the ball grazing the side of his head. When he arrived at the home of Mr. Collins, he found that gentleman in excellent health. The motive which led to the attempted assassination is a mystery.

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membranes of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic researches, however, has proven this to be a fact, and result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to the applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N. B.—For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet of this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 303 west King street, Toronto, Canada. [Scientific American.

Robert Garrett's Condition.

BALTIMORE, December 30.—Mr. Robert Garrett is in very poor health. At times he is very much depressed, and occasionally becomes very excited. He is still at his country place, "Uplands," near Catonsville. A concultation of several doctors from New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore was held at Uplands two weeks ago, but Mr. Garrett's friends have not been encouraged by the report from his physicians.

Is Consumption Incurable?

Read the following: Mr. C. H. Morris, Newark, Ark., says: "Was down with Abscess of Lungs, and friends and physicians pronounced me an Incurable Consumptive. Began taking Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, am now on my third bottle and able to oversee the work on my farm. It is the finest medicine ever made."

Jesse Middlewart, Decatur, Ohio, says: "Had it not been for Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption I would have died of Lung troubles. Was given up by doctors. Am now in best of health." Try it. Sample, bottles free.

DR. BRADLEY'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.
The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.
It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.
WHAT IT CURES.
All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.
Over 40 Years.
This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates it cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.
Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

Westward the star of empire takes its way, and the Russian influenzaways is traveling in the same direction. Two drummers met at the Lilley House yesterday, and while partaking of their after dinner cigar, the discussion urned on this subject. Said No. one:

"Why do they call it the "Grippe?"

"Because," said No. two, "it was brought over into this country in a drummer's grip sack."

At the last public dinner in New York which Henry W. Grady attended he sat opposite Chauncy M. Depew, says the New York Sun. Toward the end of the banquet Mr. Grady remarked to a gentleman by his side:

"I've been watching Mr. Depuy, and I notice he drinks no wine. Is that his custom?"

"Yes, he drinks almost nothing. The greatest indulgence I ever knew him to allow himself was to barely sip occasionally from his champagne glass."

The HERALD would like to see:—

A good block pavement on Chicago street.

An electric light plant in Tecumseh.

Five hundred new names on our subscription list.

And we are prepared to bet a plug hat with any responsible citizen that the HERALD will see all these things before Jan. 1st. 1891.

The new year arrived yesterday under an umbrella. Navigation is now opened from Galveston to the Straits of Mackinac and from Devils Lake to Dundee. Our friends who wish to pay their subscriptions in cash, can remit by postal note or registered letter. Those who wish to pay in wood, onions or sauer kraut, can rent a flat boat or a gum tree canoe.

The HERALD has struck a new correspondent at Britton. With the single exception of the Pastor, we consider him the most pious man in that town. He is'nt much at gunning for bear, but he can wield the plumbago like a veteran. In last week's HERALD he gave an account of the Christmas hunt, in which the name of Joe Hunter was mentioned with special courtesy and consideration. We have been to some trouble to post ourselves on the subject and we learn that Mr. Hunter was the chief Hunter in that hunt; that he was the high mogul of the occasion, the main spoke in the wheel, as it were. Judge of our wonder and amazement, therefore, at receiving the following letter, which reached this office on the last day of the year at thirteen minutes past one o'clock in the afternoon:

Mr Stacy Sir
I see by an articrl in your Papper under the heading of Britton Bugget whare my name is yoused in a Slang manner an I take it as an insult
Hereafter I Forbid you Printing my name in any such way as it is that artical
It would be as well if you would get a corspondant that would not abuse People

Resp J. E. Hunter

We read this letter through ten times. We perused it top side up, up side down, and side ways. We read it both with and without spectacles. We examined it critically with an opera glass, a telescope and a photographer's camera. After much examination and tribulation and hesitation and procastination, we arrived at the conclusion that the letter must be a forgery. Some irresponsible scape-grace has put up a job, to bring disrepute on the HERALD correspondent, and to involve Mr. Hunter and ourselves in litigation. The very first day that brings a cessation of the deluge, we shall visit Britton, either by rail or boat, and engage Jay Santus or some other equally good private detective, to hunt the rascal down.

This is the season of the year for pan cakes and good resolutions. But the wise man will not indulge too freely in either. A surfeit of pan cakes is likely to produce dyspepsia. Too many good resolutions at once are liable to cause a rush of blood to the brain and bring about a relapse. Even the good things of this life should be indulged in with temperance and moderation.

Blood vs. Nerves.

Great mistakes have been made in the world, by supposing many nervous troubles were due to bad blood. Thus headache, fits, dizziness, sleeplessness, etc., are always due to weakness or irritation of the nerves of the brain: dyspepsia, pain, wind, etc. to weakness of the nerves of the stomach: weak lungs is caused by weakness of the parts: billiousness, constipation, etc. to weakness of the nerves of the liver or bowels: pains, irregularity, sterility to derangement of the uterine nerves. For all weakness, Dr. Miles' great nerve and brain food surpasses all other remedies. Trial bottle free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

The members of the Farmers' Social Club in large numbers gathered at the residence of F. C. Rector, Dec. 27. Those assigned places on the program were all present, ready to respond. The dialogue between Mr. Pickwick and Mrs. Wardell brought down the house. The leader of the pronouncing contest had armed herself with 50 words but before using any great proportion of them the club was all very comfortably seated. The question as to the advisability of dehorning cattle, was quite generally discussed by the gentlemen of the club and visitors present. Mr. Rector, who opened the discussion, had very little experience, but was decidedly in favor of the system. His ideas were endorsed by Mr. Gillespie and Mr. Kehoe, both having had some experience which had proved satisfactory. Mr. Horten thought if it was not injurious, it was best to remove them. I. H. Schreder and J. Fisher were very emphatic against the system, pronouncing it cruel and uncalled for. Aaron Waldron said if they did not want the horns, keep those breeds which did not produce them, as he did. O. B. Finch thought there were times when a man was certainly justified in dehorning, though it was cruel. A. P. Coddington had no experience, but from evidence by those who had, thought it was advisable, especially in large herds. A majority seemed to favor the plan. This painful subject was sweetened by the contents of a box presented to the club by Will Anderson, of Tecumseh, for which he received a hearty vote of thanks and an urgent invitation to come again.

The club then adjourned to meet in five weeks at R. B. Gillespie's, with an interesting program which will be published later.

TO OUR READERS.

This is the time of year when our readers are wondering which is the best periodical in the United States for them to subscribe for during the coming year. We unhesitatingly recommend them to take The Independent. It is by far the largest, the most instructive, and the most interesting weekly newspaper published in the country, if not in the world. It has regularly 32 folio pages, but it increases this number frequently to 36 and 40, and sometimes even to 48 pages. These are filled with the best articles, stories and poems that this country and Europe can furnish. Every conceivable topic of religious, political, social and literary interest, is fully and freely discussed. It has a score of departments, embracing nearly all branches of human interest. The Independent is above all things a family newspaper, and as such we recommend it to you. We would at least advise that you send thirty cents in postage stamps for a ont o's trial of the paper. That will fully persuade you to subscribe. The yearly subscription price is $3.00, or two years for $5.00.

SCROFULA FROM CHILDHOOD.

The following is an extract taken from a letter received from Mr. T. A. Sizemore, of Piedmont, S. C., and written under date of November 6, 1889:

"I am now 28 years old and from the time I was seven years of age until 1885, I suffered with a severe case of scrofula. During that time I took every known remedy, but to no purpose. My father took me to North Carlonia, where I was put under the treatment of an eminent physician. The medicines given me had only a temporary effect, for shortly after my return the scrofula broke out in a more malignant form and I was worse off than ever before.

"In 1885 I discontinued taking all other medicines and commenced taking Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) I took a number of bottles and it cured me. I have been free from scrofula from that time until now."

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Peter Fisher of Blissfield, got an increase of pension for a Christmas present.

A Young Peoples Society of Christian Endeavor has been organized at Petersburg.

Prof. F. R. Hathaway of Raisin Valley Seminary attended the State teachers association at Lansing last week.

The "hard times" social to be given by the Macon Grange, Jan. 8th, is a new thing perhaps and yet not a new thing in these hard times.

The Cincinnati, Jackson & Mackinaw railroad have placed an order for 500 new box cars and five new engines to be delivered about the first of February.

Christmas Day was the warmest and mildest ever known in Michigan. Another peculiar feature of the day was the heavy thunder shower in the evening.

County banks are reporting the circulation of dangerous counterfeit dollars. Look out for them. It is said they have a genuine appearance and the true ring, but are a trifle light.

We learn that Rev. Getchell has about decided to take a rest from regular ministerial work after the close of his present year's engagement. He has worked hard especially so the past year.—Manchester Enterprise.

After mature deliberation we have come to the conclusion not to print any more papers in 1889, and we will devote to-morrow to starting the new year on Thursday with a clear conscience. Now everybody else go and do like wise.—Adrian Times.

During the gale of last Sunday morning the smoke stacks at the paper mill were blown down and demolished, and in consequence the mill has been idle during the week; smoke stack at the stave mill was also blown down at the same time.—Dundee Reporter.

Howard Underhill, of Rome, didn't believe the warm December weather should be without profit to the farmer and since he couldn't kill hogs, draw wheat or produce to market, he got out his plow and has 25 acres ready for oats or corn in the spring.—Adrian Press.

The business men generally of Hudson, Morenci or Tecumseh, do twice as much advertising in proportion to the size of their villages and their fields for business as Adrian business men: It is funny, but it is so. There are some live advertisers in Adrian, but the majority of the business men advertise but little.—The Lance.

"The oldest inhabitant" has survived long enough to tell us that the kind of winter we are having in Michgan, is just like it was in the State when he was a boy. "Never had no snow, them days till after Christmas 'n' New Years'" remarks the old man, as he bulges the bottom of his pantaloons pocket and brings up a hunk of old time plug.—Adrian Press.

John Wanamaker, the great Philadelphia advertiser, says: "To discontinue an advertisement is like taking down your sign. If you want to do business you must let people know it. I would as soon think of doing business without clerks as without advertising. I have always acted on that idea. Result—my success in business."

The soft weather has a drooping effect on the Mackinaw sink hole. It goes down every day or two, and the workmen are apparently making but little progress so far as permanent improvement is concerned. It differs from the model newspaper subscriber, who is always ready to settle up, whereas the sink hole is always ready to settle down.—Hudson Post.

Frank Coonrood, the engineer of the Bryan electric light works, is getting the Hudson station in running order. Monday he looked in the rear door under the boiler to see if the crude oil was burning all right. The draft created by the door being opened caused the flame to flash out, burning the upper portion of his face quite seriously. His moustache and eyebrows were burned off, and one eye was injured severely.

The following item taken from the Adrian Press must have been written by the devil or mixed by the foreman: The Clayton Clarion last week seemed undecided whether to breathe another week or let go and die sort o' easy like His is the second or third cranium to be filled with a knowledge by experience, understand that by observation, yet Clay that Clayton is hardly large enough to sustain a newspaper. Most people can ton will do more according to size and population than any little place in the State.

Good roads attract population as well as good schools and good churches. Good roads increase the valuation of property. So that it is said that a farm situated five miles from market connected by a bad road is less valuable than one ten miles from the village connected by a good road. Farmers should take this matter under consideration and when they work country roads make good what they make if it isn't more than a rod a year. Poor roads in the spring and fall are a great detriment to prosperity.

Last week we briefly noted the mysterious disappearance of Adam Stetten, Sr., of Ogden. Up to this writing nothing has been discovered of his whereabouts and the people of the township are greatly exercised over the matter. Searching parties of 100 to 200 persons have scoured nearly the whole township and every crook and corner thoroughly explored. Parties have also visited Adrian, Toledo and other places where the lost was likely to be found. Mr. Stetten left his home Thursday morning, Dec. 12th, to visit a neighbor, about two miles distant, named Hafer, and with whom he held a conversation respecting the sale of his homestead. He stayed to dinner and left Hafer's about two o'clock, going "across lots." He was seen to go into a piece of woods belonging to him by Mr. Bennington, and this is the last person that appears to have seen or to have any knowledge of him.—Blissfield Advance.

COMPLETION OF AN IMPORTANT AMERICAN ENTERPRISE.

It is about one hundred years since the first edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica appeared. Its earlier circulation in this country was very small, not 2,000 sets of any of its eight editions having been sold here. Very naturally it was not looked upon as a work for American scholars, and, in its preparation very little regard was paid to things specially American.

The Ninth Edition began upon the same basis, but, about the time its tenth volume was issued, American enterprise undertook its sale in America on the subscription plan, and already there has been placed about 100,000 sets, greatly exceeding its sale in England. With this great sale came the wide-spread discovery of the entirely "too British" character of the Britannica for American students, and hence rose the demand for an American Supplement, which would complete for American scholars the greatest of all Encyclopedias. Such a work was undertaken, therefore, about seven years since, and has just been completed.

PLAN OF ITS ISSUE.

1st. The employment of eminent American expert authorities, to examine each subject treated in the Britannica by English writers.

2d. To supplement every article of the Britannica requiring it, with information important to American subscribers.

3d. To treat subjects of recent development (not treated in the Britannica) where invention, discovery, or scientific progress made such treatment desirable.

4th. To treat of living men of eminence, such as Gladstone, Bismark, Stanley, Edison, Blaine, etc., because the biography of no living men is admitted in the Britannica.

It is worthy of notice that, while the Britannica is not subject to the protection of an American copyright, and is therefore issued here in various editions, this American supplement (designed to Americanize the Britannica) is necessarily an American enterprise, is copyrighted, and is issued in volumes exactly to match the various editions of the Britannica; and while costing more than double per volume for its issue, it is supplied at the same price as the Britannica.

This work has required years of labor in its preparation, and has received the most emphatic indorsement of the American and European Press, and of eminent scholars, from which we quote a few.

The New York Observer says:—This American Supplement to the Britannica seems to be all that is necessary to round out and complete the English work.

The Boston Journal says:—The contributors are Americans who are noted for their thorough knowledge in the departments upon which they furnish information to the supplement. The topics have been as judiciously chosen as the writers.

The Boston Evening Transcript: It will be found indispensable by those who are subscribers to the original work.

The Philadelphia Ledger says:—It is full of the original work of the highest value, which no American owner of the Britannica can afford to be without.

The Philadelphia Press says:—This excellent executed work is indispensable to every American who possesses the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

The Cincinnati Commercial Gazette says:—We are not sure but the four volumes of the American Supplement will be referred to oftener than the volumes of the Britannica proper.

The Chicago Times says:—The list of American Contributions is very long, and it embraces the best literary and statistical ability of the country. The publishers have made the Supplement in every respect the equal of the invaluable work of which it is an ally.

Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D. says:—"It is a noble work."

Hon. Benson J. Lossing, L. L. D., "It is essential to every subscriber to the Britannica."

James Parton, the Prince of American Biographers, says:—"I heartily recommend it to all who possess the original work."

Hon. Julius H. Seeley, D.D., LL.D., says: The work is full, clear, authoritative."

Rev. Jas. H. Mason Knox, D. D., President of Lafayette College, Easton, Pa., says:—"The Supplement to the Britannica is a work of very great value, and to the American student a necessary help. I recommend every purchaser of the larger work to be sure to possess the smaller as well."

A SCRAP OF PAPER.

A Scrap of Paper, to be put on the stage Jan. 9, 1890, by the Library Association, is herewith given in synopsis.

Prosper Couramont has just returned from a three years foreign tour. He finds that, during his absence, Louise, whom he had warmly admired, has become the wife of the Baron de la Glaciere, an excellent, but jealously disposed man. On visiting the Baron's country house, Prosper not only recognizes it as Louise's former house, but observes that the principal room in it presents the same appearance that it bore when he was in it last, as the suitor of Louise. He notices even that one statdette stands in its old place, while its companion piece, was broken about that time, has not been replaced. In the midst of his surprise Louise enters, whereupon Prosper recalls the past, and charges her with inconstancy in having first encouraged his suit and then broken off all intercourse with him without explanation. Louise replies that after their last meeting she had placed a note for him in the statuette according to custom, to which he had made no reply, that, being offended at his incivility, and learning shortly afterward that he had suddenly departed from home on a tour of the world, she had followed the advice of her relatives by marying the Baron—a step she does not now regret. Prosper then explains his silence by saying that on leaving Louise after their last meeting, he had come into a collision with several gentlemen outside her home which resulted in two duels, in the latter one of which he had received wounds severe enough to confine him to his room for some months, so that he had not been able to see Louise, it being impossible meanwhile for her to have heard of the duels even. It now occurs to both that the letter in question must still be concealed in the statuette, and with this idea, they make a simultaneous rush for it—she to destroy the evidence of her former attachment, he to use it in a newer love affair. After considerable fencing and trials of wit complicated by the entrance of the Baron, Brisemouche, whose sole passion is for butterflies, Anatole, his nephew, who adores Mathilde, sister to Louise; Mlle. Zenobie, a prim old maid who is trying to secure Anatole for a husband, and Suzzane de Russeville, Louise's cousin. Prosper secures the letter and conceals it successfully, as he thinks, but is challenged to give it up by Susanne, who seeks its destruction for the purpose of shielding Louise from her husband's jealousy.

The interest now centers about the old love letter—whether Prosper is to keep it or not. Susanne declares not only will she find it, but that she will make him burn it. But Prosper is so sure of having concealed the scrap of paper successfully, that he tells Susanne that it is in one of his two rooms, and defies her to find it. Susanne now begins the search, aided by Louise, but the two are interrupted by the Baron, who, having observed Prosper's strange conduct in relation to the Scrap of Paper, has become jealous. Louise, alarmed at being discovered by her husband in Prosper's apartments, seeks refuge in the inner room, after which the Baron is admitted. To screen Louise and to explain her own presence on the premises, Susanne tells the Baron that Prosper is her lover, but has not behaved properly towards her. At this the Baron explodes, which serves to complicate the already intricate plot still further. After many more strange involved vicissitudes, the letter is finally burned by Prosper but not before the flame of love has touched his heart through its instrumentality, and he becomes engaged to Susanne to whose ingenuity and good offices it is due that great mischief was not caused by the innocent Scrap of Paper.

DIED.

At his home in Raisin, Dec. 24, 1889, Peter V. Fort, aged 69 years. He was born at Hoosac, N. Y., Aug. 3d, 1820, and was a brother in-law of Prof. Wm. Payne, the present Chancellor of the Nashville University at Nashville, Tenn.

Died, near Cone, Dec. 23d, Vernie, eldest son of Emory and Emmagene Auten, aged 9 yrs., 5 mos., and 21 days.

A precious one from us is gone,
A voice we love is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled
God in his wisdom has recalled
The boon his love had given,
And though the body moulders here,
The soul is safe in Heaven.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JAN. 2, 1890

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Happy New Year.

Mrs. Wm. Gordon is visiting friends in Buffalo.

Mrs. A. Vedder and son spent New Years at Adrian.

E. Ward spent New Years at his old home in Deerfield.

Read Charles A. Everett's mill notice among the locals.

Are you going to the poultry show at Adrian, next week?

E. R. Crossman has been dangerously ill during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Burtch and daughter spent New Years at Detroit.

Miss Lena Sizer, of Adrian, visited friends in Tecumseh over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bryan and children spent Sunday at Leslie.

Mr. and Mrs. James Winans, of Toledo, are visiting at B. L. Baxter's.

Mrs. C. D. Hobart and son, of Jackson, are visiting at Mrs. L. L. Bates.

Victor E. Haywood and Frank Gaddam, of Port Huron, were in town this week.

The new officers of the Odd Fellows Lodge will be installed on Tuesday evening next.

Mrs. P. F. Adams, of Battle Creek, has been visiting relatives and friends in Tecumseh, this week.

The census bulletins have begun to arrive, No. 1 having put in appearance on the last day of the old year.

Mrs. L. Maitland and Harry Thomson, of Dover, O., have been visiting at J. S. Kinney's and Harry Tansley's the past week.

Jas. Heck was elected trustee of the Baptist church, this week, to fill vacancy made by Dr. North's term expiring. D. T. Hall was re-elected.

Hayden & Bennett is the new firm that will run the Garlinghouse livery. We wish the new firm abundant success and believe they will obtain it.

Mrs. F. R. Miles has returned to her home in Battle Creek, after spending the past week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ross.

New Years day was partially observed in Tecumseh. The banks were closed all day, and most of the stores in the evening. Owing to the rain, business was at a standstill during the entire day.

A letter from an acquaintance at St. Paul takes exceptions to the statement made by a correspondent in last week's HERALD putting the population of St. Paul at 50,000. He claims that the population of that city by the last census taken was 193,247.

The Detroit Free Press sent out with its last weekly issue of 1889 an elegant holiday souvenir. It is a combination of poems, sketches and engravings, in book form, sixteen pages, with alternate pages printed in ink of different colors, and of superior workmanship throughout. It is the most beautiful newspaper annual that has yet come to our notice.

Neatly printed card boards have been tacked up in Brewer's foundry, bearing this notice: "No visiting or loafing allowed." An excellent idea. We have been terribly annoyed by the same nuisance—ourselves—and know something about it. A firm employing a large number of hands can be seriously injured by having visitors continually interfering with their workmen.

Every preparation has been made for the great poultry show of the Southern Michigan poultry association from January 7th to 10th. The prizes are liberal and very numerous. The number of entries promise to make it the finest display of poultry ever seen in the state. Breeders from Ohio, Illinois, Indiana and Canada have applied for space. If you wish to see fine fowls, go to the show. It will be a fine exhibit.

The Garden of Eden may perhaps be made a beauty so far as appearance is concerned, but it can reach nearer perfection if one has tools with which to accomplish the results desired. The American Garden, foremost among horticultural journals, is one of the tools necessary to make an ideal garden. You cannot do without it, nor should you try to when we are able to give it to you with this paper for so little money. Look up particulars on another page.

Mr. John Whitenack, who has been seriously ill for several weeks, departed this life at six o'clock on the morning of New Year's day. His sickness has been regarded, since the first attack, as likely to prove fatal, and hence his family were not wholly unprepared for his demise. He was one of the pioneers of Tecumseh, having settled on the farm owned by Frank Davidson about 40 years ago. For the past 20 years he has resided in the village. The funeral services will be held at the family residence to-morrow, Friday afternoon, at two o'clock.

Jas. Moreland, of Adrian, was in town yesterday.

F. D. Hillman is spending the holidays with his family.

Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Collier, of Detroit, are in town this week.

Dr. R. Stephenson, of Adrian, was in town last Monday.

Lew Acker is spending New Years with his parents at Mason.

It will be the proper caper to go and see "A Scrap of Paper."

Mrs. Samuel McClure and daughter are visiting in Addison this week.

D. W. Clark, who was taken suddenly ill last week, is now on the gain.

Miss Mame Crowell visited friends in Adrian the fore part of the week.

F. I. Miller, of Wyandotte, Ohio, is visiting friends in town a few days.

The G. A. R. post have now got settled in their new quarters in Bidwell's block.

Mr. and Mrs. T. O. Perry, of Chicago, are visiting friends in town this week.

The installation of officers of the Royal Arcanum will take place next Tuesday evening, Jan. 7.

David Garlinghouse, of Napoleon, is spending a couple of weeks with his friends in Tecumseh and Macon.

Many dead branches of trees are scattered about the streets, the result of the high wind of last Sunday.

Mrs. W. B. Thompson, of Adrian, spent the latter part of last week with her brother, James M. Ingersoll.

Go and see a Scrap of Paper next Thursday evening. Doors open at 7 o'clock. Curtain rises at 8 promptly. Let everybody come.

The installation of officers of the G. A. R., W. R. C. and S. of V. take place at the new G. A. R. rooms on Friday evening, Jan. 6.

Services in the Universalist church, Sunday, Jan. 5, as follows: In the morning a sermon on "The Ideal of Christian Experience. Evening service at 7.

The National letter file cabinet is the best arrangement yet devised for filing away letters and papers. The business men of Tecumseh are invited to call and examine the cabinet in this office.

Between the first and second acts of the Scrap of Paper entertainment, the drawing for Mrs. Freeman's silk quilt will take place. A few tickets are still unsold, and those who are desirous of holding tickets should procure them at once.

Norman Jones and wife, of Centerville, Theodore Linebaugh, of Kansas and D. E. Soper, of Newaygo, all relatives of Mrs. Wm. McCowen, attended a family reunion at McCowen's, Christmas, and Dan made it merry for them all.

On the 17th day of December the Toledo Press Club gave a banquet to Rev. Fr. O'Brien, and the Menu was served at the Burnett House. We have received a copy of the same which is a very neat specimen of the typographic art.

We begin with this issue the publication of the "F. E. C. Remedy," of Rochester, N. Y. This medicine has been in the market a number of years, its merits giving it a solid popularity wherever introduced, and we commend it and its claims to the attention and patronage of our readers. It is manufactured by responsible people, who authorize the trade to guarantee satisfaction with every bottle, thus demonstrating their own confidence in its merits—a confidence that ought, under the circumstances, to be infectious.

Wm. T. Thorp's troubles have finally culminated in his death. Yesterday afternoon, about one o'clock, Ed. Prichard had occasion to go to Mr. Thorp's house on Kilbuck st. Knocking on the door failed to bring any response, and he went to the barn. Not finding anyone he returned to the house and again knocked. This time he was more successful, as the door was opened by Thorp, who almost immediately fell to the floor and expired. On a table was found a note, saying he had taken poison. Paris green is supposed to be the poison taken. No inquest is thought necessary, as the note is deemed sufficient evidence that the act was done by his own hand. Since his wife left him several weeks ago, to procure a divorce, Thorp has lived alone.

We are in receipt of the popular musical monthly, "The Song Friend." We find it filled with very interesting matter for musical people, such as musical news from all parts of the world, instructive articles for both vocal and instrumental students, and the following choice music: "Silver threads are often seen," song and chorus; "Sometime," vocal solo; and "Always or never waltzes."

There is printed in the "Song Friend" in the course of each year music that would cost in sheet form over $10.00. The subscription price is only $1.00 per year and new subscribers get a premium of THREE pieces of excellent sheet music. The publishers, S. W. Straub & Co., 243 State St., Chicago, offer very liberal terms to canvassers.

BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATION.

At a meeting held at Justice Burridge's office on the evening of Dec. 30th, a branch of the Security Building and Loan Association was organized and a local board established with the following officers:

President—R. A. Heesen.
Vice Pres.—F. D. Avery.
Secretary—P. V. Woodward.
Treasurer—C. A. Slayton.
Attorney—Chas. Burridge.
Directors—O. F. Bills, A. L. Brewer, I. C. Wolcott, P. V. Woodard, S. C. Stacy.

These building and loan associations have multiplied very rapidly in all the large cities during the past five years, and they are now being organized quite extensively in small cities and villages. The object of the organization is to enable laborers and men of small means to invest their earnings in monthly installments, in good first class securities, on which they can realize a fair rate of interest, and also have a fund from which they can borrow money to build houses for themselves. This association paid last year 20 per cent dividend for the year ending June 30th, 1889, and 4½ per cent for the first quarter of the present year. Its securities all consist of first mortgage loans, which are held by the state authorities of Minnesota in trust for the stockholders. The organization already started forms an excellent nucleus for a strong local board and it will doubtless be largely increased during the next few months.

Brainard's Musical World.

The Christmas number of this ever popular musical monthly is on our table, and it is without doubt one of the finest magazines we have seen for a long time. The cover page is printed in several beautiful colors, making it very neat and attractive. Among the original miscellany this month we find interesting biographies and portraits of Adelina Patti and Mr. Emil Liebling, the popular music teacher of Chicago. A full discription of the Chicago Auditorium, with a list of the principal artists with the Patti Opera Company, is also given. It has also the usual amount of sound musical reading from the pen of Dr. Karl Merz, and several appropriate illustrations of Christmas will be found in the December number.

We advise lovers of music to send 15 cents to publishers, for a sample copy of the Musical World, feeling sure that it will be a welcome guest. Price 15 cents single copy; $1.50 per annum. Address the publishers, The S. Brainard's Sons Co., Chicago, Ill.

Epoch

The transition from long, lingering and painful sickness to robust health marks an epoch in the life of the individual. Such a remarkable event is treasured in the memory and the agency whereby the good health has been attained is greatfully blessed. Hence it is that so much is heard in praise of Electric Bitters. So many feel they owe their restoration to health, to the use of the Great Alterative and Tonic. If you are troubled with any disease of Kidneys, Liver or Stomach, of long or short standing you will surely find relief by use of Electric Bitters. Sold at 50c. and $1 per bottle at

SUDDEN DEATH

Of the Ex-Empress of Brazil at Oporto.

One Woe Doth Tread Upon Another's Heels.

Sorrow for the Late Emperor, Dom Pedro.

LISBON, December 30.—A dispatch just receipt from Oporto says that the Ex-Empress of Brazil, who was visiting that city with Dom Pedro, has died. It is believed that her death resulted from heart disease.

OPORTO, December 30.—The illness of the Ex-Empress of Brazil first assumed an alarming phase Friday. It had been the intention of the imperial family to start for France. The doctors forbade the journey for fear that excitement and fatigue would precipitate the crisis. The empress was, however, a little better in the morning. During the morning Dom Pedro went out for a promenade and visited the Museum of Fine Arts. He was found there by the Brazilian consul, who had been dispatched to hasten his return to the hotel because the condition of the empress had suddenly become critical. Before Dom Pedro had arrived the empress was dead. The remains will be temporarily deposited in a mortuary chapel in the Lapa Convent here, and will be afterward taken to Lisbon for interment in the Royal Pantheon.

The municipal authorities of this city, returning in full state from the celebration of the king's proclamation in the cathedral, went to the hotel of the ex-emperor to offer their condolences, but Dom Pedro was so overcome by the event that he could not receive them. The Cardinal Archbishop of Oporto also called.

Telegrams of Condolence.

OPORTO, December 30.—Dom Pedro has been fairly deluged with telegrams and letters condoling with him for the loss of his wife, the ex-empress of Brazil. The last utterances of the ex-empress were expressions of regret that she could not be surrounded by her children, and that she could not return to beautiful Brazil.

The News Received in Brazil.

RIO DE JANEIRO, December 30.—The news of the death of the ex-empress of Brazil was a great shock to the people, monarchists and republicans alike. The regret is very general, for she was greatly beloved, and her charities were innumerable. She was, in fact, held in higher estimation than Dom Pedro.

HE GAMBLED

AND IT WRECKED HIS BRIGHT YOUNG LIFE.

Sensational Suicide at Terre Haute—Public Indignation Against the Open Gambling Houses.

TERRE HAUTE, IND., December 30.—A sensation was caused last night by the suicide of James Byrns, a prominent young man of this city, connected with one of the wealthiest families. The cause of the suicide was heavy losses at the gaming table. Public sentiment is wrought up to a high pitch. The probable result will be the closing up of all gambling rooms and all night saloons. Byrns was only 18 years old.

AN ARKANSAS WOMAN

Fires Three Shots at Her Erring Husband, Killing Him.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., December 30.—News of a fearful tragedy at Halt, Ark., reached here today. Franck Hickey and his wife, reputable white people, living near the town, had separated, and Hickey had been taking steps to reconcile their differences. Mrs. Hickey, however, said she would not live with her husband again under any circumstances. This infuriated Hickey and he got a warrant for her arrest, and proclaiming he would take her dead or alive, started to the house to serve it. His wife met him at the door with a revolver, and as he advanced began firing, empting three of the chambers in rapid succession. All the charges entered Hickey's body. He dropped on the ground and soon expired. There is great excitement over the killing, though public feeling is with Mrs. Hickey.

An Important Legal Question.

COLUMBUS, O., December 30.

A suit was filed in the Supreme Court today which creates an interesting legal question. The case is entitled the "State of Ohio on relation of the trustees of Canaan township, Morrow county, vs. The Board of Directors of the County Infirmary of Morrow county." The suit was originally instituted in a court of a justice of the peace in Morrow county by the trustees of the infirmary to compel the payment of a bill of $185 for medical services rendered a pauper, who had been injured and treated at their institution. The pauper resided in another county, and the trustees of the township in which the man was injured refused to pay the bill on the ground of the man's non-residence. The case was decided against the township in the 'Squire's court and also the Common Pleas and Circuit. The attorneys for the township claim that there is no law in existence which authorizes them to furnish medical treatment or sustenance for a resident of another county. The question as to the existence of such a law may result in the enactment of a measure covering cases of this nature. H. C. Hatcher, the physician who treated the pauper, recovered a judgment against the township in a mandamus suit which he brought to compel the payment of the bill. The trustees also bring this case to the Supreme Court, seeking a reversal.

Incorporations.

COLUMBUS, O., December 30.

The following articles of incorporation were filed in the office of the secretary of state: The Gibson & Price Company, Cleveland, capital stock $150,000; The Church of Christ of Mantua Station, Portage county; The German Mutual Aid Association of Cincinnati; The Fremont Home Savings & Loan Association Company, Fremont, capital stock, $500,000.

Funeral of Mrs. Admiral Rogers.

WASHINGTON, December 30.—The funeral of Mrs. Admiral Rogers took place today and was largely attended. Secretaries Blain and Tracy were present, while the navy department were strongly represented. The remains were taken to Annapolis for interment.

IMITATED HIS FATHER

And Committed Suicide—A Wealthy Suicide in New York.

NEW YORK, December 30.—Edward C. Moller, a wealthy Hoboken man, committed suicide by blowing out his brains with a revolver. He was a son of Christian Moller, the sugar refiner, who committed suicide seven years ago. He was thirty years old, was married, and had two children. Moller was a popular young man. He lived on the income of the fortune left by his father. Eight years ago his father started him in business. He lost $75,000 in a short time and it is said that it was on account of that loss that his father committed suicide. Moller had all the money he needed, and so far as is known, had no reason to commit suicide. It is supposed that he was temporarily insane.

SARA BERNHARDT

NARROWLY ESCAPES BURNING TO DEATH

At a Dress Rehearsal of Joan of Arc—Accidental Stage Fire Gives the Noted Actress a Nervous Shock.

PARIS, December 30.—A sensational incident occurred last evening during the dress rehearsal of "Joan of Arc" at the Porte Saint Martin theater. Madame Sarah Bernhardt was Joan and the rehearsal had progressed as far as the scene in which Joan was to be burned at the stake. A mass of faggots had been piled upon the stage and Bernhardt had been fastened above them when the faggots suddenly burst into flames having caught fire from a light in the hands of some stage employe. The actress shrieked with terror and fainted and was extricated from the burning pile while still unconcious. She was carried into the green room where she soon recovered, and it was found she had sustained no injuries beyond a nervous shock. The scene shifters were seriously burned, however, before the flames on the stage could be extinguished.

FOOLED WITH THE WRONG MAN.

Two Desperadoes Essay to Have Some Fun With a Stranger.

TEXARKANA, TEXAS, December 30.—At Tishwawa, I. T., on Christmas day Red Lendall and Choctaw Pete, two noted desperadoes, rode into town and firing revolvers, took possession of the town. The marshall who tried to arrest them was shot and disarmed. They attempted to ride their horses into the hotel but failing hitched them outside and demanded a dinner. A stranger well armed rode up to the hotel. Refusing to leave at the command of the outlaws one of whom covered him while the other attempted to disarm him, the stranger shot one dead, the other fired missing him. After a lively fight the second one got a bullet in his brain. The stranger rode off, citizens refusing to arrest him. It is believed he was Winchester Frank, the renowned scout.

RECOGNIZED HER ASSAILANT.

The Perpetrator of the Brazil, Ind., Outrage is Apprehended.

BRAZIL, IND., December 30.—Miss Clara Warner, the young girl who was assaulted near Coal City, some time ago, by an unknown man, today recognized James Dalgarn as her assailant. Dalgarn is the notorious forger arrested here a few days ago and now in jail. Criminal assaults on several other women have been made near Coal City recently, the circumstances surrounding which indicate the same assailant. A mob is feared tonight and extra precautions have been taken to prevent a lynching.

COOKED AND ROASTED.

Terrible Death of an Unfortunate Indiana Paralytic.

PERU, IND., December 30.—J. E. Clark, a partial paralytic and aged resident of Kokomo, went to George Wrickle's bath rooms for a bath Friday night. Clark was almost helpless and had to be assisted. Wrickle turned on the gas to heat the water, and started to do something else while waiting. Being forgetful he forgot all about Clark and left the house after locking the bath room door. Clark's body was found next morning cooked and roasted. Wrickle and two of his employes have been arrested.

An Indiana Prize Fight.

LAFAYETTE, IND., December 30.—Five hundred persons witnessed the fight between Richard Keating, of this city, who never lost a fight, and Edward Corey, of Crawfordsville. Each man weighed 185 pounds, and were equal in height. Twenty-three rounds were fought in which Corey proved himself a clever pugilist. He won the first knock down in the sixth, and was himself knocked out in the twenty-third round. The fight took place yesterday in Boone county.

A Decision on the New York Execution Law.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., December 30.—The decision in the case of Kemmler, the murderer condemned under the law providing for the execution of criminals by electricity, was handed down in general term this morning. The opinion is by Judge Dwight, and holds that electric executions are valid and the law is constitutional. The order dismissing writ of habeas corpus for Kemmler and remanding him is affirmed.

A Mother and Two Daughters Found Dead in Their Room.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., December 30.—On Saturday night Mrs. Irwin and two daughters from Benton, Mo., on the way to join her husband at Santa Paula, were asphyxiated at the Eureka hotel Oakland, and discovered by the son early Sunday morning.

Latham is Held.

NEW YORK, December 30.—James F. Latham, arrested here by the request of the chief of police of Chicago on charges of forgery, was arraigned in the Tombs police court this morning and held to await the the action of the Governor of Illinois, despite the strenuous efforts of his counsel for his release on the grounds that Latham was a man of good repute and the evidence insufficient to hold him.

Death of an Ohio Ex-Judge.

MORROW, O., December 30.—Judge John L. Wilson, prominent as a lawyer, and well known as a common pleas judge, died of apoplexy very suddenly Saturday night. He was appointed by Governor Hoadly in 1885.

A Shoe Factory Burned.

PORTLAND, ORE., December 30.—A large shoe factory near this city, valued at $35,000, burned last night. The fire was started by the explosion of a lamp.

AFTER YEARS

A Steubenville Plaintiff Wins His Suit

WHEELING, W. VA., December 30.—Saturday a railroad case which has been in the courts of this state, from the county tribunals of three counties up to the Supreme court of the state, for 22 years, was finally settled by the payment by the Pittsburg, Cincinnati and St. Louis Railway company of $23,300 to the heirs of Mrs. Marie E. Lewis, of Steubenville, Ohio. In 1857 George Marquis Chapman, a wealthy New York railroad contractor, who had been engaged in the construction of the Pittsburg & Steubenville railway, running from Pittsburg to the Ohio, and now a part of the Pittsburg, Cincinnati and St. Louis, brought suit against the company for $270,000. He got judgment after years of litigation and attached the railroad property in Hancock county, where he supposed most of the line was located. He was in error, there being but half a mile of road in that county, and this the company promptly abandoned. More litigation followed, and finally the company compromised in 1887 for $80,000. Today's settlement was the last of that amount. The history of the case would fill a book.

PHILADELPHIA "ELKS"

Dedicate Their New Hall, One of the Finest in the Country.

PHILADELPHIA, December 30.—The new hall erected by the Philadelphia Lodge of Elks, at 252 North Ninth street, was dedicated with appropriate ceremonies in the afternoon. The services, which were interspersed with vocal and instrumental music, were interesting and impressive. The new building covers a lot 25x126 feet, and is a handsome four story brick structure with a highly ornamented front. The lodge-room is one of the finest in the country, and there are also in the building a handsomely furnished reception room and a large banqueting hall, besides several fine rooms for rental to other societies. Following the dedication services, the members of the lodge and several hundred visiting brothers partook of an excellent collation.

DANGER SIGNALS.

An exchange cites an instance, how reason sometimes deserts its throne, very strange in some of its aspects, but the more remarkable in its cause; a cause which gives warning to many obstinate people. The circumstance is that of a gentleman, who, whilseated at his dinner-table, surrounded by his family, suddenly became frantic, and brandishing a carving knife drove his wife and children from the house. In an instant he had become a raving maniac. The cause was said to be an unremitting pain in his head, which he suffered for months, (a danger-signal unheeded), which finally resulted in congestion and in overturning his brain. He never recovered. A similar case is the following, which however, under different treatment resulted in saving and prolonging a life. Mr. Sam'l B. Shipler, Paragon, Indiana, writes July 30, 1883, that he had suffered with pains in his head from sunstroke for 23 years, which were cured by St. Jacobs Oil and have remained so four years. The final result might have been in his case, without this sure relief, death or something worse—an incurable mania. Congestion takes place in the muscles as well as the nerves and rheumatism is traceable, very often, directly to a congested condition. For instance, a sudden draft of air to the heated body causes a chill and the chill produces congestion.

Tecumseh Herald

CLEOPATRA.

Being an Account of the Fall and Vengeance of Harmachis, the Royal Egyptian.

"See thou this, Harmachis: thy treachery shall be cloaked about as much as may be. Was it, then, thy fault that a Roman knave betrayed thy plans? that, thereon, thou wast drugged, thy secret papers stolen and their key guessed? Will it, then, be a blame to thee that, the great plot being broken and those who built it scattered, thou, still faithful to thy trust, didst serve thee of such means as Nature gave thee, and win the heart of Egypt's Queen, that, through her gentle love, thou mightest yet attain thy ends and spread thy wings of power across the coiling Nile? Am I an ill-counselor, thinkest thou, Harmachis?"

I lifted my head, and a ray of hope crept into the darkness of my heart; for when men fall they grasp at feathers. Then, for the first time, I spoke.

"And those with me—those who trusted me—what of them?"

"Ay," she answered, "Amenemhat, thy father, the aged Priest of Abydos; and Sepa, thy uncle, that fiery patriot, whose great heart is hid beneath so common a shell of form; and—"

Methought she would have said Charmion, but she named her not.

"And many others—oh, I know them all!"

"Ay!" I said, "what of them?"

"See thou, Harmachis," she answered, raising and placing her hand upon my arm, "for thy sake I will show mercy to them. No more will I do than must be done. I swear by my throne and by all the Gods of Egypt that not one hair of thy aged father's head shall be harmed by me; and, if it be not too late, thy uncle Sepa will I also spare, ay, and the others. I will not do as did my forefather Epiphanes, who, when the Egyptians rose against him, dragged Athinis, Pausiras, Chesuphus and Irobashtus, bound to his chariot—not as Achilles dragged Hector, but yet living—round the city walls. I will spare them all, save the Hebrews, if there be any Hebrews; for the Jews I hate."

"There are no Hebrews," I said.

"It is well," she said, "for no Hebrew will I ever spare. Am I then, indeed, so cruel a women as they say? In thy list, O Harmachis, were many doomed to die; and I have but taken the life of one Roman knave, a double traitor, for he betrayed both me and thee. Art thou not overwhelmed, Harmachis, with the weight of mercy which I give thee, because—such are a woman's reasons—thou pleasest me, Harmachis? Nay, by Serapis!" she added, with a little laugh, "I'll change my mind; I will not give thee so much for nothing. Thou shalt buy it from me, and the price shall be a heavy one—it shall be a kiss, Harmachis."

"Nay," I said, turning from that fair temptress, "the price is too heavy; I kiss no more."

"Bethink thee," she answered, with a heavy frown. "Bethink thee and choose. I am but a woman, Harmachis, and one who is not wont to sue men. Do as thou wilt; but this I say to thee—if thou dost put me away, I will gather up the mercy I have meted out. Therefore, most virtuous priest, choose thou 'twixt the heavy burden of my love and the swift death of thy aged father and of all those who plotted with him."

I glanced at her and saw that she was angered, for her eyes shone and her bosom heaved. So, sighing, I kissed her, thereby setting the seal upon my shame and bondage. Then smiling like the triumphant Aphrodite of the Greeks, she went thence, bearing the dagger with her.

Not yet did I know how deeply I was betrayed; or why I still was left to draw the breath of life; or why Cleopatra, the tiger-hearted, had grown merciful. I did not know that she feared to slay me lest, so strong was the plot and so feeble her hold upon the Double Crown, the tumult that might tread hard upon the tidings of my murder should—even when I was no more—shake her from the throne. I did not know that because of fear and the weight of policy only she showed scant mercy to those whom I had betrayed, or that because of cunning and not for the holy sake of woman's love—though, in truth, she liked me well enough—she chose rather to bind me to her by the fibers of my heart. And yet this will I say in her behalf: Even when the danger-cloud had melted from her sky she kept her faith, nor, save Paulus and one other, did any suffer the utmost penalty of death for their part in the great plot against Cleopatra's crown and dynasty. But many other things they suffered.

And so she went, leaving the vision of her glory to strive with the shame and sorrow of my heart. Oh, bitter were the hours that could now no more be made light with prayer. For the link between me and the Divine was snapped, and no more did Isis commune with her Priest. Bitter were the hours and dark, but ever through their darkness shone the starry eyes of Cleopatra, and came the echo of her whispered love. For not yet was the cup of sorrow full. Still hope lingered in my heart, and almost could I think that I had failed to some higher end, and that even in the depths of ruin I should find another and more flowery path to triumph.

For thus those do who wickedly deceive themselves, striving to lay the burden of their evil deeds upon the back of Fate, striving to believe their sin may compass good, and to murder Conscience with the sharp plea of necessity. But naught can it avail, for hand in hand down the path to sin rush Remorse and Ruin, and woe to him they follow! Ay, and woe to me, who of all sinners am the chief!

CHAPTER XVI.

IMPRISONMENT OF HARMACHIS; THE SCORN OF CHARMION; THE SETTING FREE OF HARMACHIS; THE COMING OF QUINTUS DELLIUS.

FOR a space of eleven days was I thus kept prisoned in my chambers; nor did I see any one save the sentries at my door, the slaves who in silence brought me food and drink, and Cleopatra's self, who came continually. But though her words of love were many, naught would she tell me of how things went without. She came in many moods—now gay and laughing, now full of wise thoughts and speech, and now passionate only—and to every mood she gave some new-found charm. Full of talk she was as to how I should help her make Egypt great and lessen the burdens of the people and fight the Roman eagles back. And though at first I listened heavily when she spake thus, by slow advance she wrapped me closer and yet more close in her magic web, from which is no escape. My mind fell in time with hers. Then I, too, opened something of my heart, and somewhat also of the plans that I had formed for Egypt. And she seemed to listen gladly, weighing them well, and spoke of means and methods, telling me how she would purify the faith and repair the ancient temples—ay, and build new ones to the Gods. And ever she crept deeper and more deep into my heart, till at length, now that all things else had gone from me, I learned to love her with all the unspent passion of my aching soul. I had naught left to me but Cleopatra's love, and I twined my life about it, and brooded o'er it as a widow o'er her only babe. And thus the very author of my shame became my all, my dearest dear, and I loved her with a wild, deep love that grew and grew, till it seemed to swallow up the past and make the present as a dream. For she had conquered me; she had robbed me of my honor and steeped me to the lips in shame, and I, poor, blinded wretch! I kissed the rod that smote me and was her very slave.

Ay, even now, in those dreams which will come when sleep unlocks the secret heart, and sets all its terrors free to roam through the open halls of thought, I seem to see her royal form, as erst I saw it, come with arms outstretched and love's own light shining in her deep eyes, with lips apart and flowing locks, and stamped upon her face the look of utter tenderness that she alone could wear. Ay, still, after all the years, I seem to see her come as erst she came, and still I wake to know her an unutterable lie.

And thus one day she came. She had fled in haste, she said, from some great council summoned concerning the wars of Antony in Syria, and she came, as she had left the council, in all her robes of state, and in her hand the scepter, and on her brow the uræus diadem of gold. There she sat before me laughing; for, wearying of them, she had told the envoys, to whom she gave audience in the council, that she was called from their presence by a sudden message come from Rome; and to her the jest seemed merry. Suddenly she rose, took the diadem from her brow, and set it on my hair, and on my shoulders her Royal chlamys, and in my hand the scepter, and bowed the knee before me. Then, laughing again, she kissed me on the lips and said I was, indeed, her King. But, remembering how I had been crowned in the halls of Abouthis, and remembering also that wreath of roses whereof the odor haunts me yet, I rose pale with wrath and cast the trinkets from me, asking her how she dared to mock me—her caged bird! And methinks there was that about me that startled her, for she fell back.

"Nay, Harmachis," she said, "be not wroth! How knowest thou that I mock thee? How knowest thou that thou shalt not be Pharaoh in fact and deed?"

"What meanest thou?" I said. "Wilt thou, then, wed me before Egypt? How else can I be Pharaoh now?"

She cast down her eyes. "Perchance, love, 'tis in my mind to wed thee," she said gently.

"Listen!" she went on. "Thou growest pale here in this prison, and little dost thou eat. Gainsay me not! I know it from the slaves. I have kept thee here, Harmachis, for thine own sake, that is so dear to me; and for thine own sake, and thy honor's sake, must thou still seem to be my prisoner. Else wouldst thou be shamed and slain—ay, murdered secretly. But here can I meet thee no more; therefore to-morrow will I free thee in all save in the name, and thou shalt once more be seen at Court as my astronomer. And this reason will I give—that thou hast cleared thyself; and, moreover, that thy auguries as regards the war have been auguries of truth—as, indeed, they have, though thereon have I no cause to thank thee, for methinks thou didst suit thy prophecies to fit thy cause. Now farewell; for I must return to those heavy-browed ambassadors; and grow not so sudden wroth, for who knows what may come to pass 'twixt thee and me?"

And, with a little nod, she went, leaving it on my mind that she had it in her heart to take me to husband. And, of a truth, I do believe that, at this hour, such was her thought. For, if she loved me not, still she held me dear, and as yet she had not wearied of me.

On the morrow Cleopatra came not, but Charmion came—Charmion, whom I had not seen since that fatal night of ruin. She entered and stood before me, with pale face and downcast eyes, and her first words were words of bitterness.

"Pardon me," she said, in her gentle voice, "in that I dare to come to thee in Cleopatra's place. Not for long is thy joy delayed, for thou shalt see her presently.

I shrank at her words, as well I might, and, seeing her vantage, she seized it.

"I come, Harmachis—Royal no more! I come to tell thee that thou art free! Free thou art to face thine own infamy, and see it thrown back from every eye that trusted thee, even as shadows are from water. I come to tell thee that the great plot—the plot of twenty years and more—is at its utter end. None have been slain, indeed, unless 'tis Sepa, who has vanished. But all the leaders have been seized and put in chains, or driven from the land, and their party is no more. The storm has melted ere it burst. Khem is lost, and lost forever, for her last hope is gone! No longer may she struggle—now for all time must she bow her neck to the yoke, and her back to the rod of the oppressor!"

I groaned aloud. "Alas, I was betrayed!" I said; "Paulus betrayed us."

"Thou wast betrayed! Nay, thou thyself wast the betrayer! How came it that thou didst not slay Cleopatra when thou wast alone with her? Answer, thou forsworn!"

"She drugged me," I said again.

"O Harmachis!" answered the pitiless girl, "how low art thou fallen from that Prince whom once I knew! thou who dost not scorn to be a liar! Yea, thou wast drugged—drugged with a love philtre! Yea, thou didst sell Egypt and thy cause for the price of a wanton's kiss! Thou Sorrow and thou Shame!" she went on, pointing her finger at me and lifting her eyes to my face, "thou Scorn!—thou Outcast!—and thou Contempt! Deny it if thou canst. Ay, shrink from me—knowing what thou art, well mayst thou shrink! Shrink and crawl to Cleopatra's feet, and kiss her sandals till such time as it pleases her to trample thee in thy kindred dirt; but from all honest folk shrink!—shrink!"

My soul quivered beneath the lash of her bitter hate, but I had no words to answer.

"How comes it," I said at last in a heavy voice, "that thou, too, art not betrayed, but art here to taunt me, thou who once didst swear that thou didst love me? Being a woman, hast thou no pity for the frailty of man?"

"My name was not on the lists," she said, dropping her dark eyes. "Herein is an opportunity! betray me also, O Harmachis! Ay, 'tis because I once did love thee—dost thou, indeed, remember it?—that I feel thy fall the more. The shame of one whom we once have loved must in some sort become our shame, and must ever cling to us in that we blindly held a thing so base close to our inmost heart. Art thou also, then, a fool? Wouldst thou, fresh from thy royal wanton's arms, come to me for comfort—to me of all the world?"

"How know I," I said, "that it was not thou who, in thy jealous anger, didst betray our plans? Charmion, long ago Sepa warned me against thee, and of a truth now that I recall—"

"'Tis like a traitor," she broke in, reddening to her brow, "to think that all are of his family and hold a common mind! Nay, I betrayed thee not; 'twas that poor knave Paulus, whose heart failed him at the last, and who is rightly served. Nor will I stay to hear thoughts so base. Harmachis—Royal no more!—Cleopatra, Queen of Egypt, bids me say that thou art free, and that she waits thee in the Alabaster Hall."

So once more I came and went about the Court, though but sparingly, for my heart was full of shame and terror, and on every face I feared to see the scorn of those who knew me for what I was. But naught I saw, for all those who had knowledge of the plot had fled, and for her own sake no word had Charmion spoken. Also Cleopatra had put it about that I was innocent. But my guilt lay heavy on me, and made me thin and wore away the beauty of my countenance. And though I was free in name, yet was I ever watched; nor might I stir beyond the palace grounds.

And at length came the day that brought with it Quintus Dellius, that false Roman knight who ever served the rising star. He bore letters to Cleopatra from Marcus Antonius the Triumvir, who, fresh from the victory of Philippi, was now in Asia, wringing gold from the subject kings wherewith to satisfy the greed of his legionaries.

Well do I mind me of the day. Cleopatra, clad in her robes of state, attended by the officers of her Court, among whom I stood, sat in the great hall on her throne of gold, and bade the heralds admit the Ambassador of Antony the Triumvir. The great doors were thrown wide, and amidst the blare of trumpets and salutes of the Gallic guards, clad in glittering golden armor and a scarlet cloak of silk, came the Roman in, followed by his suite of officers. Smooth-faced he was and fair to look upon, and with a supple form; but his mouth was cold, and false were his shifting eyes. And while the heralds called out his name, titles and offices, as a man who is amazed he fixed his gaze on Cleopatra, who sat on her throne radiant with beauty. Then, when the heralds had made an end, and he still stood thus, not stirring, Cleopatra spoke in the Roman tongue:

HE FIXED HIS GAZE ON CLEOPATRA.

"Greeting to thee, noble Dellius, envoy of the most mighty Antony, whose shadow lies across the world as though Mars himself now towered up above us petty Princes—greetings and welcome to our poor city of Alexandria. Unfold, we pray thee, the purpose of thy coming."

Still the crafty Dellius made no answer but stood as a man amazed.

"What ails thee, noble Dellius, that thou dost not speak?" asked Cleopatra. "Hast thou then wandered so long in Asia that doors of Roman speech are shut to thee? What tongue hast thou? Name it and we'll speak therein—for to us are all tongues known."

Then at last he spoke, in a soft, full voice: "Oh, pardon me, most mighty Egypt, if I have thus been stricken dumb before thee; but too great beauty, like Death himself, doth paralyze the tongue and steal our sense away. The eyes of him who looks upon the fires of the mid-day sun are blind to all beside, and thus this sudden vision of thy glory, Royal Egypt, did o'erwhelm my mind, and leave me helpless and unwitting of all things else."

"Of a truth, noble Dellius," answered Cleopatra, "they teach a pretty school of flattery yonder in Cilicia."

"How goes the saying here in Alexandria?" replied the courtly Roman. "'The breath of flattery can not waft a cloud,' does it not? But to my task. Here, Royal Egypt, are letters under the hand and seal of noble Antony treating of certain matters of the State. Is it thy pleasure that I should read them?"

"Break the seals and read," she answered.

And bowing, he broke the seals and read.

"The Triumviri Reipublicæ Constituendæ, by the mouth of Marcus Antonius, the Triumvir, to Cleopatra, by grace of the Roman people, Queen of Upper and Lower Egypt, send greeting. Whereas, it has come to our knowledge that thou, Cleopatra, hast, contrary to thy promise and thy duty, both by thy servant Allienus and by thy servant Serapion, the Governor of Cyprus, aided the rebel murderer Cassius against the arms of the most noble Triumvirate. And, whereas, it has come to our knowledge that thou thyself wast but lately making ready a great fleet to this end. We summon thee that thou dost without delay journey to Cilicia, there to meet the noble Antony, and in person make answer concerning these charges which are laid against thee. And we warn thee that if thou dost disobey this, our summons, it is at thy peril. Farewell."

The eyes of Cleopatra flashed as she hearkened to these high words, and I saw her hands tighten on the golden lions' heads whereon they rested.

"We have had the flattery," she said, "and now, lest we be cloyed with sweets, we have its antidote! Listen thou, Dellius. The charges in that letter, or, rather, in that writ of summons, are false, as all folk can bear us witness. But it is not now, and it is not to thee, that we will make defense of our acts of war and policy. Nor will we leave our kingdom to journey into far Cilicia, and there, like some poor suppliant at law, to plead our cause before the court of the noble Antony. If Antony will have speech with us and inquire concerning these high matters, the sea is open and his welcome shall be royal. Let him come hither. That is our answer to thee and to the Triumvirate, O Dellius!"

But Dellius smiled as one who would put away the weight of wrath, and once more spoke.

"Royal Egypt, thou knowest not the noble Antony. Stern is he on paper, and ever does he set down his thoughts as though his stylus were a spear dipped in the blood of men. But, face to face with him, thou, of all the world, shalt find him the gentlest warrior that ever won a battle. Be advised, O Egypt! and come. Send me not hence with such angry words, for if thou dost draw Antony to Alexandria, then woe to Alexandria, to the people of the Nile, and to thee, O Egypt. For then will he come armed and breathing war, and hard shall it go with thee who dost defy the gathered might of Rome. I pray thee, then, obey this summons. Come to Cilicia; come with peaceful gifts and not in arms. Come in thy beauty, and tricked in thy best attire, and naught hast thou to fear from the noble Antony." He paused and looked at her meaningly; while I, taking his drift, felt the angry blood surge into my face.

Cleopatra, too, understood, for I saw her rest her chin upon her hand while the dark cloud of thought gathered in her eyes. For a time thus she sat, while the crafty Dellius watched her curiously. And Charmion, standing with the other maidens by the throne, she also read his meaning, for her face lit up, as in the evening lights a summer cloud when the broad lightning flares behind it. Then once more it grew pale and quiet.

At length Cleopatra spoke. "This is a heavy matter," she said; "and, therefore, noble Dellius, must we have time to let our judgment ripen. Rest thou here, and make thee as merry as our poor circumstance allows. Within ten days shalt thou have thy answer."

A moment the envoy thought, then, smiling, made reply: "It is well, O Egypt; on the tenth day from now will I attend for mine answer, and on the eleventh I sail hence to join Antony my Lord."

Once more, at a sign from Cleopatra, the trumpets blared, and, bowing, he withdrew.

CHAPTER XVII.

OF THE TROUBLE OF CLEOPATRA; OF HER OATH TO HARMACHIS; AND OF THE TELLING BY HARMACHIS TO CLEOPATRA OF THE SECRET OF THE TREASURE THAT LAY BENEATH "HER."

THAT same night Cleopatra summoned me to her private chamber. I went, and found her much troubled in mind; never before had I seen her so deeply moved. She was alone, and, like some trapped lioness, walking to and fro across the marble floor, while thought chased thought across her mind, each, as clouds scudding o'er the sea, for a moment casting a shadow in her deep eyes.

"So thou art come, Harmachis," she said, resting for awhile, as she took my hand. "Counsel me, for never did I need counsel more. Oh, what days have the Gods measured out to me—days restless as the ocean! No peace have I known from childhood up, and it seems none shall I ever know. Scarce by a very little have I escaped thy dagger's point, Harmachis, when this new trouble, that, like a storm, has gathered beneath the horizon's rim, bursts sudden o'er me. Ye mark that tigrish fop? Well should I love to trap him! How soft he spoke! Ay, like a cat he purred, and all the time he stretched his claws. Didst mark the letter, too? It has an ugly look. I know this Antony. When I was but a child budding into womanhood, I saw him; but my eyes were ever quick and I took his measure. Half Hercules and half a fool, with a dash of genius veining his folly through. Easily led by those who enter at the gates of his voluptuous sense; but if crossed, an iron foe. True to his friends, if, indeed, he loves them, and oftentimes false to his own interest. Generous, hardy and in adversity a man of virtue; in prosperity a sot and a slave to women. How deal with such a man, whom Fate and Opportunity have, despite himself, set on the crest of fortune's wave? One day 'twill o'erwhelm him; but till that day he sweeps across the world and laughs at those who drown."

"Antony is but a man," I answered, "and a man with many foes; and, being but a man, he can be o'erthrown."

"Ay, he can be o'erthrown; but he is one of three, Harmachis. Now that Cassius has gone where all fools go, Rome has thrown out a hydra head. Crush one and another hisses in thy face. There's Lepidus, and with him that young Octavianus, whose cold eyes may yet with a smile of triumph look on the murdered forms of empty, worthless Lepidus, of Antony, and of Cleopatra. If I go not to Cilicia, mark thou! Antony will knit up a peace with these Parthians, and taking the tales they tell of me for truth—and indeed there is truth in them—will fall with all his force on Egypt. And how then?"

"How then? Why, then we'll drum him back to Rome."

"Ah! Thou savest so, and perchance, Harmachis, had I not won that game we played together some twelve days gone, thou, being Pharaoh, mightest well have done this thing, for round thy throne old Egypt would have gathered. But Egypt loves not me nor my Greek blood; and but now have I scattered that great plot of thine, wherein half the land was meshed. Will these men, then, arise to succor me? Were Egypt true to me I could, indeed, hold my own against all the force that Rome may bring; but Egypt hates me, and had as lief be ruled by the Roman as the Greek. Still might I make defense had I the gold, for with money soldiers can be bought wherewith to feed the maw of mercenary battle. But I have none; my treasuries are dry, and though there is wealth in the land, yet do debts perplex me. These wars have brought me ruin, and I know not how to find a talent. Perchance, Harmachis, thou who art, by hereditary right, Priest of the Pyramids," and she drew near and looked me in the eyes, "perchance, if long descended rumor does not lie, thou canst tell me where I can touch the gold to save thy land from ruin and myself from the grasp of Antony? Say, is it so?"

I thought awhile, and then I answered:

"And if such a tale were true, and if I could show thee treasure stored by the mighty Pharaohs of the most far-off age against the needs of Khem, how can I know that thou wouldst indeed make use of that wealth to those good ends?"

"Is there, then, a treasure?" she asked, curiously. "Nay, fret me not, Harmachis; for of a truth the very name of gold at this time of want is like the sight of water in the desert."

"I believe," I said, "that there is such a treasure, though I myself have never seen it. But this I know, that if it still lie in the place where it was set, 'tis because so heavy a curse shall rest upon him who wickedly and for selfish ends shall lay hands thereon that none of those Pharaohs to whom it hath been shown have dared to touch it, whatever their need."

"So," she said, "they were cowardly aforetime, or else was their need not great. Wilt thou show me this treasure, then, Harmachis?"

"Perchance," I answered, "I will show it to thee, if it still be there, when thou hast sworn that thou wilt use it to defend Egypt from this Roman Antony and for the welfare of her people."

"I swear it!" she said earnestly. "Oh, I swear by every God in Khem that if thou showest me this great treasure I will defy Antony and send Dellius back to Cilicia with words more sharp than those he brought. Ay, I'll do more, Harmachis: so soon as may be, I will take thee to husband before all the world, and thou thyself shalt carry out thy plans and beat the Roman eagles off."

Thus she spoke, gazing at me with truthful, earnest eyes. I believed her, and for the first time since my fall was for a moment happy, thinking that all was not lost to me, and that with Cleopatra, whom I loved thus madly, I might yet win my place and power back.

"Swear it, Cleopatra!" I said.

"I swear, Beloved! and thus I seal my oath!" and she kissed me on the forehead. And I, too, kissed her; and we talked of what we would do when we were wed, and how we should overcome the Roman.

And thus was I again beguiled; though verily I believe that, had it not been for the jealous anger of Charmion—which, as shall be seen, was ever urging her forward to fresh deeds of shame—Cleopatra would have wedded me and broken with the Roman. And indeed, in the issue, it had been better for her and Egypt.

MR. GLADSTONE'S 80TH BIRTHDAY.

The Grand Old Man Eloquent, Reaches His Four Score Years.

LONDON, December 30.—Mr. Gladstone has received 200 telegrams and 500 letters of congratulation. The first telegram received was from the Prince and Princes of Wales.

WILLIAM E. GLADSTONE

The 80th anniversary of Mr. Gladstone's birth absorbed so much attention as to make of this quiet Sabbath a day of national remembrance. The telegrams and letters of congratulation and admiration poured into Hawarden from not only all quarters of England, but literally from all parts of the world, many coming from Australia, America and India. All the members of the Gladstone family branches were gathered at Hawarden to meet and greet heir eminent kinsman. The church attended by Mr. Gladstone was crowded at the morning service, and a large throng remained outside, unable to gain admittance. Mr. Gladstone took his usual part in the service, reading the lessons, and said a few words of devout thankfulness for the blessings of health and friendship. The scene was such as Shakespeare might have had in mind in describing the ride of old age, surrounded by troops of friends showing love, honor and obedience. Besides those who might have been expected to send congratulations as a matter of course, personal friends and political admirers, many contributed whose offering of remembrance attracted more than ordinary attention. Among these may be mention the Countess Tolstoi, the sperker of the House of commons, and a number of prominent unionists.

Conscience Stricken Importer.

WASHINGTON, December 28.—Treasurer Huston has received a conscience contribution of $625 transmitted by a Philadelphia lawyer named Samuel B. Huey. Accompanying it was the following letter from Huey: "A client of mine has been carefully going over his affairs and finds there are certain duties which he should have paid the government on cigars and other luxuries which he consumed during during the past few years. As he foots them up they amount to $625. He handed me that sum and I now send it to you. He does not care to have his name disclosed."

Sued for $5,000.

DANVERS, MASS., December 28.—The heirs of Gilman A. Kimball, of Middleton, have begun suit against the Red Men's Fraternal Association for $5,000, the amount of a policy held by Kimball who died of hydrophobia. The association claims that such death is not accidental and that it is not liable for payment on the policy.

One Died on the Voyage.

LEWES, DEL, December 28.—The British steamer Trinidad, Captain Frazier, from Santa Cruse for New York with passengers and sugar, arrived at the breakwater last night short of coal. One steerage passenger died on the voyage and will be buried here.

N. Y. TRIBUNE FOR 1890.

During 1890 the New York Tribune will be greatly improved in quality and made more lively, fresh and readable than ever before in its history. Among the special contributors during 1890 will be Andrew Carnegie, Gail Hamilton, Terence V. Powderly, Chauncey M. Depew, Senator John J. Ingalls, Mrs. John A. Logan, Rev. Dr. John R. Paxton and others. Other contributors will be announced hereafter. The articles will cost many thousands of dollars and appear in The Tribune only.

SOLDIERS' STORIES.

The Tribune will also print, in addition to its regular G. A. R. and S. of V. page, a number of entertaining stories of actual experience in the war, not less than 25 in number, each a page of The Tribune in length, by privates and officers of the Union, of a rank not higher than than that of captain. Veterans are invited to contribute to this series of stories. Every tale accepted will be paid for at regular newspaper rates. Prizes of $250, $150 and $75 will be paid for the best three. Manuscripts must be enclosed to "The Tribune, New York," and inscribed "Soldiers' Department."

PAPERS ON FARMING.

In addition to our regular and extremely able agricultural department (two pages a week), The Tribune will print a number of long and carefully prepared articles on particular branches of farming, written by practical experts. Farmers who want to make money out of their farms must read these special contributions in The Tribune. The best Tribune ever seen will be supplied to readers during the coming year. A large number of desirable and novel premiums are added to our list, and they are offered at terms which will enable our readers to obtain them practically at wholesale rates. Send 2 cent stamp for our 30 page catalogue.

VALUABLE PRIZES.

One hundred special prizes will be distributed on May 1, 1890, among the club agents who have, up to that date, sent in the largest 100 clubs of local weekly and semi-weekly sub-cribers. These prizes will include a $700 piano; a $200 cabinet organ, a $150 solitaire diamond, a free trip to New York, with expenses there paid, etc., etc., etc., being worth a total of $2,440. Prizes are fully described in our new 20 page catalogue; send 2 cent stamp for a copy. Sample copies of the Tribune free.

Subscription rates: weekly, $1 a year. Semi-weekly, $2 New subscribers receive the paper until January 1, 1890, free. Daily, $10 a year. Library of Tribune extras, 12 numbers a year, $2 The Weekly Tribune clubbed with the HERALD at $2.

THE HERALD FOR 1890.

On the 25th day of May last the HERALD entered upon the fortieth year of its publication. The 15th day of November last completed fifteen years under its present management, and we can truthfully say that the paper never had more friends or truer ones in Northern Lenawee than it has today. But, like Cæsar, we are ambitious. We aim for a larger list and a wider field to swing in, and our terms for 1890 have been adjusted with that purpose in view.

OFFER NO. ONE.

We have made arrangements with that wide awake illustrated farm magzine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct to the address of any of our subscribers who will pay up all arrearages and a year in advance. The subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. It costs you nothing. The two papers at our full rate of $1 50 per year.

OFFER NO. TWO.

The modern magazine may be taken as embodying the best literature of the world, as the magazine editor pays the highest prices to novelists, scientists, statesmen, soldiers and even kings and princes for the best they can furnish in the literary line.

You can obtain the Cosmopolitan, which gives you in a year nearly fourteen hundred pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including six hundred pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point of interest and execution at its regular price, only $2 50, and the HERALD free.

OFFER NO. THREE.

Ropp's Commercial Calculator is a practical arithmetic for practical purposes. It contains a large variety of useful, accurate and convenient tables, together with simple, short and practical methods for rapid calculations. Any subscriber paying arrearages and one year in advance, or any new subscriber paying one year in advance at full rates, $1.50 per year, will receive a copy of this book free.

OFFER NO. FOUR.

The tendency of the times is to lower prices. We offer a liberal reduction in rates for the coming year. We have adopted both a cash and a credit rate. You can pay your money and take your choice. We will furnish the HERALD alone

A man who has practised medicine for 40 years, ought to know salt from sugar; read what he says:

TOLEDO O., Jan. 10, 1887.

Messrs. F. J. Cheney & Co.—Gentlemen:—I have been in the general practice of medicine for almost forty years, and would say that in all my practice and experience have never seen a preparation that I could prescribe with as much confidence of success as I can Hall's Catarrah Cure, manufactured by you Have prescribed it a great many times and its effect is wonderful, and would say, in conclusion that I have yet to find a case of Catarrh that it would not cure, if they would take it according to directions.

Yours Truly,
L. L. GORSUCH, M. D.
Office, 215 Summit St.

We will give $100 for any case of Catarrh that can not be cured with Hall's Catarrh Cure. Taken internally.

THE INVENTIVE AGE.

The best and cheapest journal. Why? 1st.—This is the age of invention, and it contains all the latest news. 2d.—It is the only journal in the United States which contains a complete list of all new patents granted by the Government, giving a description of the patent and address of the patentee. 3d.—Each issue contains a statement of the condition of work in the Patent Office, so that every inventor can see when to expect the issue of his patent and why it is delayed. 4th.—It contains a concise report of all late patent decisions. 5th.—It publishes everything of interest to all progressive people. 6th.—It gives the most liberal premiums of any paper in the world, and costs only one dollar a year. Published at Washington, D. C.

TO YOUNG HOUSEKEEPERS.

Free to all brides. Notice is hereby given to all the readers of this paper and all their friends and acquaintances throughout the United States and Canada, that The Household will be sent one year as a wedding present to every newly married couple whose address—and 10 cents to pay postage—is sent to the publisher within one year from the date of their marriage.

Persons sending for this present are requested to send a copy of a paper containing a notice of their marriage, or some other evidence that will amount to a reasonable proof that they are entitled to the magazine under the above offer. Address, The Household, Brattleboro, Vt.

THE NATIONAL MAGAZINE.

The National Magazine for January announces two new and valuable departments—"Biblical Literature" and "Pedagogy"—with Rev. J. C. Quinn, Ph. D., and J. S. Mills, A. M., President of Western College, as editors. Agricultural readers will be especially interested in the new "Institute of Agriculture," described in this number—a part of the University Extension System of the National University of Chicago, whose non-resident or correspondence under-graduate and post-graduate courses have met with such favor. Other articles are by Prof. E. A. Birge, of the University of Wisconsin, and eminent specialists. Published at 147 Throop street, Chicago, Ill. Subscription, $1.00 per year. Sample copy, 10 cents. Three cash prizes of fifty dollars each for the best essays on "Our Common Schools," "Study of the Bible," "How to Keep Young Men on the Farm," are announced.

THE NATIONAL DEMOCRAT.

Every Democrat Should Read It. Every Seeker After Political Truth Should Read It.

We will send the National Democrat and TECUMSEH HERALD to any address within the United States for $2 25 a year. All paid up subscribers to the HERALD are entitled to the benefits of this offer.

The regular subscription price of the National Democrat is $1.50 per year, and it is well worth it. It is published weekly in the city of Washington, and each issue contains eight seven-column pages of reading matter. Send to this office for sample copies.

It has the endorsement of leading Democrats; it contains all the Washington and National news; its record of Congressional proceedings will be full and complete, and it is in every way a worthy exponent of sound Democratic Doctrine. Subscribe now and secure this staunch organ of the party of the people. The TECUMSEH HERALD and National Democrat for $2.25 per year in advance

THE NEW YORK STAR.

The New York Daily Star was established as a Democratic morning newspaper twenty years ago. It has been during that period consistently Democratic. It is now recognized by the Democratic press generally as the one daily morning newspaper of New York which is persistently Democratic. It is the organ of neither of the local factions of New York city, but is an earnest and ardent advocate of Democratic union in the City, State and Nation.

TERMS.

One year (including Sunday ed.)	$7 00
Six months - - - -	3 50

The Weekly Star, a large eight-page paper, differs in many respects from the weekly editions of other New York papers. It is not only a political but a literary paper, designed to keep men informed of the latest phases of National Politics and to present to women and the household generally the best current literature of the day.

The matter selected for the literary columns is supplied by scores of contributors of the highest merit and reputation. Their united contributions each week would make a volume as large as Harper's Monthly Magazine, and treating of many more subjects than any monthly magazine published ever discusses. It is a perfect epitome of the really important news of the week, carefully condensed and systematically arranged. Space is given to the class of literature most welcome in the home circle. Special care is taken to interest the women of the household. It does not pretend to instruct the farmer in farming, but to interest him in the general news of the world, leaving the home paper of each subscriber to supply the practical information on all agricultural topics. It is an excellent paper to obtain, through favorable club rates, along with the weekly printed in your immediate locality. For the year 1890 we offer The Weekly Star, free of postage to any part of the United States and Canada, outside the limits of New York city:

It was indeed a happy thought to print an entire novel in each number.

Not a short novelette, but a long story such as you are used to get in book form and pay from one dollar to one dollar and a half for.

Not only that, but with each number you get an abundance of other contributions, which gives you a good magazine besides the novel.

The ringing blows which have been struck on the gateway of popular favor, have resounded throughout the entire land, and to-day Lippincott's Magazine stands in the front rank of monthly publications, and is the most widely-read-and-talked-of publication of its kind in the world. ESTATE OF McCLURE MINORS.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee. ss

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Monday the 30th day of December in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Samuel R. McClure Henry W. McClure, Martha G. McClure, and Louis C. McClure, minors.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of William A. Brown, alleging among other things, that Henry McClure, deceased, did, in his lifetime, to wit., on the 16th day of March, A.D., 1887, duly execute and deliver to petitioner a contract in writing to convey to said petitioner, certain real estate described in said contract, and that said Henry McClure died without making the conveyance required by such contract. That the said premises described in said contract have been set off and assigned to said minors subject to said contract by said Court, that Samuel McClure is the guardian of said minors, and praying that said guardian may be authorized and directed to make and execute and deliver a conveyance of the real estate described in said contract to petitioner upon the terms and conditions therein mentioned, and that such other and further order and proceedings may be had in the premises as may be required by the statute in such case made and provided,

It is ordered, That Monday, the 27th day of January next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the next-of-kin of said minors, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

THE FARM AND HOUSEHOLD CYCLOPEDIA.

544 Pages! 249 Illustrations!

This book is a complete ready reference library for farmers and housekeepers, being filled with useful facts, hints and suggestions upon all subjects pertaining to rural and domestic affairs, embracing the results of experiment and research by scientific and practical men and women in all civilized countries. It contains the cream or substance of more than a dozen ordinary agricultural and household books, and is the only first-class work of the kind ever sold at less than six dollars. It is a book to be consulted every day in any emergency, and to be read at all times with interest and profit. It is such a book as every farmer and housekeeper needs and ought to have, supplying the universal want of a reliable counsellor upon every topic relating to the farm and household. The work is profusely illustrated, and is divided into two general headings, viz., THE FARM and THE HOUSEHOLD, each of which occupies half the book. These are again subdivided into a number of departments, as follows:

Rural Architecture, Fences and Gates, Field Crops, Fertilizers, The Garden, Orchard and Vineyard, Small Fruits, Live Stock, The Poultry Yard, The Dairy, The Apiary, Farm Implements, Around the Farm, Cooking Recipes, Ladies' Fancy Work, Floriculture, The Home Physician, The Toilet, The Laundry, Hints and Helps.

All of the above subjects are fully and ably treated in this valuable book. It is a vast storehouse of useful facts, hints and suggestions of the utmost value to farmers and housekeepers, and no man who has a home and an acre or more of land can afford to be without it.

BRITTON BUDGET.

John Britton's new year resolution was not to smoke or chew—and he don't.

Miss Flota Smith, of Ridgeway, has been visiting her Britton friends this week.

Geo. Exelby and Wm. Underwood with their wives visited Toledo one day last week.

W. J. Clark is down with the grippe, of which we have several cases in town, including Treasurer Laban Babcock.

Mail messenger Ab. Palmer, has been doing extra duty the past week on account of some of the boys having the La G.

That last crosswalk is a novelty in its line, sure. A person needs a step-ladder to get up at the east end and a tobogan to get down at the other.

Mike Gillen has finished painting Osborn's brick front and since the unsightly staging has been removed the building looks as bright as a new pin.

We see by the register in the Exelby House that D. H. Illick of Leesburg, Ind., is the name and nativity of the young man who worked in the telegraph office nights, while M. D. Britton ran the course of the grip.

Three of our young and enterprising townsmen conceived the idea of starting out on the road with a show. Not one of those "Uncle Tom" tent affairs, such as Will Barrett and Vinz Arner astonished the World with Not much. They propose to travel by rail, special car, and all that. In order to mature their plans these lads met last Wednesday evening, stole a pig out of Esquire Roger's pen, a pair of whiffletrees from Joe Exelby's and proceeded to hitch the porker up to an empty box car. They made such a racket as to arouse Mr. Exelby, who so frightened the boys that they fired the pig into the car and themselves over the fence and cross lots for home.

We would like to be able to say that the Bear Club held their meeting on Saturday evening as had been arranged, but they did not. Within fifteen minutes after the HERALD had been distributed through the post office, it was evident that the club would very soon hold a meeting somewhere. The crowd about the post office building was an excited one, and but for the clearheadness of Lawrence and Elmer must have culminated in a riot. Lawrence quickly rolled out of his store a box of Lenox soap—six for a quarter—which he mounted and proceeded to unfold the HERALD and read the Budget to the crowd in a nine pound voice; while for the west-siders Jess boosted Elmer as far up a telegraph pole as he could, and fixed a rail against his pants to keep him in position, placed a copy of the HERALD in his hands and forthwith the words of the "budget" began to tinkle down upon the excited people, among whom were a number of "bears," who at once commenced making the grand hailing sign. As soon as the readings were over the "bears" held a hurried consultation, and quietly dispersed. This portended a secret meeting and blood. Just a quarter to sundown a cadiverous looking "bear" came slowly out of the east, keeping in the center of Chicago street until he had arrived at a point fourteen feet west of the Wabash track, thence eight feet north, stopped, faced the east placing the heel of his right foot in the hollow of his left, and commenced digging with a scoop shovel. At first slowly, then faster and faster, until a perfect shower of saw dust, tin scraps and broken pottery filled the air, hiding the worker and his work from sight. We thought he was only digging out a skunk. We watched until the excavation was completed, then asked this Jack of Spades what he was in pursuit of. Imagine my horror, as in a decidedly nasal twang he said: "This ere's a grave to bury thatar HERALD corresponder; his corpse will be ready soon." He also informed me that there was to be a meeting that night at Hough's store. Visiting the place at an early hour, we secured a hiding in an empty molasses barrel, and with our right eye to the bung hole, we took in the proceedings. As soon as a quorum had reported the meeting was called to order, with G. W. Hough in the east; John Gibson consented to fill the west with smoke; and Richard Wiggins on third base. It was decided that if this HERALD scribbler could not be kept out of their secret meetings they had better disorganize at once. So the meeting arose to their feet and listened to the reading of Gumbo's Grab Bag, by his highness in the east. At this point John Britton, the peacemaker, took the floor and poured oil upon the troubled waters, rubbed the fur downward, and advised that the whole matter be treated as a joke. His advice was taken and the B. B. C. passed out of existence. Now if some one will only fill up that open grave we will sleep with our usual tranquility.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Jennie and Martha Lawton spent their vacation with friends in Adrian.

H. J. Williams went to Onsted Tuesday in the interest of his slating business.

Flota Smith returned Saturday evening from a visit with relatives at Britton.

Mrs. Daniel Linn's brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Craft, made them a visit last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, of Poultney, Vt., are visiting their daughter, Mrs. H. J. Williams, at present.

W. D. Stearns, formerly train despatcher for the Mackinaw R'y, was in the village Tuesday evening.

Misses Jennie Garrett and Martha Wilson, of Hillsdale, visited relatives and friends in the village last week.

Alfred and Mrs. Putnam, of Milan, were the guests of their aunt, Mrs. John Arner and family, New Year's day.

Willie Harrington is giving careful attention to one of Job's comforters, which has taken up its abode on his neck.

G. W. Jackson, wife, daughter and son, of Tecumseh, attended the marriage of Mrs. Jackson's brother, Prof. Martin Palmer.

Albert Palmer, wife and son, of Hillsdale, were among the guests to witness the marriage of his brother, Prof. Martin Palmer.

La Grippe-Influenza, late of Russia, who is making a tour of this country, is at present writing enjoying the hospitality of several of our citizens.

Efia Miller, who has been engaged in Humphrey's music store, Ionia, for the past five months, arrived home Monday for an indefinite period.

Geo. Smith, of Gratiot county, returned to his home Monday, after a week's visit with his mother and brother, Mrs. Emeline and S. P. Smith.

The attendance at the L. C. S. held at the home of Mrs. J. F. Temple Friday evening last was very good and a pleasant evening enjoyed by all present.

The week of prayer is being observed this week with a very good attendance, considering the condition of the roads. The pastor expects to hold a series of meetings following the week of prayer.

Alfred and Mrs. Lucking and children, of Detroit, were the guests of D. W. Loree and family last week. They were called to witness the marriage of Mrs. Lucking's sister, Ada Loree, to Prof. Martin Palmer.

Mrs. Bush and son Wendell, who enjoyed the holidays at Mrs. Hall's pleasant home, returned to their home in Brooklyn, N. Y., Saturday, accompanied by Miss Belle Barlow, who will spend several days with them.

Lottie Arner returned from her visit with her sister, Mrs. Anderson, of Detroit, on Saturday evening in company with her sister and niece, who are enjoying the fresh country breeze with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Arner.

The General Supply Co. received a large bill of wall paper, border and window shades Monday, also one of the Travis wall paper and border exhibitors, and when the spring trade opens up will be ready to furnish house supplies in first-class style.

School opened Monday with a full attendance. The following names were added to the roll: Irving Palmer, Claude Lowe, Rob Bailey, Vote Miller, Lulu Rappleye, Jennie Osgood, Shirley Smith. Both rooms are as full as the present seating can accommodate. The school board, however, are ready to supply desks for all who wish to attend.

Mrs. Thomas Luptor, while in the village calling on friends last week, stopped for the night with Mr. and Mrs. Wright. After retiring she got up and in searching for the lamp stepped off the landing and fell down stairs. She received several bruises and has not been able to return home yet.

Mrs. H. S. Russell, of Hudson, made a flying call in the village Thursday. She has completed her course of instructions in dress cutting and fitting, her work giving general satisfaction. Mrs Alice Barrett and Mrs. Clara Helm are authorized teachers of Mme. Kellogg's system of cutting ladies' and children's garments in the village and vicinity.

The Sunday School board, officers and teachers, met in the lecture room of the church, on Wednesday evening of last week, when the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Supt.—Rev. J. A. Lowry.
Ass't Supt.—T. H. Temple.
Sec.—F. J. Temple.
Treas.—Mary Osgood.
Librarian—Chas. M. Gove.
Chorister—Belle Barlow.
Organists—Misses Lulu Rappleye, Flota Smith, Lena Smith, Anna Osborn.

There was a large attendance at the library circle last week Tuesday evening. The program was carried out very successfully, especially the discussion. The speakers on the negative, Messrs. Geo. D. Arner and Chas. Hiscock, defended the Orator and his influence in a very interesting and pleasing manner, presenting some fine points. The committee rendered their decision in favor of the negative. The next meeting will be held on Tuesday evening of next week, at which time it will be decided whether the circle will meet again until the close of the meeting.

On Thursday evening of last week Prof. Martin Palmer and Ada Loree were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. D. W. Loree. The wedding was a quiet one; only the near relatives of the bride and groom being present. Rev. J. A. Lowry performed the ceremony which not man, but God, can righttully break asunder. The young couple were born and grew up together here and are well known to all. The bride is a lady in every sense of the word, as is the groom a gentleman worthy of imitation. They left on the evening train for Flat Rock, via Detroit. They expect to board until the Professor's school closes in the spring. We, in behalf of the host of friends left behind, extend to them our congratulations and best wishes for a long, happy, successful and prosperous life.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Watson Hunt and wife have returned from a protracted visit in Iowa.

Chassey VanDoren is up on the farm in Franklin, having returned from his trip to Virginia and Washington.

Fred. Davenport and wife, who have been visiting in North Adams and Litchfield, arrived home the last of the week.

Miss Grayson is teaching vocal music at the school house in Dist. No. 2, with a class of more than twenty. Mortimer Alexander expects to organize a class in Tipton.

Bert and Lottie Billington write from Tennessee that they are enjoying life hugely in that climate that they all like so well. They have purchased a team and now live on a farm in the mountains among the pines, a short distance from Cleveland. Mrs. Simmons has been free from her distressing headaches, and Lottie, with characteristic forgetfulness of self, writes "we are all well.

Beware of the festive chicken pie! We have read of guests being poisoned at ice cream and others festivals, but a real instance occured at a dinner party not many miles from Tipton last week; several guests were so sick that they were obliged to stay all night. We understand the physician said that all chicken pie whose upper crust was not pierced with air holes was poisonous and dangerous.

While Wm. Dunn was ploughing, one day recently, he wished to mark out a new land, he therefore tied his team to a stake; while engaged at his work the dinner bell rang and the horses, with true horse sense, felt that it was time to go; they therefore staid not on the order of their going, but went at once. Mr. Dunn was a good deal alarmed as they cleared the fence to see one of them fall to the ground without attempting to arise; but luckily she was only entangled in the harness. The only damage was a very badly demoralized plow.

FRANKLIN NEWS.

Will and Edie Spaulding drove out to Holloway Saturday.

Ernest Wisner is home from Nebraska, for a short stay.

Almus Sprague, of Gratiot county, is visiting old friends in this vicinity.

Smith German's sons were the recipients of a very enjoyable surprise party, recently.

Alpha Maxson, from Battle Creek, spent the holidays with his sister, Mrs. Smith Munger.

George and Edith Taylor drove out to Brooklyn, Christmas week on a visit to the Misses Clark.

Waite Deming and wife, of Coldwater, were visiting their relatives and old neighbors here last week.

Geo. Learnard came out from Napoleon, a few days ago, to visit his cousins Ray and Myrtle Kemp.

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Taylor returned Saturday morning from a ten days visit with Mrs. F's brother in Fowler, Ind.

Albert Taylor of Liberty, Jackson county, has been spending a few days with his grandparents and cousins here.

The high wind of Dec. 28th, leveled long stretches of fencing. On the hill south of Mr. Munger's, a large tree was blown across the road.

Wonder if any one is getting tired of mud? Still the weather is not unprecedented, as reference to an old journal of this correspondents will show. On Jan. 1, 1876, it is recorded that doors and windows were kept open all day and no fires made except for cooking.

ONSTED ODDS.

Have we heard of LaGrippe? Well, yes.

Herman Onsted visited in Tecumseh lately.

R. L. Glenn is still in the grip of neuralgia.

Mrs. Fred Morton is helpless with rheumatism at present.

The late rains have filled the ponds and creeks to overflowing.

Dill Durkee has returned home from Dakota, where he spent the summer.

Our merchants have settled down to the even tenor of their ways, since the holidays.

The Cambridge Sunday school association will convene at the church here on Saturday, Jan. 18th. All are invited to attend.

The Grangers held an entertainment on Friday evening of last week, at Fraternity Hall, where a large crowd was in attendance to witness the performance—bill, 5 cents. They intend to hold the entertainments every two weeks during the winter.

Mrs. M. O. Aldrich and daughter have made and baked during the year 1889, the following articles of food: loaves of bread, 393; doughnuts, 740; sweet cakes, 179; pies, 423 and cookies, 8492. The family averaged during the year with hired help, nine members, and Mr. M. O. Aldrich has written and mailed during 1889, 140 letters, 30 postal cards, also sent away 20 sundry packages.

TIPTON TOPICS.

Mrs. Burt Poucher is on the sick list.

Neal Derby shipped a car load of hogs last Thursday.

The influenza seems to be spreading with great rapidity.

James Updyke shipped a car load of hogs last Monday.

The Farmers' Club at Wm. Pawson's, Friday evening, was well attended.

The scholars from the Normal, having spent the holidays at home, will start for Ypilanti Monday to resume their studies.

Although the roads were rather muddy, there was a crowd at the oyster supper at John F. Smith's, last Thursday evening, and all had a pleasant time.

It is reported that Clifford Crittenden and Fred Boyd are on the sick list. The sudden change from hard study to the hearty eating of Christmas turkey does'nt seem to agree with them.

The M. E. Sunday school organized last Sunday with the following officers:

Supt.—A. Delong.
Asst. Supt.—Mrs. L. Daniels.
Treas.—Lida Simmons.
Sec'ys—Ray Kemp.
Ass't Sec'y.—Lydia Simmons.
Chorister—C. Vedder.
Organist—Maud Poucher.

An event of some importance occurred in Rollin on New Year's day, it being the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Porter Beal, probably the only couple living in the township who have enjoyed fifty years of wedded life. The attendance at the anniversary was large, for the Beal family is a large one, and has many friends. The presents were numerous and the wishes for the continued health and happiness of the worthy and aged couple hearty and sincere.—Hudson Post.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, JAN. 9

The farmers of Kansas are burning corn for fuel, as it is cheaper than coal. The "home market" has slipped a cog somewhere.

Any attempt to pass a law to regulate Congressional elections with federal bayonets will make the South more solid than ever.

Now is the time to educate the people on the tariff question. There is no danger of our learning too much on this all important topic.

"Put your money into politics," is Brother Wanamaker's advice to young men. Brother Wanamaker is consistent, at all events. He practices what he preaches.

President Harrison went duck hunting down on the Potomac flats, and killed a fat hog. His aim was as unerring as his efforts to enforce the civil service law.

The continued illness of both Sam Randall and Judge Kelley bodes no good to the friends of the war tariff. There are no other two men in public life competent to fill their places.

Mutterings of an impending revolution are wafted across the Atlantic from sunny Spain. It is more than likely that Spain will follow the example of Brazil before another new year.

The cotton and shoe factories of New England present the best record of all the industries of that section for 1889. Cotton and leather, the raw material of those industries, are both on the free list.

Chief Justice Fuller said many brilliant things in his centennial address, but none more truthful than this gem: "It is the duty of the people to support the government, not of the government to support the people."

Wheat is protected twenty cents a bushel by the tariff, corn ten cents a bushel, oats ten cents a bushel, potatoes fifteen cents a bushel. How does this tariff on export crops help the farmer? Will some friend of the war tariff rise and explain?

Several gentlemen have appeared before the ways and means committee and ably argued for a reduction of duty on alcohol used in the arts. For the benefit of a public which is altogether too quick in jumping at conclusions we would state that this does not refer to the art of painting the town red.—Washington Post.

The New York World, in speaking of Col. Shepard's offer of $500 for the privilege of writing the epitaph of Henry W. Grady, suggests that there are men in New York city who would pay more than that to write an epitaph for Shepard, if assured that it would be used at once.

The Ways and Means committee have gone at the question of tariff revision wrong end first. Instead of ascertaining the amount of revenue needed and then adjusting the tariff to raise that amount, they call on the beneficiaries of the tariff to name the rate they desire. The tax eaters are to fix the tax levy.

Merry times are these. Official dignity goes dancing with the cap and bells. The piper of a private firm pipes and the National Government hoes it down, heel and toe. But perhaps all this is only a concession to the irresistible trend of the times. Think on King Louis' coat and be comforted ye praters of Republican dignity! In concession, therefore, to the spirit of the age and the spirit governing the Postoffice Department, it is suggested that this inscription be engraved upon the big seal, "Business is Business."—Elmira Gazette.

Many people have wondered why Texas is so overwhelmingly democratic. The Chicago Times has at last solved the problem:

Mistletoe grows in Texas in large quantities. In a few words it can be shown that this is the reason why Texas is so largely democratic. Mistletoe makes girls happy when the right kind of a young man is about. The girls of Texas have mistletoe at hand upon all occasions. The only kind of young men looked upon with favor by Texas girls are democrats. Consequently a young man who is of any account in Texas is a democrat. And as all of them want to stand in with the pretty girls they all vote the democratic ticket.

THE THREE GREAT ISSUES.

In his speech at the banquet of the Boston merchants, Ex-President Cleveland presented with special force the necessity of political reform in three particulars, viz.: The tariff, the civil service and the ballot. At the dinner of the Massachusetts Tariff Reform League on New Year's Eve, the president of the League, Henry L. Pierce, laid special stress upon these subjects as the living political issues of the day. In a late interview with Ex Senator Coxe, of Pennsylvania, published in the Philadelphia Times, he formulated a platform on which he believed the Democracy could carry Pennsylvania next fall. It was brief but comprehensive, and contained only three planks—tariff reform, civil service reform, and ballot reform. These are straws perhaps, but they are very significant straws, and show the direction in which the political tide is setting. Never before has there been a time—outside of a political campaign—when the people were studying political problems so universally and earnestly as they are today. And the more these issues are studied, the more prominent they will become. The thinking, earnest men of the country, regardless of party, are rapidly coming to this platform, and the party which adopts it in good faith will fight a winning battle.

First and foremost is tariff reform, and by this we mean a fair tariff, enacted for revenue purposes. No one seriously proposes absolute free trade, but the present extortionate tariff, which was established in a great emergency to raise the immense revenues made necessary by the rebellion, should be trimmed down to a peace basis. The purely protective features of the tariff should be eliminated. All raw materials, used in manufactures, should be placed on the free list. The tariff taxes should be reduced on the necessaries of life and retained on whiskey and tobacco. The position of President Garfield was the true one, that the tariff should be revised in the direction of free trade, that the shackles placed upon commerce should be gradually taken off. Wayne McVeagh, the Attorney General in President Garfield's cabinet, made a speech at the last Massachusetts Reform Club dinner, in which he took more radical ground than many Democrats do. He said: "Modern scholarship is on the side of free trade. Nothing can be said against free trade. The decade from 1850 to 1860 was full of peace and prosperity... In that decade real and personal property increased 126 per cent. while population increased only 35 per cent." Hugh McCulloch, Secretary of the Treasury under both Grant and Arthur: is an ardent tariff reformer. The manufacturers of New England are shouting for free raw materials. A revision of the tariff and a reduction of war taxes have got to come, and speedily too.

The reform in the civil service so auspiciously begun under Cleveland's administration, should be steadily kept at the front. Although the hot heads in both parties have declared war on this reform, it has "come to stay" nevertheless. The evils connected with the spoils system have become so glaring that they are a menace to republican institutions. Congressmen have to give up their entire time to the distribution of pap, while necessary legislation is neglected. The bill introduced by Congressman Flower to have all postmasters elected by the people is a move in the right direction. That may not be the best solution of the difficulty, but it deserves careful consideration. Some plan should be adopted to put the vast majority of federal offices on a permanent basis, giving officers a fixed tenure, dependent on merit and business competency. A Republican exchange in asking for fair play for the President, says: "He has been the victim night and day, at every moment, of a furious horde of party workers clamoring for recognition." Exactly so. In plain English he has been pestered to death by the factions who are fighting for the spoils. He is compelled to suffer the really important duties of his office to shift for themselves, while he decides whether A, B, or C shall be postmaster at Pumpkin Corners.

The last issue of the trio, but of no less importance than the other two, is that of ballot reform. An unbought and untrammelled ballot, freely given and honestly counted, lies at the very foundation of our republican form of government. If the votes of large bodies of men can be bought for money, then money will certainly shape legislation to enrich the classes and enslave the masses. If wealthy manufacturers can drive their workmen to the poles like sheep and vote them in a body, then has it come to pass that American citizens are already slaves. This is an evil of such magnitude as to require heroic treatment. The negro on a Georgia plantation, the miner in a Pennsylvania coal mine, the moulder in a Detroit stove factory, should each have the privilege, which the laws grant him, of casting his ballot freely and having it counted honestly. The spoils politicians in both parties are savagely opposed to ballot reform, but the people have taken up the cry, and it is bound to move onward. Politics are rapidly crystalizing around these three great issues, and the battle of 1892 is likely to be fought on these lines. The friends of these reforms will rally together, and nail their banner on the outer wall; and upon this platform Grover Cleveland will lead them to victory.

TO THE POOR FARMERS.

This Explains Just Where the McKinley-Reed Policy Strikes at Your Prosperity.

(By T. E. Wilson.)

If you will take five minutes to read, and twenty-five minutes to think over three facts, you will never regret the use of the half hour.

1. The increase in the value of our farms during the ten years of low tariff, 1850 to 1860, was $3,373,469,586, or 10½ per cent yearly. For 20 years of high tariff, 1860 to 1880, it was $3,374,449,181, or 2½ per cent. yearly.

2. The average of your improved land was $11 per acre in 1850 and $16 in 1860, an increase in the low tariff years of $5, or 45 per cent. in the decade. Its value was $19 per acre in 1880, an increase of 9 per cent. each decade. Under a low tariff the annual increase in value per acre was 50 cents. Under a high tariff it has been only 15 cents yearly. The census next year will show no increase, but an actual decline.

3. During the 10 years between 1850 and 1860 our agricultural exports increased 250 per cent., an average of 25 per cent. yearly.

In the past 28 years our agricultural exports have increased 95 per cent., or an average of 3 per cent. yearly.

Since the last census was taken our agricultural exports have declined from $730,394,943 in 1881 to $500,840,086 in 1888, as follows:

Year	Farm Products.
1878	$536,192,873
1879	546,476,903
1880	685,961,091
1881	730,394,093
1882	552,218,819
1883	619,269,449
1884	536,315,318
1885	530,172,966
1886	484,954,595
1888	500,840,086

Our exports increased steadily though slowly, without a break, until 1882. The increase in the tariff since 1881, caused by specific duties on declining values, by doubling and trebling the duty levied in many cases, has driven down our exports below the figures for 10 years ago.

Your most profitable market is abroad and will be abroad so long as you can buy more manufactures for a bushel of corn in Liverpool than for a bushel of corn in New York. That will be so long as the purchasing power of gold is greater abroad than it is here. To keep you from exporting and selling your whole product abroad where gold has double and treble the purchasing value it has here, the American must pay you enough for it to keep it here—or tax your foreign payment so heavily you cannot send it away. This is done.

Your foreign market gives you the only control you can have of prices here by providing two customers, competing against each other for your products, making prices high.

Once confined to the "home market" your own competition with one another will destroy you. There were 2,596,096 more on farms in 1881 than were required to supply the "home market."

If you sell 200 bushels of corn in New York for $100 you can buy with it in New York 1,100 pounds of sugar or 100 yards of silk.

If an Englishman sells manufactured goods in New York for $100, he can invest it here in 1,100 pounds of sugar or 100 yards of silk, or he can take home either $100 worth of our agricultural products or $100 in gold, and with either one buy in Liverpool double what he could buy in New York with either—2,200 pounds of sugar or 200 yards of silk. He sells here for our gold or our agricultural products because either one has twice the value in Liverpool that it has here. He cannot sell here and invest in any of our products except those of agriculture, because when he gets them home they will have lost half their value. They are worth only what he could have got for his manufactures in Liverpool without the expense of the trade. He must sell here for gold or agricultural products to invest at home, or not sell at all.

With you it is the reverse. If you sell abroad and invest your payment in foreign products, you can get 2,200 pounds of sugar or 200 yards of silk; but if you bring your gold home you can get only half as much. Your gold when brought home will buy more sugar or silk in New York than your corn would have brought without the expense of the trade. You must sell abroad for foreign products—or not sell at all.

To destroy your foreign market, to limit your sales to this market alone, a tax ranging from 25 to 300 per cent. has been levied upon the foreign products you wish to take in payment for what you sell abroad. When you bring them here enough of each one is confiscated at the custom houses to make the remainder of it less in amount than you could have bought here in New York with your grain without the expense of shipping it abroad, and less than you could buy here with the foreign gold if you had brought it back.

You are engaged in supplying the people of the United States not only with what they eat, but with what they wear. When you sell your surplus abroad, and invest the foreign gold you received for it in the products of European pauper labor, bringing the latter home, you make a large profit in disposing of these "products of pauper labor" to your countrymen. You can undersell any one in business here.

Your competitors in this business are the owners of 14,500 American mills. They ask for and receive protection from you. They have no other competitor except you, and nothing enters into competition with what they produce in their mills except what you receive in payment for your farm products sold abroad. The only competition that can exist is between our American farms and our American mills. No other competition is possible, because no American can obtain anything to eat, wear or use except by his labor on a farm or in a mill or by professional or personal service.

The 14,500 organized and united mill owners declared open war on you 13 years ago. They have almost paralyzed your industry and they have deprived you of nearly all your profits. Flushed with this success, they now declare that your competition with them must be entirely stopped; that your business must be strictly confined to feeding the people of the United States and your sales limited to "American markets." Mr. McKinley says your "taxation and restraint is the dictate of enlightened patriotism," and it is proposed to still further add to the "taxation and restraint" now imposed upon you by compelling you either to sell abroad for gold and bring it back to this country, which you can do only at a loss, or to force you out of farming. They give you your choice—and it is Hobson's.

This is your business, in which no one has a right to interfere. It has been by your votes that the mill owners have been protected from your competition. You have howled even louder than they have in favor of the taxation now levied upon your payment for what you sell abroad.

If the value of your land has not increased 45 per cent. in the last ten years, it has been because you would not permit its cultivation to be profitable. If the price of your product has declined, it has been by your own act making it impossible for you to sell it abroad at a greater profit. If there is a mortgage on your farm, it represents the money that you deliberately destroyed or refused to take.

If you desire your land to decrease in value, your crops to decline in price, your mortgage to be foreclosed and your days to end in the poor house or on the highways, there is nothing more to be said. No one is your keeper, and only a fool would try to persuade you to act differently.

But, if this is not your desire, if you are willing to admit that it is possible you may have been deceived by the mill owners—organized into separate associations or Trusts and all banded together in a protective tariff league—if you are willing to think for yourself, act for yourself and decide for yourself, then there is much more to be said.

Will you not take up this subject of protection and study it during the long winter evenings? Will you not discuss it with your friends, and seek to educate them and yourself? Will you not force it upon the attention of your agricultural societies and fellow-members? Will you not organize tariff clubs whose object it is to get at the truth without reference to where truth may lead—whether to protection or tariff reform? Above all and beyond all will you not force the editors of your home papers—Republican and Democratic alike—to answer fairly and honestly each point made on either side with facts and sense—not with appeals to passion or the waving of British flags.

The war is upon you. Your situation is critical. Even if you come to a clear understanding of the dangers menacing you, it is by no means certain that you have time to save yourselves from your impending ruin. But if ruin is to come, will you not prefer to perish like men, with your eyes open to its causes and the manner in which you have brought it upon yourselves, than blindfolded, never knowing what hurt you?

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. For sale by

Effects of Modern Life.

Eminent authorities unanimously agree that the high pressure methods of modern life are rapidly making us a race of helpless invalids—subject to all manner of nervous affections, headaches, insanity, dizziness, neuralgia, backache, hysteria, nervous troubles of the heart, stomach, kidneys, brain, etc. Ladies and gentlemen who are thus afflicted, or who are compelled to keep late hours, do much mental or physical work, who worry or fret about business or domestic troubles, should remember that no other remedy in the world will so spedily cure these diseases, remove worry and the blues, induce tranquil sleep, relieve pain, or build up the brain and nervous systems, as Dr. Miles' great discovery, the Restorative Nervine. It contains no opium or morphine. Trial bottles free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

The Forum.

By the Foremost Writers in the World.

THE FORUM has won the highest place reached by any periodical; for it publishes articles by more authoritative writers and by more workers along instructive lines of activity than any other publication. It contains eleven studies of great subjects every month. It is impartial, giving hearings alike to each side. It is financially independent, and it belongs to no sect or party or "interest." It is never sensational, but it aims always to be instructive.

The FORUM is of great value to that part of my college work which deals with practical politics and current questions. Two sets are hardly enough for daily use by students.—Prof. ALFRED BUSHNELL HART, of Harvard.

I consider THE FORUM as furnishing the most intelligent and sympathetic audience that a thoughtful writer can find to address in any land.—Prof. ALEXANDER WINCHELL, of the University of Michigan.

THE FORUM continues to hold its place as the foremost of our magazines, for the variety, the value, and the weight of its contributions.—THE NEW YORK TIMES.

There has come forward no problem of grave importance since THE FORUM was established that has not been discussed in its pages by masters of the subject. Announcements of forthcoming articles can seldom be made long in advance, for THE FORUM'S discussions are always of problems of present concern. Every such problem that the year 1890 will bring forward will be discussed, whether in politics, or religion, or social science, or practical affairs. The January number will contain a reply by ex-Speaker J. G. CARLISLE to Senator Cullom's recent article on "How the Tariff Affects the Farmer."

"I was caught in a python's folds and saw fierce eyes glaring down into mine. If that tremendous coil were tightened around me, I knew that I might at once check my luggage for the undiscovered bourne. In this crisis of my fate I saw the great python's tail in close proximity to his mouth. I grasped the snake's tail and pushed a yard or two down his yawning jaws. Serpents seldom bite their prey; they lubricate it and suck it down. With such a long and cold-blooded creature, I calculated that it would take over a half a minute before the sensations of his tail could be conveyed to his head, and render him aware that he was committing suicide."

THE GLAD SONG OF MARY.

LESSON II, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JAN. 12.

Text of the Lesson, Luke i, 46-55—Commit Verses 49-51—Golden Text, Luke i, 46, 47—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Six months after Gabriel's interview with Zacharias he appeared to a young woman of the house of David, living in the town of Nazareth, whose name was Mary, with the marvelous intelligence that she was chosen of God to be the mother of the long promised Messiah; in fact, that she was the virgin of whom Isaiah had prophesied, and that her son whom she should bear was the one of whom Isaiah said that he should sit on David's throne and establish his kingdom (Isa. vii, 14; ix, 6, 7).

We must insist that there is no honest way to read these much perverted words of Gabriel concerning Mary's son (vss. 31-33) but in the light of all preceding Scripture concerning the Messiah; and, thus taking Gabriel to mean just what he says, we confidently expect that Jesus shall return to rule as king of the Jews, from David's throne, over the whole house of Israel and over the whole world, when He shall come to restore all things of which the prophets have spoken (Acts iii, 19-21). Those who tell us that Jesus is now on David's throne and that the kingdom has come, are simply perverters of the Word of God and had better read Jer. xxiii, 5-8, 36; Luke xxiv, 25-27; Acts xxiv, 14, 15; xxvi, 6, 7, etc., and study Scripture in the light of Scripture, believing what is written, however unreasonable it may appear to our foolish reasonings. Let teachers and scholars contrast the meekness and faith of Mary and her consequent approval with the unbelief of Zacharias and his consequent chastening. Compare verses 38-45 with verses 18-23.

46. "And Mary said, My soul doth magnify the Lord." Hannah said in her prayer, "My heart rejoiceth in the Lord," and David calls upon us to "magnify the Lord in him" (1 Sam. ii, 1; Ps. xxxiv, 3). The spirit of Antichrist is to "magnify one's self above all else," but the spirit of Christ will cause one to desire with Paul that "Christ may be magnified in our bodies, whether by life or by death." (Dan. xi, 36, 37; Ph. i, 20). Mary had submitted herself cheerfully and wholly to the will of God, and in these ways we, too, may daily magnify Him. It does not seem difficult, and yet who does it perfectly? Since God is truth and love, let us heartily believe all He says and cheerfully accept His will in all things.

47. "And my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour." The only way to be full of joy is to believe God, even as it is written, "The God of Hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing" (Rom. xv, 13).

48. "He hath regarded the low estate of His handmaiden." "Not many mighty, not many noble are called," but "God hath chosen the poor of this world rich in faith." "Though the Lord be high yet hath He respect unto the lowly: but the proud He knoweth afar off." He loves to dwell with the poor and contrite spirit that trembles at His word (I Cor. i, 26; Jas. ii, 5; Ps. cxxxviii). "Behold from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed." The Spirit through Elizabeth had just said "Blessed is she that believed," and so it has come ringing down all the ages since. Most honored among women no doubt Mary was, but lest we should think too highly of her, let us remember what Jesus said to one who had spoken of her blessedness, "Yea, rather, blessed are they that hear the Word of God and keep it." And again, "Whosoever shall do the will of God, the same is my brother, and my sister, and mother" (Lu. xi, 28; Mk. iii, 35).

49. "For He that is mighty hath done me great things; and holy is His name." In this song we have the pronouns "He, His, Him," applied to God twice seven times; it is all about Him and His doings reminding us that we are nothing, but He is everything. "My meditation of Him shall be sweet, I will be glad in the Lord" (Ps. civ, 34). He is the Almighty before whom we are to walk (Gen. xvii, 1) looking up to Him for everything. The Almighty God (El Shaddai) does not represent Him as simply having all power, and therefore able to do anything, but rather, as the derivation of the word Shaddai implies, the all sufficient pourer forth of all blessing; literally, the breasted one (from "Shad," signifying "breast"), and therefore representing the power of bountiful, self sacrificing love, giving and pouring itself out for others. It is often in Scripture associated with fruitfulness, or with emptying, in order to fruitfulness. Mary was poor in this world's goods, and poor in spirit, and now the Mighty One comes to her to do great things for her.

50. "His mercy is on them that fear Him, from generation to generation." The mercy, or kindness, or loving kindness (as the word is often translated) of God, is one of the glorious topics of Scripture, and especially of the Psalms. In every one of the twenty-six verses of Ps. cxxxvi, we find the words, "His mercy endureth forever," "Mercy and truth are met together," "Mercy and truth shall go before thy face," "All the paths of the Lord are mercy and truth unto such as keep His covenant and His testimonies" (Ps. lxxxv, 10; lxxxix, 14; xxv, 10). "Let Thy loving kindness and Thy truth continually preserve me," "Because thy loving kindness is better than life, my lips shall praise thee" (Ps. xl, 11; lxiii, 3). Then notice in all the epistles how grace, mercy and peace are associated; and all this loving kindness is for all who fear Him, and that forever.

51. "He hath showed strength with His arm." Perhaps looking back to the deliverance from Egypt, for the Lord had said to Moses, "I will redeem you with a stretched out arm and with great judgments." And Moses had sung, "By the greatness of Thine arm they shall be as still as a stone" (Ex. vi, 6; xv, 16). David sings of the same deliverance that God had accomplished it "with a strong hand and with a stretched out arm" (Ps. cxxxvi, 12). Let us remember that it is written, "Cursed be the man that trusteth in man and maketh flesh his arm," and therefore let us lean only on Jehovah, and let our prayer be, "Be Thou our arm every morning, our salvation also in the time of trouble" (Jer. xvii, 5; Isa. xxxiii, 2).

"He hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts." The proud, self satisfied and self sufficient cannot know His thoughts or His way. He cannot reveal Himself to them. They are against him, and all their thoughts and ways shall be overthrown. Even Nebuchadnezzar learned that "those that walk in pride He is able to abase," and the time is coming when "the loftiness of man shall be bowed down and the haughtiness of men shall be made low, and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day" (Dan. iv, 37).

52. "He hath put down the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree." Hannah sang, "He raiseth up the poor out of the dust, and lifteth up the beggar from the dunghill, to set them among princes, and to make them inherit the throne of glory" (I Sam. ii, 8). While these songs had reference to the circumstances and dealings of God with those who sang them, we must not forget that the singers were Israelites, and the spirit of God through them was singing of future as well as present things.

Eighty Biscuit.

"My family sometimes eat eighty biscuit at one meal," said a lady reflectively, as she sat with some friends on a hotel piazza, looking mountain-ward.

She had left her household cares at home, and had come to the mountain for much-needed rest, but once in a while, in a group of fellow-boarders, the talk would slip away from the scenery, the grandeur and the sunsets, to the little familiar home tasks, that were going to assert themselves again so soon.

"How do you make those eighty biscuit?" asked somebody eagerly, and I am willing to confess that somebody was myself, for I had been wanting a good biscuit recipe.

I did not stop to wonder at the number, eighty, though it seemed so enormous, for I knew that the H——family was a large one, and included five hearty men and boys among the rest.

"I make them very small," she said laughingly, in answer to some one else's exclamation, "and we have them with our baked beans Sunday mornings. Of course the biscuits are light and delicate or we could not eat so many."

Then turning to me she said: "I will write the recipe out for you some day while you are here."

"And oh!" I exclaimed," please tell me every little thing, so I cannot make a mistake!" For I was a novice then.

She kept her word, and when I came home, among the Indian baskets, the birch bark and pressed ferns in my trunk there lay the directions for the biscuit, brought down to a quantity proportioned to my family of four.

And here they are, just as she worded them in her thoughtfulness.

"One quart flour; one tablespoon white sugar; one full tablespoon butter or lard, or equal quantities of each; salt; not quite half an yeast cake dissolved in warm water.

"Rub the shortening into the flour; mix with the warm water in which the yeast has been dissolved. I mix bread very stiff, but biscuit I mix softer than bread. They rise quicker and are more delicate. Set the dough in a warm place to rise. When risen, mould on a board and set in a cool place. About an hour and a half before your meal, put the dough on your board, flatten or roll it, cut out the biscuit, and set in a warm place to rise. Be careful and not handle them more than is absolutely necessary. I take the pieces, mould them, and put them in a pan by themselves, for anything moulded takes so much longer to rise. Lard shortening makes anything more delicate, but I prefer butter. Experience will teach you more about bread and biscuit than I can. Begin early in the afternoon so they will have time to rise for your tea. If you like rolls, use scalded milk instead of water, they are delicious. Be careful in the baking, more than half the goodness depends on that."

I followed the recipe, and use it to this day, whenever we want biscuit, but I always use the milk instead of water so they will taste like rolls. The milk has to be boiled first, to insure the dough against souring. This recipe makes forty-five little biscuits, cut out with a good-sized napkin ring, and if broken into cards of four biscuit each, almost everybody will begin by taking four, so there will soon seem not to be so very many.

Social Games.

Perhaps one of the most improving and delightful games is called "The Newspaper Editor." To play this it is necessary to provide paper and pencils, to which each person keeps himself.

Every one is expected to write an essay, a piece of poetry, or do some imaginary reportorial work, such as describing a fire, a dog-fight, a murder, or anything that strikes his fancy; no names should be signed and when articles are finished they must be folded up and laid on the editor's desk. He reads each of the effusions in turn, and the fun consists in guessing the identity of the author.

A game which requires little skill and which can be indulged in by young and old, is played as follows:

Let the company place themselves all in a row, while on a table is set a pack of cards; the nearest person to the table takes the top card off, and as he looks at it says, "ten of hearts," or whatever card it may be, at the same time handing it to his neighbor, who repeats in turn the name of the card and passes it on to the next one, etc. The first person keeps taking up the top card and passing it on until the last person is reached and each one is pronouncing a different thing. Finally there is almost a Babel of sound, which sets everyone laughing and reminds one of nothing as much as a cage of chattering parrots. Should any one fail to tell his card correctly he must pay a forfeit.

A Swallow-Tail Schedule.

"I am going to get up a schedule," said a very sour young man at the club; "a schedule that will govern the wearing of dress suits. Then I'm going to go among society folks and get my plan officially adopted. After that a man will know when to wear a dress suit and when not to. The other night I went to a small supper. There wasn't more than a half a dozen gentlemen invited. In the afternoon one of the invited fellows came around and gave me a friendly tip; said the host would wear evening dress, and so would all the other boys; he just wanted to tell me so I wouldn't make any bad break, and go in a cutaway or Prince Albert.

"I thanked him, and that night donned my swallow-tail and hied myself to my host's house. Then the other fellows straggled in. I was the only man there in full dress and felt like a fool. The host and the other boys gave me the laugh, and made it as pleasant for me with their prods as possible. They had put up a job on me, and every mothers' son of them wore cutaways. Now, if there was some social rule on matters of this sort a guileless person like myself would stand some show to call these comedians down."

Cranberries will keep through the winter in a firkin of water, but to have them quite fresh the water must be changed several times during the season.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchtis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. Noyes, 149 Powers block, Rochester, N. Y.

THE NATIONAL MAGAZINE.

The National Magazine for January announces two new and valuable departments—"Biblical Literature" and "Pedagogy"—with Rev. J. C. Quinn, Ph. D., and J. S. Mills, A. M., President of Western College, as editors. Agricultural readers will be especially interested in the new "Institute of Agriculture," described in this number—a part of the University Extension System of the National University of Chicago, whose non-resident or correspondence under-graduate and post-graduate courses have met with such favor. Other articles are by Prof. E. A. Birge, of the University of Wisconsin, and eminent specialists. Published at 147 Throop street, Chicago, Ill. Subscription, $1.00 per year. Sample copy, 10 cents. Three cash prizes of fifty dollars each for the best essays on "Our Common Schools," "Study of the Bible," "How to Keep Young Men on the Farm," are announced.

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membranes of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic researches, however, has proven this to be a fact, and result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to the applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N. B.—For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet of this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 303 west King street, Toronto, Canada. [Scientific American.

Sufferers from catarrhal troubles should read the above carefully.

DR. A. TRASKS MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Sciatica, Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 50 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

MRS. GEN. CUSTER.

The Widow of the Brave Cavalry Leader and Her Work.

I occasionally meet on the street Mrs. Custer, wife of that great cavalry leader, who has often been called the "Marion" of the civil war. She spends most of her time in New York, earning her living by writing for the newspapers. I recall her when she was a beautiful young girl, known to everyone as Libby Bacon. She was the daughter of Judge Bacon, of Monroe, Mich., and long before she was of age was one of the of the most popular girls in the Wolverine State. The name of Custer is still revered by the old soldiers, especially those who live in Michigan, where he is looked upon as the real hero of the late war. Mrs. Custer is almost as much admired as her illustrious husband was. After she married the general she was nearly always by his side. For two years she virtually sat in Washington with her valise in hand, waiting to go to the front. She was always the first woman in camp after a battle, and would have been delighted to have followed her gallant husband in his impetuous onsets upon the enemy. She never seemed to know what fear was, and many times put herself in great peril. She was in Richmond two days before her husband reached there, and almost before the sound of the guns had ceased to reverberate about the Confederate capital. Just after the surrender, when her husband came up from Nottaway Court House to take her to his headquarters, he remarked "that it looked pretty bad for a general to be beaten into Richmond by his wife, after he had been trying for four years to get there first."

Of course, Custer like all other soldiers, died poor, and his wife and family are practically without resources, except the pitiful pension of $50 a month that the government has granted. Mrs. Custer has a great many relics of the war, left her by her husband and given to her by different officers of the army. Besides possessing the first flag of truce the confederates brought into our lines, as the beginning of Lee's surrender, she has the flag of truce carried by her husband into the confederate lines. She also has much valuable data about the cavalry arm of our service that has never yet been given to the public. It is really a pity that a fair history of this branch of the service has not yet been written, or even seriously contemplated. I was pleased to learn that she is getting a good income from her books and other writings.—[New York Star.

CONGRESSMAN ALLEN TALKS.

"I am on my way back to Washington and the manifold duties which are supposed to await me there," said Congressman E. P. Allen, of Ypsilanti, when encountered in the lobby of the Wayne hotel, by a Free Press reporter, last week. "Let us fervently hope that I am not in the position of the man who leaves all hope behind. I shall try to keep my gaze pretty steadily fixed upon the plumage of the American eagle. I don't know that I shall endeavor to make the glorious bird scream very vigorously during the session, but a frequent glimpse of him should be of material assistance to a fellow in keeping his bearings."

"Do you anticipate a busy session?" was inquired.

Congressman Allen smiled.

"Did you ever see a Congressional session that couldn't be made busy, providing a fellow happened to be built that way?" he asked. "An industrious man in Congress is exactly like an industrious man in any other walk of life. He can always find something to keep him pegging at. If the day happens to be too wet for plowing or sowing in the fields, he can go into the bin or the cellar, where it is dry and comfortable, and sort over his potatoes and other vegetables. There are lots of potatoes in the National House of Representatives that would be the better for being sorted over at alarmingly frequent intervals. Some of them lie too close together and generate too much heat, thereby causing dry rot."

"The tariff will doubtless engross more or less attention?"

"I suppose it will; but you can't inveigle me into anything like a tariff discussion this evening. Life is too short—or, to be more precise, my time in Detroit is too abbreviated to admit of that sort of thing. If you want to find out all about the tariff, keep your eyes on the Washington news."

The usual treatment of catarrh is very unsatisfactory, as thousands of despairing patients can testify. A trustworthy medical writer says: "Proper local treatment is positively necessary to success, but most of the remedies in general use by physicians afford but temporary benefit. A cure cannot be expected from snuffs, powders, douches and washes." Ely's Cream Balm is a remedy which combines the important requisites of quick action, specific curative power with perfect safety and pleasantness to the patient.

The old story:—Trivial symptoms were neglected until rheumatism became established, whereas all the suffering could have been prevented by the prompt use of Salvation Oil. 25 cents.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Bro. Larwill, of the Adrian Times, is in the grip of La Grippe.

La Grippe has struck the City of Adrian and struck it bad.

The Adrian street railroad will put another car on the road soon.

Several young men of Hudson wore straw hats on Christmas day.

The damp rainy weather is causing much sickness in all parts of the County.

The Masonic festival at Clinton on last Friday evening was a success as usual.

On and after Jan. 12th the Clinton churches will hold separate services in the evening.

The Morenci Odd Fellows celebrated the advent of the New Year by a public installation.

Gen. Wm. Humphrey's name was sent to the Senate last Monday for postmaster at Adrian.

Treasurer Burtless, of Franklin, was the first township treasurer to settle with the county officer.

There is a war among the butcher shops of Blissfield and beefsteak has dropped to six cents a pound.

Hon. W. J. Cocker, of Adrian, has taken the prescribed oath of office and qualified as Regent of the University.

Elisha A. Baker, one of the pioneers of Morenci, died suddenly last week. He wes found dead in his bed on Friday morning.

The young people of the Adrian Baptist Church have commenced the publication of a monthly paper, entitled "Our Church."

Geo. W. Carter, a carriage maker of Hudson, has made an assignment. Dull times and difficulty in making collections caused the disaster.

Hon. John K. Boies, of Hudson, was invited to appear before the committee on ways and means and address them on the wool question. He was unable to accept the invitation.

"La Grippe" has attacked Dundee. Of course Dundee wants everything that other towns have, except the telphone and a fire engine.—Dundee Reporter.

The new Odd Fellows' Hall in Addison was dedicated on Monday, Dec. 30th, with appropriate ceremonies. A large delegation of the Hudson brethren was present and a grand time was had.

The Hudson Post claims to contain more reading matter than any other paper in Sonthern Michigan. That depends entirely on what one would call reading matter.

The Brooklyn Exponent tells of a farmer who is still digging potatoes. It won't be long now before he can combine the pleasure of digging potatoes with the labor of digging bait.

Cows are cheap. G. B. Horton, of Fruit Ridge, who had six to dispose of, offered to sell four for twenty dollars, and throw in the other two, is having them slaughtered, giving the carcasses to the swine.—The Lance.

Chas. Clark has had his milk wagon fixed up in splendid style, with a canvas covering, which will make it very comfortable in cold and disagreeable weather. The price of milk will remain the same as usual.—Clinton Local.

Dr. Henry Wyman, of Blissfield, is in possession of a handsome cane made from Alaska wood. The head is a carved hand encircling a fish. The carving is very unique, the work of an Indian artist. The cane is presented by his son.

Chauncey Mann is "removed" from the postmastership at Medina. His removal is simply due to the fact that he happens to be a Democrat, and not from lack of efficiency, for he has made a good official. The Observer cordially wishes him success in his future undertakings.—Morenci Observer.

Trackmaster Stewart of the Lake Shore, whose home is in Coldwater, dropped over 140 feet with a railroad tricycle while making a trip to this point, last week, and escaped without a scratch. He was borne along by the wind from Coldwater to Hudson, but as the descent was gradual he experienced no shock to speak of; but it was a grade fall!—Hudson Gazette.

The Clayton Clarion has suspended. Two weeks ago the editor announced that unless the business men gave him better support he would cease publishing the paper. Last week the paper failed to appear, so evidently the support failed to materialize. Mr. Reed worked faithfully for the village, but his territory evidently was too limited to make a financial success.

An exchange relates this parable: "A revivalist asked all the congregation who paid their debts to rise. The rising was general. After they had taken their seats a call was made for those who did not pay their debts and one solitary individual arose and explained that he was an editor, and could not pay, because all the rest of the congregation were owing him on subscription.

We are told that $30,000 is about the amount paid out by the Mackinaw road for work in filling up the sink holes between this place and Rollin. And yet the road-bed sinks nearly every night, and no one knows when a solid foundation will be reached. It is said that when the grade settles the water in horse shoe pond, several miles away, is rolled, consequently there must be an underground channel. —Hudson Post.

A fall directly traceable to beer. As a lady coming rapidly down Church street on her tricycle neared Fisher's alley, a brewery wagon turned into the lane. Her endeavors to stop before the threatened collision resulted in a fall for both tricycle and rider. Assistance was near and no harm resulted, except a coating of dust. This was soon remedied and the lady remounted, first casting a spiteful glance down the lane at the receding beer wagon.—The Lance.

Mrs. Ellen Pierce and two daughters had a narrow escape from asphyxiation from coal gas last Thursday night. About midnight the younger child awoke and told her mother she felt sick at her stomach and asked for some medicine. Her mother arose, but found herself scarcely able to stand. She called to her daughter "Jo," who was similarly affected, and only with great effort did they succeed in opening a window and calling to her brother, who lived next door, for assistance. With plenty of fresh air the family were soon restored to a normal condition. Had they continued sleeping the result might have been fatal to all.—Blissfield Advance.

The supreme court on Saturday han led down a decision affirming the finding of the circuit court in the case of Albert Hickox vs. the Lake Shore railway. This means that the company loses possession of the land and that it reverts to the owner. Suit had also been commenced in the circuit court for other land owners along the road between Corbus and Grosvenor, and it is probable the company will not now fight the matter any longer. The victory is a substantial one and is due mostly to Joel Carpenter, of this village. Clement Carpenter and L. H. Salsbury were associated with Mr. Carpenter. The property owners will be glad to learn of the successful outcome of the case.—Blissfield Advance.

Our readers will remember that for several years Saginaw capitalists have been talking of constructing a railroad from that city south to Toledo or Cincinnati. The Enterprise has several times published articles from the Saginaw papers regarding the proposed route, which, by the way, passes through Manchester, with such comments as we thought necessary. The Cincinnati, Saginaw and Mackinaw Railway Company has filed articles of association with the secretary of state at Lansing, with a capital stock of $5,000,000, and authorized to construct a railroad from the Ohio state line in Lenawee county, north via Saginaw to the straits of Macinac. Take a map of Michigan and you will see that a direct route from say Adrian to Durand will strike Manchester, Chelsea, Unadilla and Fowlerville, all good points.—Manchester Enterprise.

THE POULTRY SHOW.

The Southern Michigan Poultry Association in Session at Dean's Opera House.

The person who enters Dean's opera house at the present time is sure of a hearty greeting, so hearty indeed, that he is apt to pause instinctively for a moment, in order to assure himself that it is neither a danger signal, a challenge, or the herald of daybreak. His ear is soon able to distinguish the clarion notes of the proud Brahma, the haughty Leghorn and the plucky Bantam, from the squawks of the gander, the gobble of the turkey, and the quack of the duck.

The cause of this commotion is soon found to be the gathering of as fine a lot of poultry as has been seen in this section of Michigan for a long time. This being the opening day the entries have been coming in at all hours, so that by to-morrow morning the show will be in full blast, with every inch of space filled.

A large number of exhibitors from Ohio, Indiana and Illinois are here and exhibitors from outside of the county will probably contribute about half of the specimens.

The association have provided an attraction by offering several pairs of fine fowls and a turkey to its patrons, each of whom will receive a number with his ticket of admission, entitling them to one chance in the scheme.

It is only just to say that the prospects are the most favorable for a very successful poultry show, and that the quality of the birds placed on exhibition is certainly worthy a crowded house during all the four days of its stay.

Among the particularly noticeable specimens are a number of Red Caps, a new variety in this section, a coop of Buff Bantams, one of Houdans, one of white crested Black Polish fowls, and a Toulouse gander and goose. But these are only noticeable for their oddity, for every bird in the show is a fine specimen of its kind.

The management have decided to keep the show open both day and evening, to accommodate every one, and it is safe to say that Adrian people will make the first annual exhibition of the Southern Michigan Poultry Association a most gratifying success. —The Times.

GUMBO'S GRAB BAG.

From dull repining we abstain,
From words of censure we refrain;
We've borne the fog and mud and rain,
Nor have we offered to complain
About the awful weather.
But when they dare to add to these McGinty and the Russian sneeze,
Twould certainly a saint displease
And make him wish his mind to ease—
We can't stand all together.

That tender and pathetic little poem, which brings scalding tears to the eyes of the school girl and makes even the dude reach for a clean handkerchief, entitled "The Beautiful Snow," is slumbering in innocuous desuetude this winter. Peace to its ashes. May it sleep the sleep of the just.

Overheard on a Wagner car, according to the New York Truth: Fussy old gentleman to a chance traveling companion:

"Have you any children, madam?"

"Yes, sir, a son."

"Ah, indeed! Does he smoke?"

"No, sir, he has never as much as touched a cigarette."

"So much the better, madame. The use of tobacco is a poisonous habit. Does he frequent the clubs?"

"He has never put his foot in one."

"Allow me to congratulate you. Does he come home late?"

"Never. He goes to bed directly after dinner."

"A model young man, madam—a model young man. How old is he?"

"Two months."

The Grippe has not invaded our sanctum yet, but we are calmly and patiently awaiting its coming. The most provoking feature of the plague is its tantalizing uncertainty. A good old fashioned, copper bottomed, Plymouth Rock sneeze, that comes without warning and explodes like a dynamite bomb, with a resounding "kerchew," clears the brain, exhilarates the body and enlivens the liver. But these pesky, hypocritical sneezes, which are always coming and yet never come, which keep a victim hovering on the ragged edge of anticipation, and make a man feel as though he had lost his mother-in-law, and had no quinine left in the house—such sneezes are an abomination. If the disease should attack this town with serious intent, it would be an excellent time for the churches to start a series of revival meetings.

La grippe effects different people in many different ways, and editors, like common folks, disagree fearfully on this all absneezing topic. Read what some of them say about it:

In these days of influenza the man who can obey the familiar injunction to follow his nose must have a rare burst of speed.

Franklin Parke: "What do you think of the Russian influenza?" Dartmouth street: "I'b god id, add I'b dot able to think!"

Audacious la grippe holds the Czar of Russia in one hand and Senator John J. Ingalls, of Kansas, in the other. The equipoise of the planet is thus restored.

The policeman without a grip is a useless member of the force, but queerly enough, a lot of the coppers are useless just now because they've got the grippe.

It is only a solemn duty to the public which compels us to state the unsavory fact that the man who goes to bed with his chest covered with a hot onion poultice, and his stomach full of boiled onions, will wake up to find la grippe disgusted and gone. It is an heroic remedy but brings with it a great reward.

We don't wonder that Boston is frightened out of her boots at the approach of Russian influenza. It is so difficult for one to sneeze without jogging one's eye-glasses off one's nose.

The grip has no grip on the man who attends to business and keeps his mind fixed on other themes. If you once admit you've got the grip you are lost, but be as bold as a lion and the grip flees like the wicked when no man pursueth.

So say the Prominent Men the world over.

E. S. Babcock, Jr., Manager of the famous Hotel Del Coronado, of San Diego Cal., says:

"After one year's experience, we are satisfied the Boardman & Gray Pianos ordered for our hotel are as good as the best in the world."

M. E. Fairbanks, Organist 1st Prebyterian church, San Diego, Cal., says:

"The Upright Piano, style 5, which we purchased of you has won many friends among our musical people, and, while I had an opportunity to obtain a Steinway at less price, my long experience with the Boardman & Gray Piano in the east induced me to order from you."

The Boardman & Gray

HUMAN NATURE.

If you are interested in the study of HUMAN NATURE and Character, and the improvement of yourself and others in any way, we would like to call your attention to the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL AND SCIENCE OF HEALTH, a well-known magazine which has been published for fifty years, and is devoted to all that will improve men Mentally, Morally, or Physically. It is the only magazine of its kind published in this country, and in every way the most important.

The specialty of PORTRAITS of distinguished, or notorious persons, with studies of their character and sketches of their lives, which has always been a marked and attractive feature of the JOURNAL, will still lead the host of good things prepared for the reader.

No one can study themselves or others and not be greatly benefited by the results, and therefore no one can afford NOT to read the JOURNAL. A knowledge of HUMAN NATURE would enable us to understand ourselves and others and to avoid many of the disappointments in life.

TERMS.—Monthly at $2 a year, or 20 cents a Number. To each new subscriber is given either the PHRENOLOGICAL BUST or NEW PHRENOLOGICAL CHART Premium. When the premiums are sent, 15 cents extra must be received with each subscription to pay postage on the JOURNAL and the expense of boxing and packing the Bust, which will be sent by express, or No. 2, a smaller size, or the Chart Premium, will be sent by mail, postpaid. Send 10 cents for specimen Numbers, Premium List, Posters, Catalogue of books, etc. Address

The installation of officers of the G. A. R., W. R. C., and S. of V., which took place last Friday evening was a very pleasant affair. The exercises were public, and music was furnished by Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Strong, and Will and Ina Ingersoll. As three separate installation services were recited, the program was quite lengthy, yet it was decidedly interesting. The hall was crowded. After the exercises, refreshments were served, consisting of doughnuts and coffee. The present G. A. R. quarters, comprising two large rooms with commodious ante rooms, provide splendid accommodations for public meetings of this character.

Now is the time to pay up.

Read our prospectus for 1890 on the 8th page.

The rain last Sunday thinned out the congregations at the churches.

J. L. O'Mealey, of Adrian, was in town last Friday on professional business.

Samuel Cole, a former resident of Tecumseh, spent the holidays at his old home.

There is no great loss without some small gain. This is good weather for the doctors.

We have received from the Detroit Tribune their carrier's holiday greeting for 1890. It is a very neat pamphlet with engraved pages and an elegant embossed cover, printed in gold and colors, making a tasty holiday souvenir.

We are much gratified at the present status of our subscription list. We are securing many new names and, considering the stringency of the times, are losing fewer names than we anticipated. The new year starts out very favorably.

Mr. D. W. Clark, who has been quite ill for several days, suddenly grew worse on Friday and passed peacefully away Saturday morning. The funeral services were held at the family residence Monday afternoon and were largely attended. The business houses were closed during the services. A formal obituary notice will appear next week.

A meeting of the First Baptist church of Tecumseh will be held at their church edifice on Thursday, Jan. 16, 1890, at 2 o'clock p.m., for the purpose of making pledges for the current expenses of the coming year, and for selecting seats. The ladies will give a chicken pie supper at the same time and place. Supper 20c, ready at 5 o'clock. All interested are invited to be present.

Mrs. Deland's serial, Dr. Holmes "Over the Teacups," and the first installment of Frank Gaylord Cook's promised series of papers on "Forgotten Political Celebrities" make the Atlantic for January a number to be remembered. The scene of "Sidney," Mrs. Deland's novel, is laid in a manufacturing town, and introduces us to the hero and heroine—in fact to the dramatis personae of the story.

At the recent annual meeting of the Presbyterian church, A. W. Mills was re-elected trustee, receiving every vote cast. In connection with his re-election, the thanks of the society were presented to him for efficient services in securing the improvements on the church building during the past year. A minute was also ordered on record by the clerk expressing thanks for the aid rendered by all the trustees—Messrs. Heesen, Mills and Slayton. Also for the gift of the new organ by Mr. Strong, and for the new lecture room carpet by Mrs. Strong, and for the liberality of subscribers to the fund raised for meeting the extra expenses of the past twelve months, amounting in all to $1000.

WOMEN WORKERS IN WOOD.

A Pursuit That Calls for Patience, Skill and Brains.

WOOD carving has in the last few years come to be a necessary trade in the United States. The awakening in the building art that began ten years ago has made carving an essential in the houses of wealthy people. The finest houses a few years ago contained little more than machine work. Variety and some beauty in mouldings were all that the best could show. Now the houses are many where the most exquisite forms of wood-carving are to be seen.

The most skillful and artistic carvers in wood are women. It is a pursuit for which they are specially adapted. The precision, delicacy, perspective, and patience absolutely indispensable to wood-carving are their endowments naturally. It only needs cultivation under good hands to make them the very best workmen.

The Cincinnati Academy of Art began a few years ago to teach wood-carving, and the result has demonstrated that women make by far the better artists with the graver and chisel in the finer kinds of wood-carving. Wages run from $3 to $8 a day and there is work enough to be had if the workmen will go to it. Of course it is not to be expected that millionaires will be building palaces in every hamlet in the country and not even in all the big towns. The wood-carver must migrate from time to time to the places where the large and costly houses are being built. When a reputation has been made work will come to the workman, for wood-carvers are scarce and it takes years to reach the highest proficiency.

A WOOD-CARVER AT WORK.

The work is monotonous in some lines. For instance, carved moldings for window casings, for base boards, and wainscotings are much used. The pattern once designed and accepted all the rest is simply multiplication, for sometimes several hundred feet of it are required. When desired, soft woods, chiefly gum and white pine, are used and no great strength necessary. Nor are the fingers and wrists likely to ache at the work. Carving in oak, cherry, mahogany, apple wood or rosewood is another and much harder and more wearisome task.

There is room for ingenuity and originality in wood-carving. Besides the carving there is designing and for this endless study is a requisite, though it brings abundant reward.

Burnt Wood Decorations.

I was in Paris a few years ago studying art, says a St. Louis artist, but I had not at that time heard of this art of burning pictures on wood, which is for the first time revealed to us here by the Fosdick collection at the St. Louis exposition. Curious to test it, after seeing it, I procured some wood and tried a design. I find the work so easy that it opens a field for decoration that the commercial-minded people of this country have wanted for years. It is admitted that we want our art cheap. Hence I believe wood burning will become popular, for its effects are as good as frescoing and carving, and can be had more cheaply. Any one who has seen the collection of panels at the St. Louis exposition must admit their effectiveness in decoration. Any artist of skill can, with a little practice, produce these panels. The work simply amounts to an outline picture, such as most newspaper drawings are. The artist gets a piece of smooth wood—say maple, poplar or boxwood—and draws a design with pencil or charcoal. Then heating a sharp iron he draws it over the design, obtaining the effects of color with a little practice. These will vary from black to light brown, according to the degree of heat applied. Take an ordinary door, for instance. If the design is not too elaborate it can be done for about $12. If the artist works fast he can finish it in a day. In the same way a man can have the doors, walls and wainscoting of his house decorated and secure just as fine effects as carving and frescoing, but at far less cost. The art is entirely new in this country, but will develope very rapidly on account of the reasons I have given.

POTATO CHOWDER—This is a nice dinner for a busy day. Cut half a pound of salt pork into thin slices, and fry slowly, a very light brown; add five sliced onions and let them color slightly; peel and slice—dropping the slices into cold water—two quart of potatoes. Put a layer of these in a deep kettle; then a thin layer with pork and onions; season each layer with salt and pepper and dredge with flour. When all the ingredients are used cover with two quarts of hot water, let it come slowly to the boiling point and cook forty minutes, or until the potatoes are done. Minced parsley or young celery is a desirable addition.

ESTATE OF McCLURE MINORS.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Monday the 20th day of December in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine. Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Samuel R. McClure Henry W. McClure, Martha G. McClure, and Louis C. McClure minors.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified of William A. Brown, alleging among other things, that Henry McClure deceased, did, in his lifetime, to wit, on the 16th day of March, A.D., 1887, duly execute and deliver to petitioner a contract in writing to convey to said petitioner, certain real estate described in said contract, and that said Henry McClure died without making the conveyance required by such contract. That the said premises described in said contract have been set off and assigned to said minors subject to said contract by said Court, that Samuel McClure is the guardian of said minors, and praying that said guardian may be authorized and directed to make and execute and deliver a conveyance of the real estate described in said contract to petitioner upon the terms and conditions therein mentioned, and that such other and further order and proceedings may be had in the premises as may be required by the statute in such case made and provided.

It is ordered, That Monday, the 27th day of January next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the next-of-kin of said minors and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

CLEOPATRA.

Being an Account of the Fall and Vengeance of Harmachis, the Royal Egyptian,

AS SET FORTH BY HIS OWN HAND.

By H. Rider Haggard,

Author of "King Solomon's Mines," "She," "Allan Quatermain," Etc., Etc., Etc.

Illustrated by NICHOLL, after GATON WOODVILLE and CREIFFENHAGEN.

Far into the night we sat, and I revealed to her somewhat of that ancient secret of the mighty treasure hid beneath the mass of "Her." Thither, it was agreed, should we go on the morrow, and the second night from now attempt its search. So, early on the next day, a boat was secretly made ready, and therein did Cleopatra enter, veiled as an Egyptian lady about to make a pilgrimage to the Temple of Horemku. And I also, cloaked as a pilgrim, entered with her, and with us ten of her most trusted servants hidden as sailors. But Charmion entered not with us. We sailed with a fair wind from the Canopic mouth of the Nile; and that night, pushing on with the moon, we reached Sais at midnight, and there rested for awhile. At dawn we once more loosed our craft, and all that day sailed swiftly till at last, at the third hour from the sunset, we came in sight of the lights of the fortress which is called Babylon. Here, on the opposite bank of the river, we moored our ship safely in a bed of reeds.

Then, on foot and secretly, we set forth for the Pyramids, which were at a distance of nigh upon fifty stadia (about six miles)—Cleopatra, I and one trusted eunuch, for the other servants we left with the boat. Only for Cleopatra I caught an ass that was wandering in a tilled field, and threw a cloak upon it. Thereon she sat, and I led the ass by paths I knew, the eunuch following after us. And, within little more than an hour, having gained the great causeway, we saw the mighty Pyramids towering up through the moonlit air and aweing us to silence. On we passed, in utter silence, through the haunted city of the dead, for all around us stood the solemn tombs, till at length we climbed the rocky hill and stood in the deep shadow of Khufu Khut (the splendid Throne of Khufu).

"Of a truth," whispered Cleopatra, as she gazed up the dazzling marble slope above her, everywhere blazoned o'er with a million mystic characters—"of a truth, there were gods ruling in Khem in those days, and not men. This place is sad as Death—ay, and as mighty and as far from man. Here must we enter!"

"Nay," I answered, "it is not here. Pass on."

I led the way through a thousand tombs, till we stood in the shadow of Ur (the Great), and gazed at his red, heaven-piercing mass.

"Is it here that we must enter!" she whispered once again.

"Nay," I answered, "it is not here. Pass on."

And we passed on through many more tombs, until we stood in the shadow of Her,* and Cleopatra gazed astonished at its polished beauty, which for thousands of years had, night by night, mirrored the moon, and at the black girdle of Ethiopian stone that circled its base about. For of all pyramids this is the most beautiful.

"Is it here that we must enter!" she said.

I answered: "Yea, it is here."

And we passed round between the temple of the worship of his divine Majesty, Menka-ra, the Osirian, and the base of the pyramid, till we came to the north side. Here in the center is graved the name of Pharaoh Menka-ra, who built the pyramid to be his tomb, and stored therein his treasure against the needs of Khem.

"If the treasure still remains," I said to Cleopatra, "as in the days of my great-great grandfather, who was priest of this pyramid before me, it remained, 'tis hid deep in the womb of the mass before thee, Cleopatra; nor can it be come by without toil and danger, and terror of the mind. Art thou prepared to enter!—for thou thyself must enter and judge."

"Canst thou not go with the eunuch, Harmachis, and bring the treasure forth!" she said, for a little her courage began to fail her.

"Nay, O Cleopatra," I answered, "not even for thee and for the weal of Egypt can I do this thing, for of all sins it would be the greatest sin. But this it is lawful for me to do. I, as hereditary holder of the secret, may, upon demand, show to the ruling monarch of Kehm the place where the treasure lies, and show also the warning that is written. And if, on seeing and reading, the Pharaoh do deem that the need of Khem is so sore and strait that it is lawful for him to brave the curse of the dead and draw the treasure forth, it is well, for on his head must rest the weight of this dread deed. Three monarchs, so say the records that I have read, have thus dared to enter in the time of need. They were the divine Queen Ha-ta-su, that wonder known to the Gods alone; her divine brother Men-Kheper-ra (Thotmes the Great); and the divine Mi-amen (Rameses II). But of these three majesties, not one when they saw dared to touch, for, though sore their need, it was not great enough to consecrate the act. So, fearing lest the curse should fall upon them, they went hence sorrowing."

A little she thought, till at last her spirit overcame her fear.

"At the least I will see with mine own eyes," she said.

"It is well," I answered. Then, stones having been piled up on a certain spot at the base of the pyramid to somewhat more than the height of a man by me and the eunuch who was with us, I climbed on them and searched for the secret mark, no larger than a leaf. And, with some trouble, for the weather and the rubbing of the sand had worn even the Ethiopian stone, I found it. Having found it, I, in a certain fashion, pressed thereon with all my strength. Even after the lapse of years unnumbered the stones swung round, showing a little opening through which a man might scarcely creep. As it swung, a mighty bat, such as I had never seen before for bigness, for his measure was the measure of a hawk, flew forth and for a moment hovered over Cleopatra, and then in circles sailed slowly up and up, till at the last he was lost in the bright light of the moon.

But Cleopatra uttered a cry of terror, and the eunuch, who was watching, fell down in fear, believing it to be the guardian spirit of the pyramid. And I, too, feared, though naught I said. For even now I do believe that it was the spirit of Menka-ra, the Osirian, who, taking on himself the form of a bat, flew forth from his holy House in warning.

Awhile I waited till the foul air should clear from the passage. Then I drew forth the lamps and kindled them, and passed them, to the number of three, into the entrance of the passage. This done, I went to the trusty eunuch, and, taking him aside, I swore him by the living spirit of Him who sleeps at Abouthis that those things which he was about to see he should not reveal.

This he swore, trembling sorely, for he was much afraid. Nor, indeed, did he reveal them.

This being done, I clambered through the opening, taking with me a coil of rope, which I wound around my middle, and beckoned to Cleopatra to come. Making fast the skirt of her robe, she came, and I drew her through the opening, so that at length she stood behind me in the passage which is lined with slabs of granite. After her came the eunuch, and he also stood in the passage. And then, having taken counsel of the plan of the passage that I had brought with me, and which, in signs that none but the initiated can read, was copied from those ancient writings that had come down to me through one-and-forty generations of my predecessors, the priests of this pyramid of Her, and of the worship of the Temple of the Divine Menka-ra, the Osirian, I led the way through that darksome place toward the utter silence of the tomb. Guided by the feeble light of our lamps we passed down the steep incline, gasping in the heat and the thick, stagnated air. Presently we had left the region of the masonry and were slipping down a gallery hewn in the living rock. For twenty paces or more it ran steeply. Then its slope lessened, and shortly we found ourselves in a chamber painted white, so low that I, being tall, had scarce room to stand, but in length four paces and in breadth three, and cased throughout with sculptured panels. Here Cleopatra sank upon the floor and rested awhile, overcome by the heat and the utter darkness.

"Rise," I said. "Here we must not linger, or we faint."

So she rose, and, passing hand in hand through that chamber, we found ourselves face to face with a mighty door of granite, let down from the roof in grooves. And once more I took counsel of the plan, pressed with my foot upon a certain stone, and waited. Then, suddenly and softly, I know not by what means, the mighty mass heaved itself from its bed of living rock. We passed beneath, and found ourselves face to face with a second door of granite. Again I pressed on a certain spot, and of itself this door swung wide, and we went through, to find ourselves face to face with a third door, yet more mighty than the twain through which we had won our way. Following the secret plan, this door I struck with my foot upon a certain spot, and slowly it sank, as though at a word of magic, till its head was level with the floor of rock. We crossed and gained another passage which, descending gently for a length of fourteen paces, led us into a great chamber paved with black marble, more than nine cubits high, by nine cubits broad, and thirty cubits long. In this great marble floor was sunk a great sarcophagus of granite, and on its lid were graved the name and titles of the Queen of Menka-ra. In this chamber, too, the air was more pure, though by what means it came thither I know not.

"Is the treasure here!" gasped Cleopatra.

"Nay," I answered; "follow me." And I led the way to a gallery, which we entered through an opening in the floor of the great chamber. It had been closed by a trap-door of stone, but the door was open. Creeping along this shaft, or passage, for some ten paces, we came at length to a well, in depth seven cubits. Making fast one end of the rope that I had brought about my body, and the other to a ring in the rock, I was lowered, holding the lamp in my hand, till I stood in the last resting place of the divine Menka-ra. Then the rope was drawn up, and Cleopatra, being made fast thereto, was let down by the eunuch, and I received her in my arms. But the eunuch, sorely against his will, for he feared to be left alone, I bade wait our return at the mouth of the shaft. For it was not lawful that he should enter whither we went.

*The "Upper," now known as the Third Pyramid.

CHAPTER XVIII.

THE TOMB OF THE DIVINE MENKA-RA; THE WRITING ON THE BREAST OF MENKA-RA; THE DRAWING FORTH OF THE TREASURE; THE DWELLER IN THE TOMB; FLIGHT OF CLEOPATRA AND HARMACHIS FROM THE HOLY PLACE.

We stood within a small, arched chamber, paved and lined with great blocks of the granite stone of Syene. There before us—hewn from a single mass of basalt shaped like a wooden house and resting on a sphinx with a face of gold—was the sarcophagus of the divine Menka-ra.

Awed, we stood and gazed, for the weight of the silence and the solemnity of that holy place seemed to crush us. Above us, cubit over cubit in its mighty measure, the Pyramid towered up to heaven and was kissed of the night air. But we were deep in the bowels of the rock beneath its base. We were alone with the dead, whose rest we were about to break; and no sound of the murmuring air and no sight of life came to dull the awful edge of solitude. I gazed on the sarcophagus; its heavy lid had been lifted and rested at its side. Around it the dust of ages had gathered thick, and there in the dust was the stamp of human feet. Then I trembled, for I knew that I looked on the footprints of that forefather of mine, who, generations gone, last of living men, had visited this holy place. Long had he been gathered to Osiris, and yet there in the powdered dust was the press of his dead foot.

"See," I whispered, pointing to a writing daubed with pigment upon the wall in the sacred symbols of ancient times.

"Read it, Harmachis," answered Cleopatra, in the same low voice; "for I can not."

Then I read: "I, Rameses Miamun, did, in my day and in my hour of need, visit this sepulcher. But, though great my need and bold my heart, I dared not face the curse of Menka-ra. Judge, O thou who shalt come after me, and, if thy soul be pure and Khem be utterly distressed, take thou that which I have left."

"Where, then, is the treasure!" she whispered. "Is that sphinx face of gold!"

"Even there," I answered, pointing to the sarcophagus. "Draw near and see."

And she took my hand and drew near.

The lid was off, but within the depths of the sarcophagus lay the painted coffin of the Pharaoh. I blew the dust from it with my breath and read that which was written thereon. And this was written:

"Pharaoh Menka-ra, the child of Heaven.

"Pharaoh Menka-ra, Royal Son of the Sun.

"Pharaoh Menka-ra, who didst lie beneath the heart of Nout.

"Nout, thy Mother, wraps thee in the spell of Her holy name.

"The name of thy Mother, Nout, is the mystery of Heaven.

"Nout, thy Mother, gathers thee to the number of the gods.

"Nout, thy Mother, breathes on thy foes and utterly destroys them.

"O Pharaoh Menka-ra, who livest forever!"

"Where, then, is the treasure!" she asked again. "Here, indeed, is the body of the divine Menka-ra; but the flesh even of Pharaohs is not gold, and if the face of this sphinx be gold, how may we move it!"

For answer I bade her stand upon the sphinx and grasp the upper part of the coffin, while I grasped its foot. Then, at my word, we lifted, and the lid of the case, which was not fixed, came away, and we set it upon the floor. And there in the case was the mummy of the Pharaoh, as three thousand years before it had been laid. A large mummy it was, and somewhat ungainly. Nor was it adorned with a gilded mask, as is the fashion of our day, for the head was wrapped in cloths yellow with age, which were made fast with pink flaxen bandages, whereunder were pushed the stems of lotus blooms. And on the breast, wreathed over with lotus flowers, lay a plate of gold closely written over with sacred writing. I lifted up the plate, and, holding it to the light, I read:

"I, Menka-ra, the Osirian, aforetime Pharaoh of the land of Khem, who in my day did live justly and ever walked in the path marked for my feet by the decree of the Invisible, Who was the beginning and is the end, speak from my tomb to those who after me shall for an hour sit upon my Throne. Behold, I, Menka-ra, the Osirian, having in the days of my life been warned of a dream that a time will come when Khem shall fear to fall into the hands of strangers, and her monarch shall have great need of treasure wherewith to furnish armies to drive the barbarian back, have out of my wisdom done this thing. For it having pleased the protecting Gods to give me wealth beyond any Pharaoh who has been since the days of Horus—thousands of cattle and geese, thousands of camels and asses, thousands of measures of corn, and hundreds of measures of gold and gems—this wealth have I used sparingly, and that which remains have I bartered for precious stones, even for emeralds the most beautiful and largest that are in the world. These stones, then, have I stored up against that day of the need of Khem. But because as there have been, so there shall be, those who do wickedly on the earth, and who, in the lust of gain, might seize this wealth that I have stored and put it to their uses. Behold, thou Unborn One, who in the fullness of time shalt stand above me and read this that I have caused to be written, thus have I stored the treasure; even among my bones. Therefore, O thou Unborn One sleeping in the womb of Nout, this I say to thee! If thou indeed hast need of riches to save Khem from the foes of Khem, fear not and delay not, but tear me, the Osirian, from my tomb, loose my wrappings and rip the treasure from my breast, and all shall be well with thee; for this only do I command: That thou dost replace my bones within my hollow coffin. But if the need be passing and not great, or if there be a guile within thy heart, then the curse of Menka-ra be on thee! On thee be the curse that shall smite him who breaks in upon the dead!*

(* It must be remembered that the ancient Egyptians held the dead in greater awe and sanctity than the living. After death the body was still visited by the soul, and they looked forward to its personal resurrection. Hence their care as to its embalmment and the stupendous works which they raised as tombs.)

"On thee be the curse that follows the traitor! On thee be the curse that smites him who outrages the majesty of the Gods! Unhappy shalt thou live, in blood and misery shalt thou die, and in misery shalt thou be tormented forever and forever! For, Wicked One, there in Amenti shall we come face to face!

"And to the end of the keeping of this secret have I, Menka-ra, set up a Temple of my Worship, the which I have built upon the eastern side of this my House of Death. To the hereditary High Priest of this my Temple shall it be made known from time to time. And if any High Priest that shall be, do reveal this secret to another than the Pharaoh, or Her who wears the Pharaoh's crown and is seated upon the throne of Khem, accursed be he also. Thus have I, Menka-ra, the Osirian, written. Now to thee, who, sleeping in the womb of Nout, yet shall upon a time stand over me and read, I say, judge thou! and if thou judgest evilly on thee shall fall this the curse of Menka-ra, from which there is no escape. Greeting and farewell."

"Thou hast heard, O Cleopatra," I said solemnly; "now search thy heart; judge thou, and for thine own sake judge justly."

She bent her head in thought.

"I fear to do this thing," she said presently. "Let us hence."

"It is well," I said, with a lightening of the heart, and bent me to lift the wooden lid. For I, too, feared.

"And yet what said the writing of the divine Menka-ra?—'twas emeralds, was it not? And emeralds are now so rare and hard to come by! Ever did I love emeralds, and never can I find them without a flaw."

"'Tis not a matter of what thou dost love, Cleopatra," I said; "'tis matter of the need of Khem and of the secret meaning of thy heart, which thou alone canst know."

"Ay, surely, Harmachis; surely! And is not the need of Egypt great? There is no gold in the treasury, and how can I defy the Roman if I have no gold? And have I not sworn to thee that I will wed thee and defy the Roman; and do I not swear it again—yea, even in this solemn hour, with my hand upon dead Pharaoh's heart! Why, here is that occasion whereof the divine Menka-ra did dream. Thou seest it is so, for else had Hatasu or Rameses or some other Pharaoh drawn forth the gems. But no; they left them to this hour because the time was not yet come. Now it must be come, for if I take not the gems the Roman will surely seize on Egypt, and then there will be no Pharaoh to whom the secret may be told. Nay, let us away with fears and to the work. Why dost look so frighted? Having pure hearts, naught is there to fear, Harmachis."

"Even as thou wilt," I said again; "for thee it is to judge, since if thou judgest falsely, on thee will surely fall the curse from which there is no escape."

"So, Harmachis, take Pharaoh's head and I will take his— Oh, what an awful place is this!" and suddenly she clung to me. "Methought I saw a shadow yonder in the darkness! Methought that it did move toward us and then straightway vanish! Let us be going! Didst thou see naught!"

"I saw naught, Cleopatra; but mayhap it was the Spirit of the divine Menka-ra, for ever does the spirit hover round its mortal tenement. Let us then be going; right glad shall I be to go."

She made as though to start, then turned back again and spoke once more.

"'Twas naught—naught but the mind that in such a house of Horror doth body forth those shadowy forms of fear it dreads to see. Nay, I must look upon these emeralds indeed; if I die, I must look! Come—to work!" and stooping she with her own hands lifted from the tomb one of the four alabaster jars, each sealed with the graven likeness of the heads of the protecting Gods, that held the holy heart and entrails of the divine Menka-ra. But in those jars was nothing found, save only what should be there.

Then together we mounted on the sphinx and drew forth with toil the body of the divine Pharaoh, laying it on the ground. Now Cleopatra took my dagger, and with it cut loose the bandages which held the wrappings in their place, and the lotus flowers, that had been placed therein by loving hands, three thousand years before, fell down upon the pavement. Then we searched and found the end of the outer bandage, which was fixed in at the hinder part of the neck. This we cut loose, for it was fast glued. This done, we began to unroll the wrappings of the holy corpse. Setting my shoulders against the sarcophagus, I sat upon the rocky floor, the body resting on my knees, and, as I turned it Cleopatra unwound the cloths; and awesome was the task. Presently something fell out; it was the scepter of the Pharaoh, fashioned of gold, and at the end thereof was a pomegranate cut from a single emerald.

Cleopatra seized it and gazed thereon in silence. Then once more we went on with our dread business. And ever as we unwound, other ornaments of gold, such as are buried with Pharaohs, fell from the wrappings—collars and bracelets, models of sistra, and inlaid axe, and an image of the holy Osiris and of the holy Khem. At length all the bandages were unwound, and beneath we found a covering of coarsest linen, for in those days the craftsmen were not so skilled in matters pertaining to the embalming of the body as now they are. And on the linen was written in an oval, "Menka-ra, Royal Son of the Sun." This linen we could in no wise loosen, so firm it held to the body. Therefore, faint with the great heat, choked with mummy dust and the odor of spices, and trembling with fear of our unholy task, wrought in that most lonesome and holy place, we laid the body down, and with knife ripped away the last covering. First we cleared its head, and now the face that no man had gazed on for three thousand years was open to our view. It was a great face, with a bold brow, yet crowned with the Royal uræus, beneath which the white locks, stained yellow by the spices, fell in long, straight wisps. Not the cold stamp of death, and not the slow flight of three thousand years, had found power to mar the dignity of those shrunken features. We gazed thereon, and then, made bold with fear, stripped the covering from the body. There at last it lay before us, stiff, yellow and dread to see; and on the left side, above the thigh, was the cut through which the embalmers had done their work, but it was sewn up so deftly that scarce could we find the mark.

"The gems are within," I whispered, for I felt that the body was very heavy. "Now, if thy heart fail thee not, must thou make an entry to this poor house of clay that once was Pharaoh," and I gave her the dagger—the same dagger which had drunk the life of Paulus.

"It is too late to ponder," she answered, lifting her white and beauteous face and fixing her blue eyes, all big with terror, upon mine own. She took the dagger, and with set teeth the Queen of this day plunged it into the dead breast of the Pharaoh of three thousand years ago. And even as she did so, from the opening of the shaft where we had left the eunuch there came a groaning sound! We leaped to our feet, but heard no more, and through the opening the lamp-light still streamed down.

"It is naught," I said. "Let us make an end."

Then with much toil we hacked and rent the hard flesh open, and even as we did so I heard the knife-point grate upon the gems within.

Cleopatra plunged her hand into the dead breast and drew forth somewhat. She held it to the light, and gave a little cry, for from the darkness of Pharaoh's heart there flashed into light and life the most beauteous emerald that ever man beheld. Perfect it was in color, very large, without a flaw, and fashioned to a scarabæus form, and on the under side was the oval, inscribed with the divine name of Menka-ra, Son of the Sun.

Again, again, and yet again she plunged in her hand and drew from Pharaoh's breast great emeralds bedded there in spices. Some were fashioned and some were not; but all were perfect in color, without a flaw, and in value priceless. Again and again she plunged her white hand into that dread breast, till at length all were found, and there were one hundred and forty and eight of such gems as are not known in the world. And the last time that she searched she brought forth not emeralds, indeed, but two great pearls, wrapped in linen, such as never have been seen. And of these pearls more hereafter.

So it was done, and all the mighty treasure lay glittering in a heap before us. There it lay, and there, too, lay the regalia of gold, the spiced and sickly scented wrappings, and the torn body of white-haired Pharaoh Menka-ra, the Osirian, the ever-living in Amenti.

We rose, and a great awe fell upon us, now that the deed was done and our hearts were no more upborne by the rage of eager search—so great an awe, indeed, that we could not speak. I made a sign to Cleopatra. She grasped the head of Pharaoh and I grasped his feet, and together we lifted him, climbed the sphinx, and placed him once more within his coffin. On him I piled the torn mummy cloths, and on them laid the lid of the coffin.

And now we gathered up the great gems, and such of the ornaments as might with ease be carried, and these I hid, as many as I could, within the folds of my robe. And those that were left did Cleopatra hide upon her breast. Heavily laden with priceless treasure, we gave one last look at the dreadful, solemn place, at the great sarcophagus, and the sphinx whereon it rested; whose face of awful calm seemed to mock us with its everlasting smile of wisdom. Then we turned and went from the tomb.

At the shaft we halted. I called to the eunuch, who stayed above, and methought that a faint mocking laugh answered me. Too smitten with terror to call again, and fearing that, should we delay, Cleopatra would surely swoon, I seized the rope, and, being strong and quick, mounted by it and gained the passage. There burnt the lamp, but the eunuch I saw not. Thinking surely that he was a little way down the passage and slept—as, in truth, he did—I bade Cleopatra make fast the rope about her middle, and with much labor drew her up. Then, having rested awhile, we moved on with the lamps to seek the eunuch.

"He hath been stricken with terror, and, leaving the lamp, hath fled," said Cleopatra. "Oh, ye Gods! who is that seated there?"

I peered into the darkness, thrusting out the lamps, and this is what their light fell on—this, at the very dream whereof my soul sickens! There, facing us, his back resting against the rock, and on either side his hands splayed upon the floor, sat the eunuch—dead! His eyes and mouth were open, his fat cheeks dropped down, his thin hair yet seemed to bristle, and on his countenance was frozen such a stamp of hideous terror as well might turn the beholders' brain. And lo! fixed by its hinder claws, even to his chin, hung that mighty bat which, flying forth when we entered the pyramid, vanished in the sky, but which, returning, had followed us to its depths. There it hung upon the dead man's chin, slowly rocking itself to and fro, and we could see the fiery eyes shining in its evil

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

Geo. A. Wilkins is on the sick list.

Taxes are coming in slow—but sure as death.

Olds & Bacon shipped Holstein cattle to Ohio last week.

John Martin of Leslie, has been holdaying at Lake Ridge.

This beats any weather the oldest inhabitant ever saw in York State.

Frank Bacon of Wheatland, attended his brother's marriage anniversary.

Morris Harrington and Miss Ann Duncan have returned from a visit in Canada.

The New Years social at Lake Ridge house brought 40 couple and the enjoyment was immense.

Will Easlick's children have repovered from scarlet fever and they are cleaning house and renovating.

All the reserve fund of the season has been stored up for the "hard times" entertainment at Grange Hall, Wednesday night.

Navigation closed on all the public highways—transportation carried on foot cross lots—mosquitos are an unusual holiday annex—they settle their own bills—good time for catching mink, coon, skunk and muskrat.

Mr. Lenna Miller of Lake Ridge and Miss Rosa Creigo of Bridgewater, were married New Years. Everybody says its a good match and congratulations are bountiful. They are off to Sanford, Midland county on a tour.

Fred Descher got lost one dark stormy night last week, while returning home, cross lots from a neighbors. His lantern blew out, and in his wanderings he ran against a rail fence, disfiguring him so that a doctor was called next day to make repairs.

The tenth marriage anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Bacon, New Years, was as well attended as the weather would permit. An extension table, stand, tray, and brush, vases, etc., were among the presents, and a bountiful dinner among the luxuries of the occasion.

ADAM STETTEN FOUND.

Sheriff Baldwin this afternoon received information from the gentlemen, who, following the clue furnished in the letter printed in The Times a few days ago, went to Miller City, Ohio, in search of Adam Stetten, the missing Ogden farmer.

These gentlemen report their mission a success. The old gentleman was found in the care of his new formed friends in good health, but evidently laboring under a mild form of dementia.

He says that on the afternoon of the day he disappeared he observed the neighbor who reported seeing him at that time, and supposing it was the sheriff, and having had enough dealings with the law for the time being, he turned away, and went into the woods to avoid him.

Without any further definite purpose he walked on, sleeping that night in the woods of Seneca. He finally reached Napoleon, O., with three dollars in his pocket. Here he secured a shave and had the Grand Army buttons cut off, that he might avoid recognition.

From there he fetched up at Miller City, and he is expected to reach his old home again in Ogden this afternoon.

Thus comes a fortuitous ending to the mystery which has racked the people of Ogden for so many days past.—Adrian Times.

TRUMANSBURG, N. Y., Feb'y 1, 1889.

Am convinced after testing its virtues in some exceedingly severe and obstinate cases that F. E. C. possesses decided and marked curative properties in Kidney and Bladder trouble.

L. W. CARPENTER, M. D.

The New Year is welcomed in by The Ladies' Home Journal, of Philadelphia, with an actual circulation of 500,000 copies monthly. Where the close of 1890 will find this wonderful magazine one can hardly imagine, if the brilliant January number is any criterion of what the other issues will be. There are several salient features of the January number which gives it a special interest. Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage begins his work as one of the editors, and opens his new department, "Under My Study Lamp."

Laxador is the result of years of observation and experience. It is now recommended by leading physicians for costiveness and indigestion.

Rheumatism is caused by lactic acid in the blood, which Hood's Sarsaparilla neutralizes, and thus cures rheumatism.

It Builds Up Old People.

My mother, who is a very old lady, was physically broken down. The use of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) has entirely restored her to health. R. B. DILWORTH, Greenville, S. C.

Not a Symptom in Three Years.

"Several years ago I had an attack of piles and fistula from which I suffered great pain for upwards of a year. I tried a number of remedies but none of them did me the least good. I was becoming desperate on account of so much suffering, and at length went to the drug store of Dr. J. C. Franklin, in this city, where I purchased a bottle of S. S. S. I took it according to directions and took nothing else. After taking six bottles I was entirely cured. That was three years ago, and I have not had any symptoms of piles or fistula since." T. E. MURPHY, Nashville, Tenn.

THE HERALD FOR 1890.

On the 25th day of May last the HERALD entered upon the fortieth year of its publication. The 15th day of November last completed fifteen years under its present management, and we can truthfully say that the paper never had more friends or truer ones in Northern Lenawee than it has today. But, like Cæsar, we are ambitious. We aim for a larger list and a wider field to swing in, and our terms for 1890 have been adjusted with that purpose in view.

OFFER NO. ONE.

We have made arrangements with that wide awake illustrated farm magazine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct to the address of any of our subscribers who will pay up all arrearages and a year in advance. The subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. It costs you nothing. The two papers at our full rate of $1 50 per year.

OFFER NO. TWO.

The modern magazine may be taken as embodying the best literature of the world, as the magazine editor pays the highest prices to novelists, scientists, statesmen, soldiers and even kings and princes for the best they can furnish in the literary line.

You can obtain the Cosmopolitan, which gives you in a year nearly fourteen hundred pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including six hundred pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point of interest and execution at its regular price, only $2 50, and the HERALD free.

OFFER NO. THREE.

Ropp's Commercial Calculator is a practical arithmetic for practical purposes. It contains a large variety of useful, accurate and convenient tables, together with simple, short and practical methods for rapid calculations. Any subscriber paying arrearages and one year in advance, or any new subscriber paying one year in advance at full rates, $1.50 per year, will receive a copy of this book free.

OFFER NO. FOUR.

The tendency of the times is to lower prices. We offer a liberal reduction in rates for the coming year. We have adopted both a cash and a credit rate. You can pay your money and take your choice. We will furnish the HERALD alone

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE, with its varied and excellent contents, is a library in itself.

It was indeed a happy thought to print an entire novel in each number.

Not a short novelette, but a long story such as you are used to get in book form and pay from one dollar to one dollar and a half for.

Not only that, but with each number you get an abundance of other contributions, which gives you a good magazine besides the novel.

The ringing blows which have been struck on the gateway of popular favor, have resounded throughout the entire land, and to-day Lippincott's Magazine stands in the front rank of monthly publications, and is the most widely-read-and-talked of publication of its kind in the world. For full descriptive circulars, address LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE, Philadelphia

DRUNKENNESS—LIQUOR HABIT — In all the World there is but one Cure. Dr. Haines' Golden Specific.

It can be given in a cup of tea or coffee, without the knowledge of the person taking it, effecting a speedy and permanent cure, whether the patient is a moderate drinker or an alcoholic wreck. Thousands of drunkards have been cured who have taken the Golden Specific in their coffee without their knowledge, and today they think they quit drinking of their own free will. No harmful effect results from its administration. Cures guaranteed. Send for circular and full particulars. Address in confidence, GOLDEN SPECIFIC CO., 185 Race st., Cincinnati, O.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

BRITTON BUDGET.

M. Oviatt and wife of Battle Creek, were guests of Will Osgood and wife on Saturday.

Mary Osgood of Macon, has been visiting Britton relatives for a few days.

Our Budget is necessarily rather small this week, as a trip to Hillsdale this week took up so much of our time. We hope however to get on our feet again next week.

Not only clothes thieves, but chicken thieves have been making raids in our town. This looks bad, but there is one satisfaction; the chap that picked out Georgie Clark's old white hen for a spring chick, has got left.

Our Grippe list this week includes Mrs. O. B. Lenardson, Mrs. W. J. Clark, Miss Mary Bowerman, Mrs. Dr. Hendershot, two children of Elmer Osgood, three members of Mike Gillen's family, D. R. Wiggins, Mrs. Ed. Bauchman and many others.

While Miss Bowerman was disabled by La Grippe, the primary department of our school has been under the administration of Miss Minnie Ackley, whose efficiency is fully attested by the little ones.

Will Underwood has got the Grip or rather the Grippe has got Will, and got him down too, sitting on him, walking all around on him, dances a a jig down his spinal column, then around his fifth rib, pinches his nose, sends a chill all over him, gives him a fever in his chest and hobgoblins in his dreams. Hear he is getting better and are glad of it.

All who attended the concert at the church last Thursday enjoyed a treat. The Misses Gibson and Ackley deserve praise for the completeness of the arrangements and the manner in which the program was carried out. Several of the recitations were fine. Master Burt Gillen downed the house.

The Martin Concert given under the auspices of the "Sons of Veterans" at G. A. R. Hall, on Tuesday evening, was well attended. The opening was rather late owing to Mrs. Carpenter not arriving until the C. J. & M. train from Toledo, about 8:30 P. M. This made it necessary to shorten the program somewhat. Notwithstanding these drawbacks we all enjoyed the entertainment very much.

That a train should run into and demolish the crossing gates once in a while, or that a runaway car should get away with them is not a matter of much surprise, but when a young gent and his new wife pull their umbrella down over their heads and deliberately walk "ker slam bang" into that same gate, it looks as though their two minds had but a single thought, and railroad crossing gates were not the burden of their thoughts either.

Wm. Iverson, of South Ridgeway, was quite seriously injured Friday evening. He had been to Ann Arbor and came over from Milan to Britton on the night train, which only stops at Britton for the R. R. Crossing. As the train whistled for the station, Mr. Iverson went out on the platform intending to step off when the train stopped for the target, but in some way missed his footing and fell off while the train was running quite rapidly, dislocating his right shoulder and bruising and scratching his face in a shocking manner. He was taken to the Exelby House and attended by Dr. Hendershot, who succeeded in reducing the dislocation and Mr. Iverson was taken to his home on Saturday afternoon.

SPRINGVILLE SIFTINGS.

J. Ayres and family are recovering from the influenza

Owing to the unseasonable weather township officers are already budding.

Anna M. White spent last week with friends at Belleville and Ypsilanti.

Monday's gale did considerable damage to fences and shade trees in this vicinity.

Frank Louden and wife are pleasantly domiciled in a part of the Mosher residence.

The manufacture of medical supplies, which is extensively carried on at this point, is attracting wide spread notice, and it is rumored that an English syndicate is negotiating for the purchase of this great industry. If the sale is consummated the existence of Springville will be no longer a matter of ancient history.

A remarkably large porker has been purchased by Hock Bros from Mr. John Cadoo, of Madison. The pig was but fifteen months old when dressed, and weighs, as it is now, 548 pounds. It is a beautiful Chester White, and is probably the largest squealer killed in Lenawee this season.—Adrian Times.

MACON CENTER CHIPS.

Sophie Martin, who has been on the sick list the past week, is better.

R. R. Remington, who has been sick for several weeks, is some better but not considered out of danger, still being very weak.

The stockholders of Grange Hall have elected a Board of Directors for the ensuing year as follows: J. W. Baker, M. Yates, L. Osgood, M. J. Martin, R. Clarkson.

Three young fellows, well met, enjoyed themselves hugely on New Year's day by taking a glorious swim in the Fountain Spring pond near Lake Ridge Hotel. Verily, this is a mild winter.

John, son of Samuel Anderson, while out hunting last Thursday met with a mishap through the accidental discharge of his gun. The contents passed through his overshoe and boot and on its way nearly severed his second toe from his foot. Dr. Morden has the care of the case and at this date he is doing well.

At the last regular meeting of Macon Grange it was decided to have another contest. The leaders were selected who will make the necessary arrangements and report at the next meeting, which comes on Friday Evening, Jan. 24th, at 7 o'clock. In addition to the regular order of business, the following question is for discussion: Resolved, that farmers, as a class are not sufficiently educated to act as competent legislators.

Aff.—M. J. Martin, Susie M. Osgood, Mrs. Wm. R. Wilson, J. W. Baker.

Neg.—Daniel Bailey, Louise Rogers, Josie M. Clarkson, Abram Harrington.

There! I told you so. I knew they would have a good time at the Grange Hall, at the hard times social. Altho' the roads were almost impassible, yet there were nearly a hundred present. A spirited contest was had for the prizes. A large number taking part representing hard times in its various phases. The awarding of the prizes was submitted to a jury of three—two ladies and one gentleman. After due consideration the jury awarded the prizes to John W. Baker, Jr. and Miss Emma Bailey. When the prizes were brought forward to be presented it brought down the house, for it consisted of a hoe for the gentleman and washboard for the lady, which were presented, with a few well chosen remarks, by M. J. Martin, setting forth the usefulness of the articles, and especially so to young people who are just starting out in life during these hard times. The literary program was just splendid and very appropriate for the occasion.

NORTH FRANKLIN NEWS.

Henry Burtless and wife, of Napoleon, visited relatives in Franklin last week.

Willis Helme and wife of Ridgeway, were in Franklin the latter part of the week.

Will and Ed. Spaulding attended the Farmers' Club at Holloway, Saturday night.

Alice and Ray Mitchell of Bridgewater, have been guests at the homes of Abe Hunt and Smith Munger during the past week.

A package, weighing ten pounds and worth more than its weight in gold, arrived at the home of Frank Billington on Friday. Congratulations.

Looking over last week's HERALD, we fancied a new epidemic must have struck Franklin. Or was it the New Year's resolutions that gave so many long silent correspondents a simultaneous fit of conscience?

A surprise was perpetrated on Mr. and Mrs. Ben Lamkin, Saturday night. All the married children, with their families, were present, and the neighbors were not left out on the happy occasion. A very pleasant evening was spent in conversation, music and discussion of a bountiful supper.

Speaking of epidemics, we yield to no other Burg in the matter of La Grippe. Whether eagerly or not, we have followed the prevailing fashion, Some have been quite sick for a few days. Old Mr. Hunter had quite a serious wrestle with the disease, but is now convalescent, thanks to the vigorous constitution so wonderful in one of his age. Of lesser sufferers, even a list of the names would bring a frown to the face of our good-natured editor. We will spare him and trust the Russian invader may be as considerate.

"Years have not seen and time shall not see," the people sit down quitely to suffer pain, when enterprise can afford such a panacea as Salvation Oil.

"The old saying "opposition is the life of business" has not been sustained in one instance at least. Since the introduction of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup all other cough remedies have been dead stock.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

F. E. Pocklington spent Friday and Saturday in Detroit on business.

Will Bennett and Will Hayden of Tecumseh, were in the village Monday.

W. J. Helm, wife and daughter, visited relatives at Tipton during the past week.

Charley Thompson and wife, of Ypsilanti, visited friends here Sunday and Monday.

Lou Arner, who has been spending several weeks past with Miss Bodine of Manchester, returned home Tuesday.

Mrs. Rogers of Vermont, who is visiting her daughter, Mrs. H. J. Williams, has been under the doctor's care for the past week.

Those of our young people who attended the hard times social given at the Grange Hall, last week Wednesday evening, report a very pleasant time.

Horace Brown, wife and children, after a visit of several days with her sister, Mrs. Ed. Harrison, left for their home at Grand Ledge, Monday.

As Rev. Lowry was having a tussel with LaGrippe, Sunday, the morning and evening service was conducted by the class leaders as a prayer and praise meeting.

Those in the village who were entertaining the Emperor LaGrippe last week, have bid adieu to his friendship while he is spending the present among several others of our village.

On account of so many being sick that were on the program of the library circle which was to have met on Tuesday evening last, was adjourned for two weeks, and will meet one week from next Tuesday evening, if nothing prevents.

Mrs. Mary Palmer, Mrs. Laura Cheever, Theodore Allison and Mrs. Howe were called to Dundee on Wednesday of last week, to attend the funeral of their sister and aunt, Mrs. Zeliff, who was thrown from a wagon several days ago, and received such injuries as to cause her death.

The account of the accident of Uncle Benjamin Beevers reached us too late for last week's issue. While Mr. Beevers was aloft in one of his barns, putting down feed for his stock, he fell through a pitchhole to the floor and broke two ribs; he is doing as well as can be expected for one of his age.

TIPTON TOPICS.

Neal Derby shipped three car loads of stock last Saturday.

Mrs. Geo. Poucher is visiting friends at Bridgewater.

The weather appears to have caught the LaGrippe, as it is a little colder.

Fred Poucher is attending school at Brown's business college again this winter.

Erskine & Hampton have received three carloads of brick for their new store.

Mr. B. F. Lamkin has been compelled to close his school in Dist. No. 2, on account of sickness.

The P of I's held their annual meeting last Tuesday evening, and the following officers were elected:

Pres.—C. H. Bramble.
Vice Pres.—J. Q. Osborn.
Sec'y —Ray Kemp.
Treas.—Nettie Camburn.
Guide—S. N. Munger.

AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST.

A revolution in potato culture is likely to be occasioned by the remarkable results in the American Agriculturist Prize Crop Competition. That magazine a year ago offered prizes aggregating nearly $10,000 for the largest yield on the measured acre each of wheat, oats, corn and potatoes. The bat award for a crop of 135 bushels in the December issue whetted farmers' expectations for big results in the potato class. They were not disappointed, for the grand prize goes to a crop of 738 bushels, 25 pounds of the Dakota Red, grown in one-acre of strong clay loam in Aroostook county, Me., manured with a ton of special potato fertilizer. The twelve prize-winning crops averaged within a fraction of 500 bushels per acre, and the first 100 crops averaged 325½ bushels per acre. These details are all the more remarkable when we remember that the average product per acre in the whole United States the past year was only 76 bushels of potatoes. These prize crops were all grown at a large cash profit, showing that so-called high farming is the most profitable. The American Agriculturist for January, which gives the details of the potato award, also announces a still greater potato contest for 1890. In view of the past year's experience, thousands of progressive farmers will co operate in this renewed attempt to make farming more profitable.

The close sympathy existing between the stomach and brain is noticeably exhibited in the headache resulting from indigestion. Laxador always cures headache, when caused by indigestion.

AN ECHO FROM BRITTON.

EDITOR HERALD:—

Will you allow me to congratulate the good people of Britton upon having so able and humorous a correspondent to report weekly through the TECUMSEH HERALD the Britton news. It is not easy for the Brittonites to guess who he may be, or whence he came. It seems so remarkable that a person of such talents for a paper reporter should deign to make his home in a city so young and small as ours yet is. But evidently he thinks it the proper thing to begin at the beginning of a town and grow up with it. For I take him to be a young man—or perhaps he may be girl—full of vivacity and large imagination. He would seem to be another Eli Perkins or Artemus Ward, or perhaps he may be the son of Josiah Allen's wife, only his orthography is a little better than hers, and even better than Nasby's. He surely cannot have come of the school of Josiah Allen's wife, nor yet of the Nasby school. His familiarity with bears would suggest that he might have descended from Dan Boone, of Kentucky, but then he seems to know all about the "tobogan," which would lead one to suppose that he hailed from Russia. Well, it matters not whence he came, he is here and is giving us Brittonites some specimens of a reporter's wit and ability to write up the news of a thrifty town. As wide as the circulation of the HERALD, so wide must be known the wonderful doings at Britton. Wonderful, because the people of Britton know nothing themselves of the doings reported until they read the report in the HERALD.

But, Mr. Editor, what does it matter if the items reported are not strictly true? If they seem a little funny, will they not secure a laugh, and is not laughter a good thing? Of course it is. Let our very intelligent and humorous reporter write up a column every week for the HERALD, with the understanding that he writes from the standpoint of imagination and not of actual facts, that he does not aim to give news items, but his own fun, and let the column be headed thus: Sharps and Flats, with the Sharps left out.

PHUNNY PHELLOW.

THE POULTRY SHOW.

The exhibit made last week at Dean's Opera House in Adrian by the Southern Michigan Poultry Association was creditable in the highest degree. Many who attended the show pronounced it superior to the show at Detroit last summer and it undoubtedly excelled any exhibit ever before seen in this County.

Dr. C. A Waldron, of Tecumseh, and C. D. Keyes, of Clinton, the President and Secretary of the Association, were untiring in their efforts to promote the success of the affair and it was largely due to their efforts that the exhibition swelled to the proportions it did. Among the coops on exhibition Tecumseh and other towns in this vicinity were well represented. The prizes were awarded on Friday, and we shall publish the official list as soon as they are made public. Below is a full list of the entries:

C. L. Albaugh, Tecumseh; Miles Baldwin, Tecumseh; Geo. Bender; Onondaga; B. M. Brown, Blissfield, H. F. Barnes, Ridgeway; W. M. Carrol, Onondaga; A. J. Chappell, Adrian; Oscar Doolittle, Adrian; O. M. Dayton, Onondaga; Elias Davis, Toledo, O.; Frank R. Ecker, Lowell, Mich.; Floral City Poultry Yards, Monroe; L. H. Foster, Adrian; D. W. Grandon, Adrian; George M. Gandy, Ypsilanti; Charles Hooten, Tecumseh; C. F. Hollister, Adrian; J. M. Ingersoll, Tecumseh. C. W. Jones, Richland; Jones and Jackson, Tecumseh; C. D. Keyes, Clinton; J. L. Kishpaugh, Clinton; Kilburtz and Yager, Monroe; James Lowry, Tecumseh; E. E. Mugg, Dundee; P. A. Montague, Raisin. D. B. McLachlan, York; H. P. McLave, Allen; A. McHenry, York; Sylvester Nase, Clinton; George H. Olds, York; W. S. Osborn, Tecumseh; E. F. Pierce, Catawba Island, O.; W. L. Rogers, Whittaker; A. Rice, Tecumseh; C. W. Rose, Adrian; Ernest Stephens, North Adams; W. R Smith, Napoleon; Frank Sargent, Adrian; L. A. Teachout, Adrian, Frank Wilson, Adrian; C. A. Waldron, Tecumseh; Mrs. J. W. Wentworth, Adrian; W. J. Waldron, Tecumseh.

Thomas A. Edison resolutely objects to even the appearance of talking about himself in public; and therefor it was only after considerable persuasion that his friend George Parsons Lathrop obtained permission to publish a number of interesting remarks and reminiscences which the great inventor imparted to him in conversation at different times. The article entitled "Talks with Edison" will appear in HARPER'S MAGAZINE for February. It is said to afford for the first time a vivid perception of "how an inventer invents."

Has Speaker Reed got the grippe? Some of his late rulings indicate a serious malady of some kind.

If the present competition for the World's fair of 1892 continues much longer, the fair will finally be located —in the soup.

Politicians may fume, and high taxers may fret, but the great mass of the people believe that whiskey and tobacco are very good subjects for taxation.

The chief danger of the grippe is in thinking you have recovered when you haven't. The patient is liable to go out too soon and bring on a relapse which often proves fatal.

The quinine manufacturers demand a restoration of the tariff tax on that article. By all means. Why shouldn't Pennsylvania quinine be protected as well as Pennsylvania pig iron?

The Cronin case takes the cake among great criminal trials. In the number of days occupied, it was the most lengthy trial in the whole history of criminal jurisprudence.

Allen G. Thurman says that when he was chosen U. S. Senator for Ohio on two occasions his election did not cost him a penny—not even a drink of whiskey. Times have changed since the old Roman sat in the senate.

The outcome of the Cronin case demonstrates the necessity of jury reform. When a single knave, crank or bigot is more potent than eleven men of character and intelligence, it would seem that some change was an imperative necessity.

The Senatorial contest in Ohio has ended in the choice of Calvin S. Brice for U. S. Senator. He has received the caucus nomination and will be elected. The contest was a hot one, but it ended harmoniously and there will be no bolting.

The people were assured that Gen. Harrison's election would restore business prosperity, but his administration enters upon the new year with 11 per cent more business failures in 1889 than in 1888, and with agriculture in the most depressed condition it has known since the war.

The bean farmers of New England are bawling for protection. This demand demands serious consideration. If the bean diet of Boston should peter out, where under the sun would the brains that govern the country come from? It makes one shudder to think of it.

At a Jackson banquet given by the Butler club of Boston last week, the principal speakers of the evening were Gen. Butler and Corporal Tanner. Here is a new combination on the political chess board, that may make a little fun yet. Butler and Tanner! What a ticket for 1892.

The new year opens with the South enjoying greater activity and with brighter prospects for the future than this section has ever known before. The grand triumphal march of progress has led the South up to a high elevation, from which it can look forward to the brilliant prospects ahead.

Mr. McKinley's committee is having a hard time of it taking testimony on the tariff question. Every day or two some Republican manufacturer bobs up and bawls for free raw materials. This treason to the fetich of protection in the house of its friends should be stamped out in some way, or the entire structure will tumble into ruins.

The fact that there were over two hundred strikes in England during the past year, and that most of them were successful, is one of the signs of the times that all may wisely heed. But isn't it a little singular that the wage worker should get his rights in a free trade country like England? The test of experience everywhere is sure to shatter the high tariff idols.

Henry George has a powerful article in the January number of the Arena on the "Rum Power." He opposes both license and prohibition and takes the ground that the liquor traffic should be absolutely free. He sustains his position with such trenchant logic, that the reader is almost converted before he knows it. Every temperance man ought to read the article.

TARIFF BEATITUDES.

Blessed are the silk importers, for they shall go snucks with the limbs of the law and get three-fifths of their import duties refunded unto them.

Under the present tariff law the duty laid on silk ribbons is ambiguous. In fact very many of the duties laid by the present tariff are ambiguous. It would almost seem as though the law had been framed for the express purpose of promoting litigation and disputes between importers and the custom house officials. The duty on silk goods of a certain grade is 50 per cent. The duty on silk trimmings is 30 per cent. The importers claimed that silk ribbons, used for trimmings only, should be entered as trimmings and charged a duty of only 30 per cent. The collector of customs, however, decided that they should be properly scheduled under that class of silk goods that paid a duty of 50 per cent. This 50 per cent duty on silk ribbons used for trimmings was paid by the importers under protest, and suits were then instituted by them against the government to recover the excess of duty paid.

Attorneys at law flourish in the Atlantic cities the same as they do out west; perhaps a little more so. Plenty of attorneys can be found, who are ready to institute a law suit against anybody or anything for a liberal fee. A syndicate of silk importers was formed, who joined hands with a syndicate of attorneys, and suits were pushed against the United States with all convenient dispatch. The circuit courts of New York and Pennsylvania rendered a judgment in favor of the importers. An appeal was taken and the Supreme Court of the U. S. has just affirmed the judgment of the lower courts. The excess of duties paid reached about $7,000,000, and the government must refund that amount to the importers. The lawyers and the importers divide the spoils equally between them.

But the most interesting feature of this tale remains to be told. The consumers of these goods bought them months and years ago and paid the regular purchase price with the entire 50 per cent duty added. Do the consumers receive any of this rebate of 30 per cent? Not much. They paid the $7,000,000 of excessive duties out of their own pockets. Uncle Sam now refunds the entire $7,000,000. The poor importers receive one moiety—as a bonus. The poverty stricken lawyers receive the other moiety—as fees. The whole proceeding is a bald swindle and a downright steal.

Blessed are the makers of paper, for they shall receive a bonus of 35 per cent in the home market when the "visible supply" of stock is short, and shall shut down their mills for repairs when the "visible supply" is excessive.

The New England paper mills were all shut down for several days prior to Jan. 2. This was the second time they have shut down within 6 months, ostensibly for repairs, but actually for relieving the strain on the market. The paper makers are protected by a tariff duty of 35 per cent, and have no competition whatever. They have the home market exclusively to themselves. The duty is sufficiently high to shut out importations. Now, when the "visible supply" on hand, or the manufactured stock, accumulates beyond the demand of the home market, thus lowering the prices, the mills, under a compact with each other, simultaneously shut down for several days for repairs. By this process they save wages and increase the price of their product.

The Paper World, the leading trade journal in the paper industry, in commenting upon this policy, says, that although no trust exists in the business, yet as long as such an agreement exists and is operative, a monopoly is thereby established, and maintained against the public. The envelope makers have been operating under such an agreement for some time. Whether an actual trust exists or not is immaterial, as long as the mill owners have the power of restricting their output in order to "squeeze" the home market. By this ingenious contrivance consumers are mulcted several million dollars annually for the sole benefit of a few mill owners. The mill employees are absolutely damaged by it, for the frequent suspension of work by the mills entails a heavy loss to them in wages.

But this is not the worst feature of this pernicious system. Being relieved from competition and having a monopoly of the home market, they have no incentive to extend their business and build up an export trade. Our own people are made to suffer from a short supply and high prices. The mill owners deprive their workmen of needed labor and wages; and they deprive themselves of the larger profits sure to result by a proper display of business enterprise in reaching out for the export trade. What a benign institution this war tariff is—to the mill owner! But how do the consumers and wage workers like it?

County of Lenawee. }

Joseph H. Smith, of Tecumseh, in said county, being duly sworn, says that he is of full age and that on the 24th day of September, A. D., 1889, he personally posted notices of tax sale of which notice the within is a true copy, in three of the most public places in the village of Tecumseh, in said county of Lenawee and state of Michigan, as follows:—

One notice on the front door of the Council building in said village.

One notice in the Postoffice building in said village and

One notice in the office of the Lilley House hotel in said village.

And that said notices were each and all of them posted conspicuously.

Joseph H. Smith,

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 4th. day of January, A. D., 1890.

Chas. Burridge,
Notary Public in and for Lenawee Co. Michigan.

On motion the above report was accepted, adopted and ordered filed.

PETITIONS AND APPLICATIONS.

The following petition was then presented and read.

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 6th., 1890.

To the Honorable, the President and Common Council of the village of Tecumseh, Michigan.

Gentlemen:

Your petitioners would respectfully pray your honorable body to grant the Thompson-Houston Electric Company, of Boston and Chicago, their successors and assigns, the privilege of constructing and maintaining electric pole and wire lines through and upon the streets, alleys and public grounds of your village to supply electric currents for general purposes to the citizens of Tecumseh.

Your petitioners would further respectfully request your honorable body after taking favorable action on the above, to enact such an ordinance as may be deemed suitable for the protection of property of petitioners or their successors, and your petitioners will ever pray etc.

Yours respectfully,
Thompson-Houston Electric Co.
per A. B. Cotton, Agent.

On motion the above petition was granted by the following vote:—

Noes—Ames—1.

NEW BUSINESS.

The council then passed the following ordinance:—

An ordinance granting the Thomson-Houston Electric Co. the right to erect and maintain electric Pole and wire lines within the village of Tecumseh, Michigan.

SECT I.

Be it ordained by the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh: That authority is hereby granted the Thomson-Houston Electric Co., of Boston and Chicago, their successors and assigns, to use the streets, alleys and public grounds of said village for the purpose of erecting and maintaining electric pole and wire lines to supply electric currents for general purposes to the citizens of said village and vicinity, subject to the regulations hereinafter provided.

SECTION II.

Poles erected under the provisions of this ordinance shall be located under the supervision of the Village street Committee and if at any time it shall be deemed necessary to move any pole or wire to some other location this Common Council reserves the right to order such pole or wire moved by giving the Company ten (10) days' notice.

SECTION III.

Poles and material to be used in constructing said Electric Lines shall be erected within a reasonable time after distribution upon the public property and if said grantees shall fail to so erect or to remove such material, it shall become the duty of the street commissioner to cause the removal of the same at the expense of grantees under this ordinance.

SECTION IV.

All work of excavating, refilling, and restoring the pavement shall be done under the supervision of the street commissioner, and to the entire satisfaction of the street committee, and in all cases the pavement shall be restored as speedily as possible and to the same condition in which it was before, at the expense of the Thompson Houston Electric Co.

SECTION V.

Poles to be erected as herein provided for must be of reasonably sound and straight timber and not less than five (5) inches in diameter at the tops, and wires stretched thereon must be at a height of not less than twenty-five (25) feet above the surface of the street within the fire limits, and elsewhere at a height of not less than twenty (20) feet above the street.

SECTION VI.

Failure to construct a reasonable portion of their plant within one year from the passage of this ordinance shall constitute a forfeiture of franchise herein contemplated.

SECTION VII.

The provisions of this ordinance shall be of full force and effect immediately upon passage of same and continue in operation for the period of fifteen (15) years thereafter, unless forfeited under Section VI.

Dated Jan. 6, 1890.

The following bills were received and referred to the finance committee:—

E. A. Hodges, $6.00; City of Adrian, $70.00; A. James, purchasing agent, $65.64; Moreland Bros. & Crane, $19.32; Wm. R. Underhill, repairing engine and heater, $381.53; T. R. Kyle, marshal, $4.00; A. E. Kennedy, $3.80.

The chairman of the finance committee reported that the insurance on council building and contents had expired and that he had caused new policies to be written, one of $3000 on building and one of $1000 on contents, subject to the approval of the council, and on motion his report was accepted and adopted.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The finance committee reported favorably on the above bills and on motion orders were directed drawn for the several amounts.

The following applications for the position of sexton for the year 1890, were received.

W. C. Jordan, same duties as last year, $500.

Samuel Haight, the same, $150.

On motion the council proceeded to elect a sexton for the year 1890, by ballot, with the following result:

W. C. Jordan received 7 votes; Samuel Haight 1 vote. W. C. Jordan, having received a majority of all the votes cast, was declared elected.

Council then adjourned.

CHAS. F. FIELD,
Recorder.

THE SONG OF ZACHARIAS.

LESSON III, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, JAN. 19.

Text of the Lesson, Luke i, 67-80—Commit Verses 76-79—Golden Text, Luke i. 76—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

67. "And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Ghost." After Mary had spent some three months with Elizabeth she returned to her own home. In due time God gave to Elizabeth the promised son, and when the day came to circumcise the child, the people who had come together were about to call him Zacharias, after his father, but his mother said that he should be called John. His father being appealed to asked for a writing table, and wrote, saying, "His name is John." then were the ears opened and the tongue loosed which had been closed and silent many months because of unbelief (see vss. 20, 62), and as he spake and praised God he was filled with the Holy Spirit and uttered this prophecy.

68. "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel." Thus ends the first, second and fourth books of Psalms (xli, 13; lxxii, 18; cvi, 48) telling of God's mercies and deliverances, past and future, for His people Israel. The name is first found in Ex. v, 1, when Moses and Aaron demand of Pharaoh that he let God's people go, and is always associated with God's special interest in that people. The prophet Jeremiah associates the two titles, Lord of Hosts and God of Israel, at least thirty times, indicating His power to care for His people and deliver them.

"He hath visited and wrought redemption for His people" (R. V.). It was four hundred years since Malachi had said that the Lord would come on behalf of His people, and many more hundreds since God had covenanted with David and Abraham, but now His time had come to work redemption.

69. "And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David." The horn is the symbol of strength or power. Hannah sings of her horn and the horn of His anointed, David sings of the horn of his salvation, which is Jehovah (1 Sam ii, 1, 10; Ps. xviii, 2), and in Ps. cxxxii, 17, Jehovah Himself says that in Zion He will make the horn of David to bud, indicating the coming of the Messiah from the house of David.

71. "That we should be saved from our enemies and from the hand of all that hate us." Let us remember that this lesson, although like all Scripture, written for our instruction (Rom. xv, 4) refers primarily and chiefly to Israel and her salvation from all her enemies, as the prophets had foretold. Let one passage out of hundreds indicate the meaning "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will raise unto David a Righteous Branch, and a king shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth. In His days shall Judah be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely, and this is His name whereby He shall be called, The Lord Our Righteousness" (Jer. xxiii, 5, 6).

72, 73. "To perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember His holy covenant, the oath which he sware to our father Abraham." In Ps. cv, 8-10 the covenant is spoken of as one made with Abraham and confirmed to Isaac, Jacob and Israel, and one of the promises in the covenant is distinctly said to be to give them the land of Canaan. If any one will take the trouble to read carefully the oft repeated covenant with Abraham in Gen. xii, xiii, xv, xvii, xxii, they will see the full terms of that covenant, and surely be persuaded that it is specially for Israel, and looks beyond even our days.

74, 75. "Delivered, * * * serve Him, * * * in holiness and righteousness before Him all the days of our life." One glance at Israel's present condition, 1,800 years out of their land, still sifted among all nations and yet preserved, the rebuke still resting upon them, clearly indicates that the words of the Spirit through Zacharias and the prophets have not yet been fulfilled. And the reason is not far to seek. They rejected John and did as they pleased to him (Matt. xvii, 12); they rejected Jesus, their Messiah, and crucified Him, and the kingdom which was at hand, including Israel's deliverance and restoration, is postponed till He shall return in power and glory preceded by another John the Baptist, even Elijah himself, as His forerunner (Malachi, 3, 6).

But while Israel's blindness continues because of their unbelief and rejection of their Messiah, He is taking out of all nations a people for His name, and whoever is willing to receive Jesus as their own personal Saviour becomes thereby a child of Abraham not an Israelite, a child of God, an heir according to the promise (Gal. iii, 7, 26, 29), and shall in due time find what it means to be a joint heir with Christ, a king and priest unto God, when Jesus shall be manifested as King of the Jews, King of kings and Lord of lords, whom all nations shall serve and before whom all kings shall fall down (Ps. lxxii, 11). It is the privilege of all such, being delivered from the wrath to come and from the power of the devil to harm us, to serve the Lord Jesus without fear all the days of our life, walking with Him in Holiness and Righteousness. As to the power to live a holy life, see 1 Cor. i, 4-9; x, 13; 1 Thess. v, 23, 24.

76. "And thou, child, shalt be called the prophet of the highest." Zacharias now speaks of his son as the herald of the Messiah and the prophet of the Most High, he no longer doubts the words of Gabriel. The title "Highest" or "Most High" is not found over forty times in Scripture, and chiefly in the books of Psalms and Daniel. Its first use in Gen. xiv, 17-21 teaches us not to receive favors from the world, but fearlessly stand apart and let the possessor of heaven and earth be sufficient for us. John proved to be just that kind of a man.

"Thou shalt go before the face of the Lord to prepare His ways." If we have the spirit of John we will not seek any reputation or glory for ourselves but be gladly consumed as we prepare His way who is soon to come again. The two ways in which we can best prepare His way are by holy lives, separate from this world, and by winning souls.

77. "To give knowledge of salvation unto His people by the remission of their sins." None but the Saviour can give salvation, but His servants can give the knowledge of salvation, and they should all be telling of His salvation from day to day (Ps. lxxi, 15, 24). There is no salvation that does not include the forgiveness of sins, but our message is, "Be it known unto you that through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins, and by Him all that believe are justified from all things" (Acts xiii, 38, 39). Individually we receive salvation, even the forgiveness of our sins, when with true penitence we receive Jesus as our personal Saviour. Israel as a nation shall receive salvation when they look upon Him whom they have pierced and receive Him as their Messiah. Then shall Mic. vii, 19, 20; Isa. xliii, 25; lx, 21, be true of them. [Please read these passages, and may they be true of you now.]

78. "Through the tender mercy of our God." All salvation, whether national or individual, is of grace, and only of grace, so long as we think in any way to merit it, we cannot have it; but when we come empty, crying "God be merciful to me a sinner," then salvation is ours.

BELLBOY BURNED

A Most Valuable Stable of 34 Horses

DESTROYED BY A FIRE AT VERSAILES, KY.

Among Them the Famous Bellboy for Whom $100,000 was Recently Refused by His Owner.

VERSAILES, KY., January 11.—Bellboy, the famous trotting stallion, was burned to death with thirty four other horses in a fire which occurred at the Macy Bros' stables here, this morning. He was owned by J. Clarke, who bought him at auction here for $51,000. It is said that he lately refused $100,000 for him.

A WEST VIRGINIA

Contested Election Case—Fight Opens on the World's Fair.

WASHINGTON, January 11.—The contested election case of John H. McGinnis against John C. Alderson, from the Third West Virginia district, was called before the Elections Committee of the House to-day. A. S. Fuller appeared for McGinnis and J. W. St. Clair for Alderson. As McGinnis had not filed a brief covering the facts of the case, he was given fifteen days to submit such a brief, and it was agreed to allow Alderson fifteen days additional to file his answer.

The Foreign Affairs Committee of the House has begun work on the World's Fair bill introduced by Mr. Adams, and at a well attended meeting the bill was discussed at some length. The discussion related principally to the best manner of removing the difficulty that would arise in the House on the manner of voting for the selection of the city in which the exposition should be held. It was suggested that the plan of dropping off the city having the lowest number of votes at the end of each ballot would be an easy solution of the problem. This caused a spirited discussion, when the committee adjourned without coming to a conclusion.

WHAT A WIDOW CAUSED.

A Man Found Shot Dead in Her House.

ELMIRA, N. Y., January 11.—At 4 o'clock in the afternoon Chief of Police Little was summoned to the house of Mrs. Mary Eilenberger, at 520 East Church street, where it was reported that a man had shot himself. When the chief opened the front door it struck against the body of William Edwards, a well-to-do farmer, residing in this county. He was lying on his face in a pool of blood and a revolver was lying by his side. Mrs. Eilenberger was the only living inmate of the house. She said that she and Edwards had quarrelled over money matters and he drew a revolver and threatened to shoot her. In attempting to get the weapon from him it was discharged and the ball entered Edwards' head. It was discovered that the ball had been fired into the back of Edwards' neck and that the coat collar was burned by the powder. Mrs. Eilenberger was arrested for the murder. The couple have maintained intimate relations for a number of years. Mrs. Eilenberger is a widow. Edwards was married and had a family.

THE NEWSPAPERS

Given the "Grand Bounce" by Bismarck.

BERLIN, January 11.—The emperor has ordered that the newspaper organs of ultra conservative party be no longer received at any royal palace. This order was caused by the irritation which these organs have caused the emperor by their editorial attacks and their political reports and articles, and is intended as a mark of his displeasure towards that party.

A Maniac Hangs Herself.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., January 11.—Jennie E. Dennison, aged 35, an inmate of the insane asylum, committed suicide some time during the night. She was found dead this morning on the floor in her bed room with a sheet tied tightly around her neck. She was a daughter of Rev. George Dennison, a Methodist minister of Geneva. She had been in the asylum only three weeks and had made several attempts to strangle herself with her hands. Her insanity was caused by sickness.

HIS ROYAL INFANCY.

The King of Spain Is Much Improved.

MADRID, January 11.—The condition of the young king continues to present more favorable symptoms. His physicians report this morning that he passed the night very comfortably, and that he slept well at intervals and ate some soup with relish. They feel much encouraged therefore, although admitting the illness to be still critical.

An American Schooner in Trouble.

ZARSPORT, Me., January 11.—A dispatch from Port-Au Prince says the 158 ton schooner Lackawanna of this place is a total wreck at Jeromie, Hayti. After anchoring at that port December 21, the captain was ordered by a colored pilot who came aboard to change his moorings. He obeyed under protest, as there was a heavy sea running, with the result stated above. The captain has laid the case before United States Minister Douglass at Port Au Prince.

The Suffocated Miners.

HELENA, MONT., January 11.—The shafts of the St. Lawrence and Anaconda copper mines at Butte, which closed November 15 owing to fire, were yesterday opened by the company. The exploring party reported the flames as still raging fiercely in the lower workings. The mines have been sealed up again. The damage so far is enormous. The party found no trace of the miners who were suffocated.

FAMOUS PICTURE.

LONDON, January 11.—Turner's famous painting the "Grand Canal of Venice" has been bought from the Earl Dudley for Mr. Vanderbilt, of New York. The price paid was twenty thousand pounds.

Killed His Neighbor and Blew His Own Brains Out.

WINAMAC, IND., January 11.—Chas. Kurtart was yesterday shot and instantly killed by his neighbor, Ferdinand Gastings, with whom he had quarrelled over boundaries of their farms. Gastings then blew out his own brains.

Two Victims Die.

CHICAGO, January 11.—Two of the victims of yesterday's explosion at the John Morris printing company, will probably die. The names are George Burgess, teamster, and O. C. Balch, salesman.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all throat and lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. Noyes, 149 Powers block, Rochester, N. Y.

Our subscribers should bear in mind that we offer reduced rates for 1890, when payment is made in advance. Pay your subscription promptly and secure advantage of this reduction.

Deserving Confidence.

It is quite surprising to notice the numerous reports of remarkable cases of nervous diseases cured, such as headache, fits, nervous prostration, heart affections, St. Vitus Dance, insanity and prolonged sleeplessness, by Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. This new and improved brain and nerve food, and medicine, is everywhere gaining a remarkable reputation for curing the worst of these diseases, as well as the injurious effects of worry, nervous irritation, mental and physical overwork. Baker & Hall the druggists, will give away trial bottles of this wonderful remedy. It positively contains no opium or morphine.

COMPLETE CONFESSION

Of the Twelve-year-old Boy Who Murdered His Father and Stepmother.

ELK ADER, Iowa, January 13.—Wesley Elkins, the 12-year-old boy who a week ago murdered his father and step-mother in Elk township, this county, and made a complete confession of the crime, pleaded guilty before the District Court, now in session here, to murder in the first degree, and was yesterday sentenced by Judge Hoyt to imprisonment for life at hard labor. Young Elkins manifested no feeling when the sentence was pronounced. He is undoubtedly the youngest life criminal ever sentenced in this state. The Judge has ordered that the confession shall not be given to the public, owing to its sensational character.

An Invariable Sign.

Swelling of ankles or feet when not due to rheumatism, Prof DeCosta says, is always caused by a weak or diseased heart. So is shortness of breath, pain or uneasiness when lying on left side, smothering spells. The only cure is Dr. Miles' New Cure. Sold at Baker & Hall's.

The young state of Montana is putting on airs. She has got four U. S. Senators already, and two legislatures.

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membranes of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic researches, however, has proven this to be a fact, and result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to the applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N. B.—For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet of this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 303 west King street, Toronto, Canada. [Scientific American.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

DR. TRASK'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame, every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

GUMBO'S GRAB BAG.

You have waked and called me early, called me early, brother dear.
I thought dead sure I'd die last night, and yet you see I'm here.
Not since the blessed New Year have I had a bite to eat—
Please put some mustard to my back, and a hot brick to my feet.
I've sneezed until too weak to sneeze, I've wished that I were dead—
Put hot cloths on my heaving chest and cold ones to my head.
I feel like some one held me and was taking up the slack—
Wont you gently slip a pillow 'neath the middle of my back?
Wish you'd call the doctor—Ah-wo-o-sh! It hurts to sneeze—
Won't you kindly rub some arnica upon my aching knees?
Please lay a little chunk of ice upon my revered lip,
Then wander forth and slay the fiend who laughs at Russian Grip.

Do you patronize the Tecumseh postoffice? If so, ask Scove Walker where McGinty gets his mail.

The men who haven't had the grip are the sinners who crack jokes about it. Those who have had a tussle with it consider it anything but a laughing matter.

Whether this weather won't give the tile business a boom?

When the ice men intend to gather their winter's crop.

What would become of the "ellum" wood we have agreed to accept on subscription, if the bottom should drop out of the roads.

Whether the rainy season will let up when the moon changes.

Joshua Gumbo moved upon a farm down in Milan about two years ago, and we have not seen the old man in several months. This forenoon he suddenly appeared, clad in a slouch cap, rubber boots and an overcoat that must have come over in the Mayflower, squared himself in front of our office sanctum and gazed intently for ten or fifteen minutes upon an Uncle Tom's Cabin lithograph that hung in the window. He then opened the door and sang out, with his familiar nasal twang:

"Is this 'ere Uncle Tom's Cabin troupe goin' ter show here?"

"Yes sir, it is."

"It haint bin 'n showed 'n gone already, has it?"

"No sir, it will be here on the 22d."

"Is it a genooine troupe?"

"I suppose it is."

"Hev they got the original Uncle Tom, who's 110 year old, 'n blacker 'n the ace o' spades, with snow white wool?"

"So I am informed."

"And will the darkies escape across the Ohio river on chunks 'o ice?"

"Yes sir, I believe so."

"And will the live grey hounds walk right onter the stage afore the foot lights?"

"That is what they advertise."

"And will little Eva be dressed in pink silk, with blue beads round her neck and barber pole stockin's?"

"Yes sir, of course."

"And will old Legree be on deck with a big black whip, 'n a spine in his back, 'n a broad brim straw hat, four feet in diameter?"

"Yes, I suppose so."

"Well, me 'n my ole woman hev bin wantin' to see this show for a long time, but we've never heerd o' its comin' afore until arter 'twas gone. You kin set me down for two tickets. I shall be here, if I hev to boat it, and I shall fetch Jerusha along."

The grippe is spreading and we say: "Let 'er spread." The only advice we have to offer to the victim is this: Keep a stiff upper lip and a good supply of quinine on hand and don't own you've got it. If you send for a doctor you are likely to have pneumonia. If you get frightened and send for two doctors, then good bye, John.

It is sad to see with what levity editors treat so serious a matter. Read what a few of them say:

Will some one tell us if McGinty is down with the influenza?

Every hotel porter is expected to take "la grippe" from the guests as they arrive.

Suggestions as to the treatment of influenza are numerous. Here is one: Treat it with contempt.

It is known now why McGinty went down to the bottom of the sea. It was to escape the influenza.

When the year 1889 went down among the things of the past, what a pity that McGinty and la grippe did not accompany it.

First man: "I went over to St. Paul yesterday to see—" Second man: "Who—McGinty?" First man: "No, to see if the cable cars had got the grip." Biff! Bang! Whack! Five minutes later. Third man: Ting - a - ling - a - ling. "Hello, is that the coroner?" Coroner: "Yes: what's wanted?" "You are wanted at the morgue; a man tried to spring a grip gag." Coroner: "No inquest necessary. Accidental death. Plant him."

A LETTER FROM NEW YORK.

A very interesting meeting was that held on the evening of Jan. 7 in the Y. M. C. A. hall on 23d st., by Mrs. Ballantine Booth, wife of the commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army. Here for the first time she gave an account of the work done by some of the women connected with the army down in the slums of New York. Six of the women thus engaged were present at the meeting, dressed in their working uniform. The leader was called upon to speak, and told in a simple and earnest manner their methods of work, and the manner in which they are received by the people. In two small rooms down in the heart of one of the worst portions of the city, these brave women make their home. No carpets upon the floor, for, as Mrs. Booth said, no carpets are allowed in slumdom. To live as the people around them live, and to strive from their own level to raise them to better things, is the aim of these consecrated workers. The furniture of these rooms consists of a stove, a plain deal table, two or three chairs, and two beds, one of which is on the floor. Here, unsalaried, and receiving nothing for their labors, but their food and clothing, which is of the cheapest kind, and half worn, these women devote their lives to the amelioration of the condition of the poor fallen creatures about them.

They go from house to house offering such help as they see is most needed. Sometimes caring for the sick, sometimes bringing simple food to the starving, or helping tend a neglected baby, or again getting down on their knees and scrubbing the floor, meanwhile singing their cheery hymns of love and hope. At first people would ask, when offered assistance, "What pay do you want?" And when told none, only to be allowed to help them, they were looked upon with suspicion, and the door shut in their faces. But little by little, in one way or another, they are winning their way into the hearts and homes of these poor degraded creatures, who themselves ascribe their wretchedness to drink. Oh! the cursed drink!

Mrs. Booth spoke at considerable length and with great interest. In form she is slight and girlish, with youthful face of great sweetness, and varying expression. Her smile is bright and contagious, and she moves her audience to laughter and to tears by the incidents which she relates of their work. These workers in the slums are not known by their real character there, for to be stamped as "Salvationists" would be to have the doors shut and barred to them. But many are the conjectures in regard to them, and among some they are termed the Unknown.

A woman came to their rooms one stormy night, and begged for shelter. She had no covering upon her head, her hair was dripping with the rain, and she had wrapped her shawl about the dying infant which she carried in her arms. She had been turned into the street for lack of means to pay her rent. Her husband had deserted her, and with a babe of six weeks, she had been trying to earn something, but had been obliged to give up her work that day on account of the dying condition of her child. They were taken in and tenderly cared for during the night. In the morning the woman was provided with a hat and shoes, given means to reach an up-town hospital. She had been inside the hospital walls but five minutes when the infant breathed its last, and she was left to return to her desolate life. Nothing to live for, and everything to drive her to despair, but for the help and love and encouraging words of this little band of women who rejoice in an opportunity to point such ones to a life of hope and usefulness.

In God's sight the sin polluted wreck found in the lowest dens of New York are just as precious as the carefully guarded ones in costly homes in Fifth avenue. We admire the sparkling brilliancy of the diamond, so finely cut and polished, but do we forget that someone had to dig it out of the rock in its rough and unlovely state, with the soil still clinging to its surface. We admire the soft luster of the pearl, but forget that someone had to dive deep down into the sea, and scraping about in the slime and dirt at the bottom, bring up the oyster that contained the precious gem. In God's diadem these soul jewels will sparkle with greater brilliancy to us who have worked to rescue them from the filth in which they were well nigh lost.

Space forbids my quoting more from Mrs. Booth's instructive remarks. A large and cultivated audience paid close attention, and showed deep sympathy with the work during the entire meeting.

This work while yet in its infancy in this country, has been carried on for years with great success in London. While we may not approve of all the methods used by this organization, which now numbers eight or ten thousand in this country, we must admire the earnestness and courage which characterize their labors.

S. A. Lamont, of Hudson, has received an original pension.

The week of prayer was quite generally observed throughout the county.

The County Board of Supervisors held their January session last week.

The Patrons of Industry are increasing in numbers throughout the County.

Hudson has one case of the diptheria and about one hundred cases of the grippe.

A Wheatland farmer, Hillsdale Co., has discovered a fine vein of coal on his farm.

The poultry season, which is about ended, has been a poor one for buyers and shippers.

The new contractors are now at work upon the addition to the Hudson school house.

It requires a four horse team now to pull the Morenci and Hudson stage through the mud.

The Congregational Church at Addison will conduct a series of revival meetings next month.

It is said that Gen. Spaulding, of Monroe, is already in the field as a Congressional candidate.

Up to the first of January $1,246.54 were paid out for sparrow bounties in the County of Lenawee.

A dancing club has been organized at Blissfield and the trippers will take their first trip Friday evening.

The wedding epidemic in Hudson is subsiding, says the Gazette—sort of a receding of the tied, as it were.

Several farmers in the vicinity of Addison have been breaking up new ground during ahe past month.

Monroe county supervisors will submit a proposition to build a new jail to the voters of the county next spring.

Dundee will soon have a new postmaster. Congressman Allen has recommended Miles B. Johnson for the position.

A count just completed shows that there are now 460,516 unadjudicated and pending pension claims on file in the pension office.

The Blissfield Advance man is in luck. A friend has presented him with a new pair of editorial shears, the blades of which are six inches long.

Geo. Sweet, the telegraph operator at the Dundee depot, has become a conductor on the Mackinaw line, having charge of the Battle Creek express.

They say they have been obliged to build trestle sidewalks in some of Lenawee county's towns to keep the natives from sinking out of sight in the mud.—Saline Observer.

Several new names have been added to our subscription list this month, and several of the deadhead class stricken off. If the present custom of eternally deferring payment continues we shall be tempted to adopt the "strictly in advance" plan, employ a lawyer by the month, and sue every subscriber who can but will not pay what he owes us.—Addison Courier.

"This is the worst thing in the form of an epidemic we have had in this vicinity in many a day," said a prominent physician this morning, speaking of the influenza. Another physician, equally prominent, took the opposite view of the case, stating that it was no more epidemic than it has been on many former winters. The good people of Adrian can take their choice.—Adrian Times.

The Mackinaw railroad now has apparently a solid roadbed between this place and Rollin, says the Hudson Post. The track across the sink hole is apparently on a solid foundation. The work train has been taken away, and the extra workmen discharged. It is to be hoped the job is permanently done, and that the oft-repeated report of "the sink hole has gone down," will never more be heard.

Hon. Lucien Baker, of Leavenworth, Kan., who is an able lawyer and keen observer, and who has been at Morenci attending his father's funeral, strongly expressed himself to an Observer reporter regarding prohibition as it exists in his state. Mr. Baker is a thorough temperance man, but says that the Kansas prohibitory law is a farce—"continually violated everywhere, and a promoter of fraud and hypocrisy." He wants to see it repealed.

The date of the Farmers' Institute, to be held in this place under the auspices of the Saline Farmers' Club, has been fixed for February 4th and 5th. Several prominent speakers, among them Prof. Johnson and Hon. Wm. Ball, have already been engaged. The musical program will be looked after and every effort made by members of the club to make the institute a success. Ample provisions for the entertainment of all guests from abroad will be made, and a cordial invitation extended to all members of neighboring clubs and all interested, to attend. —Saline Observer.

Gov. Luce made the following reply to inquiries sent out by the New York World as to the prospects of the State: "Perhaps no state in the union can diversify its products to the extent that Michigan can, and our chief reliance for prosperity in 1890 is based upon fairly good crops all along the line in the past with good prospects for the coming year. Our fruit production is large and constantly increasing. Our iron mines are extensive and never better or more promising than now. Our copper mines still continue to yield abundantly. We are producing more salt than ever and our railroads are earning more with each returning year. Manufactories are doing well, no conflict existing between employer and employees. The one menace to our prosperity is the low price of nearly all agricultural products."

OBITUARY.

Another Tecumseh pioneer and respected citizen has been called to his final reward. The death of John Whitenack was briefly mentioned in these columns last week, but his good deeds while here on earth demand a fuller and more fitting tribute to his memory.

The deceased was born in the town of Simpronius, Cayuga county, New York, March 31, 1813. His youthful days were spent in the township of his nativity, where he obtained such an education as the common schools of those days afforded. At the age of 21, in company with his elder brother, Cornelius, he came to Michigan, then a sparsely settled territory, and each located a lot of government land near the present city of Kalamazoo. He returned within a year or two to New York and took up his residence in the town of Sparta, where he continued to live until 1848. On the 5th of March 1843 he was united in marriage to Miss Almeda Coller, with whom he lived a most happy domestic live for almost half a century. In the year 1848 he again caught the western fever, moved his family to this county and purchased the farm now owned by Frank Davidson. Here he resided twenty-one years, cleared up a new farm and reared a family of children. His genial disposition and industrious habits soon gained for him a place among the substantial citizens of this township. For twenty-one years he was recognized as one of the leading farmers in this section of the county. He erected a fine brick dwelling, which was regarded as an extra good farm house in those early days, and transformed the wilderness farm which he bought in 1843 into a beautiful home. Having obtained a competence for his family he then sold his farm and moved into this village, erected a fine brick residence, which has been his home for the past twenty-one years, until the day of his death. About four years after taking up his residence here he purchased the hardware business of D. W. Clark and he estab ished a reputation at once as a clear-headed, sagacious business manager. For several years he managed the business with J. M. Erskine and planted it upon a substantial paying basis. Mr. Erskine then sold his interest to Delos Whitenack and S. W. Bordine. For the past ten years his son and son-in-law have carried the active duties of the house, but Mr. Whitenack himself retained a share in the firm and always took a keen interest in its welfare.

The deceased was a man of rugged constitution, and had always enjoyed excellent health, but during the past few months the decrepitude of age was slowly but surely undermining his bodily strength. In September last, he was taken with heart trouble and was reluctantly compelled to cease his daily visits to the store. The attack was not considered serious at the time, but still he did not regain his accustomed vivacity, and before the winter months arrived it became apparent to his friends that the final dissolution was approaching. Every day during December a change for the worse was noted. With the dawning of the sun on New Year's morning he gave up the struggle and died in the arms of the old year.

The funeral services were held at the family residence on Friday afternoon, January 3d, when a large assemblage of sympathizing friends and neighbors gathered to pay their respects to the memory of the dead. The Rev. W. H. Babbitt spoke words of comfort and consolation to the mourners, and the Presbyterian choir rendered beautiful music. The remains were then conveyed to the tomb amid the tears of friends and relatives who had known and respected him for more than forty years.

His domestic life was a peculiarly happy one. Six children blessed his marriage. Three children with his widow still tarry on this side of the river, and three with the father now dwell on the other shore. The surviving children are Mrs. Margaret Bordine, Miss Augusta A. and Delos L., all of whom reside in this village.

A word of personal eulogy will not be inappropriate here. John Whitenack was a man of strong individuality and sterling character. He was a worthy member of that band of pioneers through whose tireless industry and energy, Southern Michigan has been transformed into an agricultural garden. He was a well read man upon all topics of current interest, and although possessing decided convictions of his own, he was tolerant toward those who differed with him. His character was a combination of traits seldom seen in one person. Although possessed of unyielding firmness and rectitude in business affairs, in the domestic circle he was gentle and kind hearted as a child. His cheerful disposition was a daily benison of sunshine, ever illuminating his own pathway, and imparting joy and happiness to those around him. In all the relations of life, as father, husband, neighbor and citizen, he filled the full measure of a noble manhood. The record of his life will be cherished by his children as an example worthy of imitation. The vacant chair in that family circle can never again be filled. All who knew him will mourn his departure, but those who knew him longest loved him best, and will miss him most. He has fought the good fight, he has finished his course, he has entered into his eternal inheritance on high. He hath found

"That golden key,
That opes the palace of eternity."

The patrons of the M. E. Sunday school at Rollin Center manifested their appreciation of the services of the superintendent, Mrs. Amos Cole, last Sunday, by presenting her with a fine Bagster bible. It is the new Teacher's Comprehensive edition, and will serve as a lasting reminder of good work and faithful co operation.—Addison Courier.

Miss Clara Farley re-entered school last Monday morning.

Mr. Frank Swick one of our "olden time" school mates, who now resides in Kalamazoo, visited our school Tuesday and Wednesday.

The third meeting of the Lyceum will be held Friday P. M. Jan. 17th. The subject for discussinon is, "Do old maids and bachelors live as happy as married people?

The class of '90 held their first meeting Tuesday Jan. 14th, and elected the following officers.

Pres. Robe Hosmer.
Vice Pres. Mattie Kehoe.
Sec.—Edith Vedder.
Treas.—Robert Morre.

The class consists of twenty six members, and on account of its being so large will be obliged to hold its meetings outside of school hours.

Prof. Wilson has been suffering with a severe attack of the "tooth ache" for the last few days, and the left side of his face has been very much out of proportion with the right side. We hope he will soon recover.

The Geometry class has been divided; one division reciting in the morning and one in the afternoon. The class was so large it was impossible to do the work necessary to be done and do it well. R. F. H.

OBITUARY.

Died, at his home in Tecumseh, Mich., on Friday night, January 3d, 1890, Douglas W. Clark, in the 56th year of his age.

Mr. Clark was born in Palmyra township, Mich., where he lived until he was twenty-five. After this he was several years in his father's store in Adrian. In the year 1868 he moved to Leavenworth, Kansas, where, with two other brothers he was engaged in the wholesale and retail crockery business. In the fall of 1873 he came to Tecumseh and in 1874 bought out the grocery business of the late George Curtis. In this business he was continuously engaged for 16 years, until his death. In September, 1872, he was married to Miss Helen J. Merritt who still survives him. Mr. Clark was the second in a family of six children, of whom three are living and three have died. For some time he had been suffering from the encroachments of ill health but not until recently did it become evident that he was sinking gradually from the progress of disease. He kept manfully at his post of daily engagement with few interruptions until suddenly after brief confinement at home he expired from heart failure induced by Bright's disease. Both in business circles and by his friends Mr. Clark was held in high esteem. His quiet, courteous manners, and genial disposition won the hearts of all who knew him. His fellow citizens regret the loss in his prime of one who had been with them and had held their confidence such a goodly length of time.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.

From the Kalamazoo (Mich.) Daily Telegraph, Nov. 29, 1889.

Crowded houses greeted Uncle Tom's Cabin both in the afternoon and evening at the Grand yesterday. The same scenes that were produced years and years ago, brought forth the same applause from the younger generation that they formerly did. The company producing it is a good one. "Uncle Tom," Mr. Homer Pitts, and "Eva," Miss Lizzie Mosher, being especially good, with "Topsey," Miss Jesse Middaugh, an excellent person in that part.

The venerable Richmond Hathaway died at his home in the township of Rollin last Friday morning from an attack of pneumonia, aged about 80 years. Manager—E. J. Hollister.
Directors—Wm. DeMott, O. P. Bills, S. W. Anderson, E. J. Hollister.

A quick piece of detective work was done last week by our local officers Thursday morning L. D. Dewey missed a new single harness from its accustomed place in the barn, and concluded some one had stolen it. The next morning he placed the case in the hands of Constable Jas. H. Aten, who with Dept. Sheriff Stevens immediately started out without any clue to hunt up the missing article and the thief. On making inquiries at Adrian they found that a harness had been sold there the day before, and soon traced it to the store of Roath & Van Doren. They had bought it from a man living in the city, who had acted as agent for the real thief. Getting a description of the latter, they returned to Tecumseh and located their man about nine o'clock in a house in the western part of the village, having seen him through the window, while passing by. He gave his name as Geo. Howard, and was put in the lockup over night. The next morning he was taken before Justice Burridge, where he confessed all, and is now languishing in the county jail on a 40 day permit from the Justice.

Judge Cooley, of Ann Arbor, averted a tragedy in his family last week by a little display of strategem. Friday evening his colored coachman, who had been acting strangely for some time, suddenly appeared before the Judge armed with a loaded gun, saying that he had come to kill the entire family. The Judge induced the man to drop his gun for a moment by a ruse, then suddenly slipped out of the room and locked the coachman in. Officers were sent for and the man was taken into custody.

To descendants of the men of 1776 who established the Independence of the United States. A meeting for the purpose of organizing the Michigan Society of the Sons of the American Revolution is hereby called to take place at the Russell House, Detroit at 11 A. M. Saturday, Jan. 18th, 1890. Every decendant of the men of the Revolution is invited to be present. The National Vice-President expects to arrive in Detroit, Thursday evening, Jan. 16th and will be present at the meeting. This meeting is in continuation of the one called at Lansing previous to Centennial Day, April 30th, 1889 and the persons that participated at that time are especially requested to attend.

The magazine of American History opens the new year and its twenty-third volume with a bright and readable January number. This periodical seems to be on the flood-tide of the newly awakened popular interest in everything that relates to the heroic past. An admirable portrait of William Cullen Bryant forms the frontispiece, and an animated and welcome paper by the clever editor treats of his place in American history. In its several departments and in all its varied features the number for January, 1890, is fully up to the standard of this noble and attractive magazine. It is not only the best publication of its kind on the continent, but there is really no other which approaches it in scope and general breadth and excellence of character, while in typographical beauty it is ahead of all its contemporaries, whether historical or otherwise. Price, $5 00 a year. Published at 743 Broadway, New York City.

HUMAN NATURE.

If you are interested in the study of HUMAN NATURE and Character, and the improvement of yourself and others in any way, we would like to call your attention to the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL AND SCIENCE OF HEALTH, a well-known magazine which has been published for fifty years, and is devoted to all that will improve men Mentally, Morally, or Physically. It is the only magazine of its kind published in this country, and in every way the most important.

The specialty of PORTRAITS of distinguished, or notorious persons, with studies of their character and sketches of their lives, which has always been a marked and attractive feature of the JOURNAL, will still lead the host of good things prepared for the reader.

No one can study themselves or others and not be greatly benefited by the results; and therefore no one can afford NOT to read the JOURNAL. A knowledge of HUMAN NATURE would enable us to understand ourselves and others and to avoid many of the disappointments in life.

TERMS.—Monthly at $2 a year, or 20 cents a Number. To each new subscriber is given either the PHRENOLOGICAL BUST or NEW PHRENOLOGICAL CHART Premium. When the premiums are sent, 15 cents extra must be received with each subscription to pay postage on the JOURNAL and the expense of boxing and packing the Bust, which will be sent by express, or No. 2, a smaller size, of the Chart Premium, will be sent by mail, postpaid. Send 10 cents for specimen Numbers, Premium List, Posters, Catalogue of books, etc. Address

THE PROPOSED EXTRADITION TREATY.

Burglary, Embezzlement, Larceny and Other Offenses Within its Provisions—Bribers and Boodlers Still to be Sheltered.

OTTAWA, ONT., January 13.—A copy of the draft of an extradition treaty agreed upon by Lord Salisbury and the American minister in London for submission to the various legislative bodies for sanction has been forwarded to the governor general from the foreign office and handed by him to Hon. Joseph E. Chapleau, secretary of state.

The treaty has been confidentially communicated and its precise text cannot therefore be made public, but it may suffice to give a synopsis of its main provisions. It is drafted as an extension of the Ashburton treaty of 1842.

The portion of that treaty which deals with extradition is comprised in article 10. The crimes mentioned in that section as extraditable are murder, assault with intent to commit murder, piracy, arson, robbery forgery and utterance of forged paper.

The new treaty recites that "Whereas it is desired by Her Brittanic Majesty and the United States of America that the provisions of said article 10 should embrace certain other crimes not therein specified, therefore the high contracting parties, after conferences between Lord Salisbury and Minister Lincoln, had agreed that the following crimes, in addition to those mentioned in article 10, should be henceforth extraditable—namely, attempt or conspiracy to murder, manslaughter, counterfeiting or altering money, embezzlement or larceny of any sum or article of the value of $50 and upward, rape or indecent assault on females, malicious injury to property whereby the life of any person is endangered, criminal scuttling or destroying of vessels on the high seas or on the great lakes of North America, or attempting or conspiring to do so, assault on board a vessel on the high seas or on the great lakes of North America with intent to destroy life or to do grievious bodily harm.

Any person who has been convicted of any of these crimes, but who has not served his sentence, shall be extraditable. The treaty shall not have retrospective force, that is it will not apply to crimes committed before legislative sanction has been given to it.

Crimes of a political character are not to be included in its provisions, and if the prisoner can show to the court that the real object of those making the requisition for his surrender is to try him for a political offence he shall be set at liberty.

A fugitive criminal who has been acquitted of the charge for which extradition was sought shall not be tried for any other offense committed prior to date of his extradition until he has first had an opportunity of returning to the country from which he was extradited.

The treaty may be terminated by notification from either of the contracting powers.

BRITISH-PORTUGESE.

Imbroglio—Great Britain Submits Its Ultimation.

LISBON, January 13.—The British minister, Mr. Petre, waited upon Barros Gomez, minister of foreign affairs and reported to him Great Britain's ultimatum in regard to the African territorial dispute to the effect that the Portugese forces of occupation be recalled from the banks of the Shire beyond its confluence with Lake and south of Zanzibasi and Mashonaand. Failing to receive a reply within twenty-four hours, the British legation would go on board the Admiralty yacht Enchantress and await the reply there. The king at once summoned a council of the ministers and a reply was agreed upon to the effect that Portugal being too weak to oppose a strong first class power, would order the withdrawal of the troops from the Shire and Washonoland districts, reserving the rights of the crown in the abandoned territory. It is reported that the opposition in the Cortes will attack the government for its course in yielding to England's ultimatum.

A DUEL IMPENDING

Between Two Louisiana State Officials.

NEW ORLEANS, January 13.—The Picayune's Austin, Texas, special says that a duel is impending between Attorney General Hogg and Land Commissioner Hall. The men have been at variance for some time past. On Thursday, Mr. Hall, in an open letter, intimated that the state attorney general was ignorant of the land laws of the state.

Mr. Hogg replying to the letter that, officially he would not notice the charge, but personally he would be a party to the pleasure of the accused. Mr. Hall has written a sarcastic answer to Mr. Hogg's communication, and the city is full of rumors of a possible duel between the two men. The affair grows out of the issuance of papers to the Houston and Texas Central railway in spite of a protest from the attorney general.

Steamer Goes Ashore.

NEW LONDON, CONN., January 13.—The steamer City of Worcester, of the Norwich line for this port, is on the rocks about a third of a mile north-northwest of Bartlett's Reef light ship. She struck at one o'clock this morning during a dense fog. The captain and other officers of the boat say that they did not hear the light ship's bell, and losing their reckoning in the thick fog, struck the rocks. The steamer rests on round boulders, and lies sideways. There are from 5 to 7 feet of water in the second, third and fourth compartments. The other has water tight compartments and are not injured. After striking the rocks the steamer's fires went out, and she began sounding signals of distress.

SAVED.

The Lost Crew Picked up in Mid-Ocean.

BRAVE WORK IN A TREMENDOUS SEA STORM.

The Disabled Ship Shakespeare, Given Up Forever, Sighted by the Steamer Stag and Her Men Rescued—The Captain Dead from Exposure—Eighteen Saved.

NEW YORK, January 13.—The steamship Stag, which has arrived from Bremen and Shields, brought all the crew of the wrecked ship Shakespeare with the exception of the captain, who died before the rescue and was buried at sea. The Shakespeare sailed from Hamburg for this port about three months ago, and was not heard from until Dec. 18, when she was sighted by the steamship Nestorian, from Glasgow to Philadelphia. The Shakespeare was then in very bad shape and the crew were huddled together in the bows to escape the water which at intervals swept over the decks. The Nestorian attempted to take off the men, but as the weather was stormy were unable to do so, and the wrecked vessel was lost sight of during the night. On Dec. 29 the steamship Sardinia sighted the Shakespeare and then no trace of any life on board could be discovered. The report seemed to settle all doubt that the crew would ever be heard from again.

Captain Monroe, of the Stag, on his arrival told the following story: "We left Bremen on December 7, and experienced rough weather until the 21st, when the wind blew a perfect hurricane. At midnight of that day we sighted rockets and flare lights ahead. The temperature was then below zero. We steered in the direction of the danger signal, and about 9 o'clock in the morning the man on the lookout reported the hull of a vessel. Although there was a tremendous sea running we ran as close to the vessel as we could and found her to be the Shakespeare. All her masts were gone and the crew huddled on the decks close to the parts of the bulwark that were left stanking. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon we got a line on board the wreck, but it snapped almost as soon as it was secured. I then signaled the Shakespeare we would stand by them until morning. About nine the next morning my second officer, Noble, and four seamen succeeded in lowering a boat and a line was secured on board the Shakespeare, and we then began the work of transferring the unfortunate seamen. There were eighteen in all, Captain Muller having died from exposure. All the men were in a very bad condition, most of them being covered with sea boils, and some with broken arms. The rescued men, when brought on board the Stag, were made as comfortable as possible. All of them at first were unable to stand, and though now they are in comparatively good condition, several of them had a narrow escape from death. The Stag herself had a very rough voyage, having taken thirty-one days on a voyage she usually does in sixteen."

INFANT KING ALIVE.

EXCITEMENT OVER THE SPANISH SITUATION.

Fifty Thousand Coal Miners on a Strike. The Latest Cablegrams of Foreign News.

LISBON, January 13.—Madrid was kept in a ferment of excitement all day by repeated rumors of the young king's death. Many believed that the monarch had really passed away and that the announcement of the fact was being concealed for state reasons. Such things are not unknown to history, and if ever a government was justified by the situation in hesitancy to proclaim the demise of a ruler, the present regime of Spain is certainly in that position.

The reports of hostile conditions and plots are almost too numerous to be counted and weighed. The republicans though as a matter of course they are less active than the partisans of Don Cardos—are bearing the brunt of general suspicion. An outrage committed upon the passengers of a railway train having been attributed to them, their leaders have found it advisable to issue a statement formally denying the truth of the charge, and explaining that the perpetrators of the crime were banditti who for some reason best known to themselves—probably out of sheer malignity—boasted that they were republicans, and that the offense was not an ordinary felony, but the outcome of political conspiracy. The affair, trivial in itself, gives some indication of the restless and apprehensive state of the public mind in the peninsula.

Three of the British men-of-war which sailed southward with the fleet from Zanzibar yesterday have returned to that harbor. The object of the mysterious movements of the fleet if they have any object has not yet been revealed.

Fifty thousand coal miners are now on a strike in the Durham district for an advance of fifteen per cent. in their wages. The price of coal is rapidly advancing in England, and it is believed that the miners will gain their point.

Influenza is making fearful ravages among the striking miners in the Charleroi district of Belgium.

The men are destitute and their families are unable to obtain proper and sufficient food. Under such circumstances the percentage of deaths among these attacked by the disease is very large.

It is stated in St. Petersburg that General Richter, adjutant general of the army, upon whom the czar has recently bestowed various marks of favor, will succeed General Van Nowski as minister of war.

Repulicans Cut the Railroad.

MADRID, January 13.—It is announced that a small band of Republicans cut the railroad near Wentacardenas, province of Jaenio in Audralusia, but were put to flight and are being pursued by the civil guard.

The conspirators also blew up a railroad bridge with dynamite. The Republican leaders deny the connection of that party with the affair, and claim that the criminals were train robbers.

Entry of Exiles.

PARIS, January 13.—The Spanish authorities on the frontier are exercising the most stringent precautions to guard against the entry into Spain, of any exiles from that country who have been sojourning in France. Regular passenger traffic is being subjected to inconvenience and delay by reason of the measures adopted.

ESTATE OF McCLURE MINORS.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Monday the 30th day of December in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Samuel R. McClure Henry W. McClure, Martha G. McClure, and Louis C. McClure, minors.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified of William A. Brown, alleging among other things, that Henry McClure, deceased, did, in his lifetime, to wit, on the 16th day of March, A.D., 1887, duly execute and deliver to petitioner a contract in writing to convey to said petitioner, certain real estate described in said contract, and that said Henry McClure died without making the conveyance required by such contract. That the said premises described in said contract have been set off and assigned to said minors subject to said contract by said Court, that Samuel McClure is the guardian of said minors, and praying that said guardian may be authorized and directed to make and execute and deliver a conveyance of the real estate described in said contract to petitioner upon the terms and conditions therein mentioned, and that such other and further order and proceedings may be had in the premises as may be required by the statute in such case made and provided.

It is ordered, That Monday, the 27th day of January next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the next-of-kin of said minors, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

MORTGAGE SALES.

DEFAULT having been made in the payment of a certain mortgage bearing date March 8, A.D., 1881, made by George L. Bidwell and his wife, Frances Bidwell, to William J. Cocker and Isabella M. Cocker. Which said mortgage was on the Ninth day of March, A. D. 1881, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee County, Michigan, in Liber 100 of mortgages on page 693; And which said mortgage was afterward, to wit, on the 13th day of April, A.D., 1888, duly assigned to Birdsey J. Bidwell, by said William J. Cocker and Isabella M. Cocker, which deed of assignment was on the 29th day of April A. D., 1889, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee County aforesaid in Liber 112 of mortgages on page 537; by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative. And whereas there is at this date claimed to be due and unpaid as principal and interest on the said mortgage the sum of Five Hundred and Ninety-two and 36-100 Dollars, and no proceedings have been instituted at law or in equity to collect the same. Tecumseh Herald

CLEOPATRA.

Being an Account of the Fall and Vengeance of Harmachis, the Royal Egyptian,

Aghast, utterly aghast, we stood and stared at the hateful sight; till presently the bat spread his huge wings, and, loosing his hold, sailed to us. Now he hovered before Cleopatra's face, fanning her with his wings. Then with a scream, like a woman's shriek of fury, seeking his violated tomb, the accursed Thing flitted on and vanished down the well into the sepulchers. I fell against the wall. But Cleopatra sank in a heap upon the floor, and, covering her head with her arms, she shrieked till the hollow passages rang with the echoes of her cries, that seemed to grow and double and rush along in volumes of shrill sound.

"Rise!" I cried, "rise and let us hence ere the Spirit shall return to haunt us! If thou dost suffer thyself to be overwhelmed here in this place, lost art thou forever."

She staggered to her feet, and never may I forget the look upon her ashy face or in her glowing eyes. Seizing lamps, with a rush we passed the dead eunuch's horrid form, I holding her by the hand. We gained the great chamber, where was the sarcophagus of the Queen of Menka-ra, and traversed its length. We fled along the passage. What if the Thing had closed the three mighty doors? No, they were open, and we sped through them; the last only did I stay to close. I touched the stone, as I knew how, and the great door crashed down, shutting us off from the presence of the dead eunuch and the Horror that had hung upon the eunuch's chin. Now we were in the white chamber with the sculptured panels, and now we faced the last steep ascent. Oh, that last ascent! Twice Cleopatra slipped and fell upon the polished floor. The second time—'twas when half the distance had been done—she let fall her lamp, and would, indeed, have rolled down the slide had I not saved her. But, in doing thus, I, too, let fall my lamp, that bounded away into shadow beneath us, and we were in utter darkness. And perchance about us, in the darkness, hovered that awful Thing!

"Be brave!" I cried. "O love, be brave, and struggle on, or both are lost! The way, though steep, is not far; and, though it be dark, scarce can we come to harm in this straight shaft. If the gems weight thee, cast them away!"

"Nay," she gasped, "that will not I; this shall not be endured to no end. I die with them!"

Then it was that I saw the greatness of this woman's heart; for in the dark, and notwithstanding the terrors we had passed and the awfulness of our state, she clung to me and clambered on up that dread passage. On we clambered, hand in hand, with bursting hearts, till there, by the mercy or the anger of the Gods, at length we saw the faint light of the moon creeping through the little opening in the pyramid. One struggle more, now the hole was gained, and, like a breath from Heaven, the sweet night air played upon our brows. I climbed through, and, standing on the pile of stones, lifted and dragged Cleopatra after me. She fell to the ground and then sank down upon it motionless.

With trembling hands I pressed upon the turning stone. It swung to and caught, leaving no mark of the secret place of entry. Then I came down, and having pushed away the pile of stones, turned to Cleopatra. She had swooned, and notwithstanding the dust and grime upon her face, so pale it was that at first I believed she must be dead. But, placing my hand upon her heart, I felt it stir beneath; and, being spent, I flung myself down beside her upon the sand to gather up my strength again.

CHAPTER XIX.

OF THE COMING BACK OF HARMACHIS; OF THE GREETING OF CHARMION; AND OF THE ANSWER OF CLEOPATRA TO QUINTUS DELIUS, THE AMBASSADOR OF ANTONY THE TRIUMVIR.

PRESENTLY I lifted myself, and laying the head of Egypt's Queen upon my knee, strove to call her back to life. How fair she seemed, even in her disarray, her long hair streaming o'er her breast! How deadly fair she seemed in the faint light—this woman the story of whose beauty and whose sin shall outlive the solid mass of mighty pyramid that towered over us! The heaviness of her swoon had smoothed away all the falseness of her face, and naught was left but the stamp divine of woman's richest loveliness, softened by shadows of the night and dignified by the cast of deathlike sleep. I gazed upon her and all my heart went out to her; it seemed that I did but love her more because of the depth of the treasons wherein I had sunk to reach her, and because of the terrors we had outfaced together. Weary and spent with fears and the pangs of guilt, my heart sought hers for rest, for now she alone was left to me. She had sworn to wed me also, and with the treasure we had won we would make Egypt strong and free her from her foes, and all should yet be well. Ah! could I have seen the picture that was to be, how, and in what place and circumstances, once again this very woman's head should be laid upon my knee, pale with that cast of death! Ah! could I have seen!

I chafed her hand between my hands. I bent me and kissed her on the lips, and she woke. She woke with a little sob of fear—a shiver ran down her delicate limbs; and with wide eyes she stared upon my face.

"Ah, it is thou!" she said. "I mind me—thou hast saved me from that horror-haunted place!" And she threw her arms about my neck and drew me to her and kissed me. "Come, love," she said, "let us be going! I am sore athirst, and—ah! so very weary! The gems, too, they chafe my breast! Never was wealth so hardly won! Come, let us be going from the shadow of this ghostly spot! See the faint lights glancing from the wing of Dawn! How beautiful they are, and how sweet to behold! Never, in those Halls of Eternal Night, did I think to look upon the blush of dawn again! Ah! I can see the face of that dead slave yet, with the Horror hanging to his beardless chin! Bethink thee!—there he'll sit forever—there—with the horror! Come; where may we find water? I would give an emerald for a cup of water!"

"At the canal at the borders of the tilled land below the temple of Horemku—it is close at hand," I answered. "If any see us, we will say that we are pilgrims who have lost our way at night among the tombs. Veil thyself closely, therefore, Cleopatra; and beware lest thou dost show aught of those gems about thee."

So she veiled herself, and I lifted her on to the ass which was tethered close at hand. We walked slowly through the sand till we came to the place where the symbol of the God Horemku, fashioned as a mighty sphinx (whom the Greeks call Harmachis), and crowned with the royal crown of Egypt, looks out in majesty across the land, his eyes ever fixed upon the East. Even as we walked the first arrow of the rising sun quivered through the gray air, striking upon Horemku's lips of holy calm. Then the light gathered and grew upon the gleaming sides of twenty pyramids, and, like a promise of Life to Death, rested on the portals of ten thousand tombs. Then from his horizon bed Royal Ra rose up in pomp, and it was day.

And passing the temple of granite and of alabaster that was built before the days of Chufu, to the glory of the majesty of Horemku, we descended the slope and came to the water of the canal. There we drank; and sweeter was that draught of muddy water than all the choicest wine of Alexandria. Also we washed the mummy dust and grime from our hands and brows and made us clean. And as she bathed her neck, stooping over the water, one of the great emeralds slipped from Cleopatra's breast and fell into the water, and it was but by chance that at length I found it in the mire. Then, once more, I lifted Cleopatra on to the beast, and slowly, for I was very weary, we marched back to the banks of Sihor, where our craft was. And having at length come thither, seeing no one save some few peasants going out to labor on the lands, I turned the ass loose in that same field where we had found him, and we boarded the craft while the crew were yet sleeping. Then, waking them, we bade them make all sail, saying that we had left the eunuch to sojourn awhile behind us, as in truth we had. So we sailed, and the gems, with such of the ornaments of gold as we could bring hither, we hid away.

Four days and more we spent in coming to Alexandria, for the wind was for the most part against us; and they were happy days! At first, indeed, Cleopatra was somewhat silent and heavy at heart, for what she had seen and felt in the womb of the pyramid weighed her down. But soon her imperial spirit awoke and shook the burden from her breast and she became herself again—now gay, now learned; now loving and now cold; now queenly and now altogether simple—ever changing as the winds of heaven, and, as the heaven, deep, beauteous and unsearchable!

Night after night for those four unhappy nights, the last happy hours I ever was to know, we sat hand in hand upon the deck and heard the waters lap the vessel's side, and watched the soft footfall of the moon as she trod the depths of the Nile. There we sat and talked of love, talked of our marriage and all that we would do. Also I drew up plans of war and of defense against the Roman, which now we had the means to carry out; and she approved them, sweetly saying that what seemed good to me was good to her. And so all too swiftly passed the days. O those nights upon the Nile! their memory haunts me yet! Dead are those dear nights, dead is the moon that lit them and lost in the wide salt sea are the waters which rocked us on their breast! For all things end in darkness and ashes, and those who sow in folly shall reap in sorrow. Ah! those nights upon the Nile!

And so, at length, once more we stood within the walls of that fair palace on the Lochias, and the dream was done.

"Whither hast thou wandered with Cleopatra, Harmachis?" asked Charmion of me when I met her by chance on that day of return. "On some new mission of betrayal! or was it but a love journey?"

"I went with Cleopatra upon secret business of the State," I answered, sternly.

"So those who go secretly, go evilly; and foul birds love to fly at night. Not but what thou art wise, for scarce would it beseem thee, Harmachis, to show thy face in Egypt."

I heard, and felt my passion rise within me; for ill could I bear this fair girl's scorn.

"Hast thou never a word without a sting?" I asked. "Know, then, that I went whither thou hadst never dared to go; to gather means to hold Egypt from the grasp of Antony."

"So!" she answered, looking up swiftly. "Thou foolish man! Better hadst thou done to save thy labor, for Antony will grasp Egypt in thy despite. What power hast thou to-day in Egypt?"

"In my despite that he may do; but in despite of Cleopatra that he can not do," I said.

"Nay, but with the aid of Cleopatra he can and will do it," she answered, with a bitter smile. "When the Queen sails in state up Cydnus' stream she will surely draw this coarse Antony thence to Alexandria, conquering, and yet, like thee, a slave!"

"It is false! I say that it is false! Cleopatra goes not to Tarsus, and Antony comes not to Alexandria; or, if he come, 'twill be to take the chance of war."

"Now, thinkest thou thus!" she answered, with a little laugh. "Well, if it please thee, think as thou wilt. Within three days thou shalt know. 'Tis pretty to see how easily thou art fooled. Farewell! Go, dream on Love, for surely Love is sweet."

And she went, leaving me angered and troubled at heart.

That day I saw Cleopatra no more, but on the day which followed I saw her. She was in a heavy mood, and had no gentle word for me. I spake to her of the defense of Egypt, but she put the matter away.

"Why dost thou weary me?" she said, with anger; "canst thou not see that I am lost in troubles? When Dellius hath had his answer, then will we speak of these matters."

"Ay," I said, "when Dellius hath had his answer; and knowest thou that but yesterday Charmion—whom about the palace they name the 'keeper of the Queen's secrets'—Charmion did swear that the answer would be: 'Go in peace; I come to Antony!'"

"Naught knows Charmion of my heart," said Cleopatra, stamping her foot in anger, "and if she talk so freely the girl shall be scourged from out my court, as is her desert. Though, in truth," she added, "she hath more wisdom in that small head of hers than all my privy councillors—ay, and more wit to use it. Knowest thou that I have sold a portion of those gems to the rich Jews of Alexandria, and at a great price, ay, at five thousand sestertia for each one. But a few, in truth, for more they could not buy as yet. 'Twas rare to see their eyes when they fell upon them—large as apples they grew with avarice and wonder. And now leave me, Harmachis, for I am weary. The memory of that dread night is with me yet."

I bowed and rose to go, and yet stood wavering.

"Pardon me, Cleopatra; 'tis of our marriage."

"Our marriage! Why, are we not indeed already wed?" she answered.

"Yes, but not before the world. Thou didst promise."

"Ay, Harmachis, I did promise, and to-morrow, when I have rid me of this Dellius, I will keep my promise and name thee Cleopatra's Lord before the court. See that thou art in thy place. Art content?"

And she stretched out her hand for me to kiss, looking on me with strange eyes, as though she struggled with herself. Then I went, but that night once more I strove to see Cleopatra and could not. "The Lady Charmion was with the Queen," so said the eunuchs, and none might enter.

On the morrow the court met in the great hall one hour before midday, and thither I went with a trembling heart to hear Cleopatra's answer to Dellius and to hear myself also made King consort to the Queen of Egypt. It was a full and splendid court; there were councillors, lords, captains, eunuchs and waiting women—all save Charmion. The hour passed, but Cleopatra and Charmion came not. At length Charmion entered gently by a side entrance and took her place among the waiting ladies about the throne. Even as she did so she cast a glance at me, and there was triumph in her eyes, though over what she triumphed I knew not. Little did I guess that she had but now brought about my ruin and sealed the fate of Egypt.

Then presently the trumpets blared, and, clad in her robes of state, the uræus crown upon her head, and on her breast, flashing like a star, that great emerald scarabæus which she had dragged from dead Pharaoh's heart, Cleopatra, followed by a glittering guard of Northmen, swept in splendor to her throne. Dark was her lovely face, and dark her slumbrous eyes, and none might read their message, though all that court searched therein for a sign of what should come. She seated herself slowly as one who may not be moved, and spoke to the Chief of the Heralds in the Greek tongue:

"Does the Ambassador of the noble Antony wait?"

The herald bowed low and made assent.

"Let him come in and hear our answer."

The doors were flung wide, and, followed by his train of knights, Dellius, clad in his golden armor and his purple chlamys, walked with catlike step up the great hall, and made obeisance before the throne.

"Most Royal and beauteous Egypt," he said, in his soft voice, "as thou hast graciously been pleased to bid me, thy servant, I am here to take thy answer to the letter of the noble Antony the Triumvir, whom tomorrow I sail to meet at Tarsus, in Cilicia. And this will I say, Royal Egypt—craving pardon the while for the boldness of my speech—bethink thee well before words that can not be unspoken fall from those sweet lips. Defy Antony, and Antony will wreck thee. But, like thy mother Aphrodite, rise glorious on his sight from the bosom of the Cyprian Wave, and for wreck he will give thee all that can be dear to woman's Royalty—empire and pomp of place, cities and the sway of men, fame and wealth and the diadem of rule made sure. For mark: Antony holds this Eastern World in the hollow of his warlike hand, and at his will kings are, and at his frown they cease to be."

And Dellius bowed his head, and folding his hands meekly on his breast, awaited answer.

For awhile Cleopatra answered not, but sat like the sphinx Horemku, dumb and inscrutable, gazing with lost eyes down the length of that great hall.

Then, like soft music, her answer came, and trembling I listened for Egypt's challenge to the Roman:

"Noble Dellius, much have we bethought us of the matter of thy message from great Antony to our poor Royalty of Egypt. Much have we bethought us, and counsel have we taken from the oracles of the gods, from the wisest among our friends, and from the teaching of our heart, that ever, like a nesting bird, broods over our people's weal. Sharp are the words that thou hast brought across the sea; methinks better had they been fitted to the ears of some petty, half-tamed Prince than to those of Egypt's Queen. Therefore have we numbered the legions that we can gather, and the triermes and the galleys wherewith we may breast the sea, and the moneys which shall buy us all things wanting to our war. And this we find, that, though Antony be strong, yet hath Egypt naught to fear from the strength of Antony."

She paused, and a murmur of applause of her high words ran down the hall. Only Dellius stretched out his hands as though to push them back. Then came the end!

"Noble Dellius! Half are we minded there to bid our tongue stop, and, strong within our fortresses of stone and our other fortresses built of the hearts of men, abide the issue. And yet thus shalt thou not go. Guiltless are we of those charges against us that have come to our ears of noble Antony, and which now he rudely shouts in ours; nor will we journey into Cilicia to answer them."

"OH, THOSE NIGHTS UPON THE NILE."

Here the murmur arose anew, while my heart beat high in triumph, and in the pause that followed Dellius spoke once more.

"Then, Royal Egypt, my word to Antony is word of war?"

"Nay," she answered, "it shall be one of peace. Listen! We said that we would not come to make answer to these charges, nor will we. But—" and she smiled for the first time—"gladly will we come, and that swiftly, in royal friendship to make known our fellowship of peace upon the banks of Cydnus."

I heard, and was bewildered. Could I hear aright? Was it thus that Cleopatra kept her oaths? Moved beyond the hold of reason, I lifted up my voice and cried:

"O Queen, remember!"

Like a lioness she turned upon me, with a flashing of the eyes, and a swift shake of her lovely head.

"Peace, Slave!" she said; "who bade thee break in upon our counsels? Mind thou thy stars, and leave matters of the world to the rulers of the world!"

I sank back shamed, and as I did so once more I saw the smile of triumph on the face of Charmion, followed by what was, perchance, the shadow of pity for my fall.

"Now that yon brawling charlatan," said Dellius, pointing at me with his jeweled finger, "hath been rebuked, grant me leave, O Egypt, to thank thee from the heart for these gentle words."

"We ask no thanks from thee, noble Dellius; nor lies it in thy mouth to chide our servant," broke in Cleopatra, frowning heavily; "we will take thanks from the lips of Antony alone. Get thee to thy master, and say to him that ere he can make ready a fitting welcome our keels shall follow in the track of thine. And now farewell! Upon thy vessel thou shalt find some small token of our bounty."

Dellius bowed thrice and withdrew, while the court stood waiting the Queen's word. And I, too, waited, wondering if she would yet make good her promise and name me Royal Spouse there in the face of Egypt. But naught she said. Only still frowning heavily, she rose and, followed by the guards, left the throne and passed into the Alabaster Hall. Then the court broke up, and as the lords and councillors went by they looked on me with mockery. For though none knew all my secret nor how it stood 'twixt me and Cleopatra, yet were they jealous of the favor shown me by the Queen, and rejoiced greatly at my fall. But I took no heed of their mocking as I stood dazed with misery and felt the world of Hope slip from 'neath my feet.

CHAPTER XX.

OF THE REPROACH OF HARMACHIS; OF THE STRUGGLE OF HARMACHIS WITH THE GUARDS; OF THE QUICK BLOW STRUCK BY BRENNUS, AND OF THE SECRET SPEECH OF CLEOPATRA.

AND at length, all being gone, I, too, turned to go, when a eunuch struck me on the shoulder and roughly bade me wait on the presence of the Queen. An hour past and this fellow would have crawled to me on his knees; but he had heard, and now he treated me—so brutish is the nature of such slaves—as the world treats the fallen, with scorn. For to come low after being great is to learn all shame. Unhappy, therefore, are the great, for they may fall!

I turned upon the slave with so fierce a word that, cur-like, he sprang behind me; then I passed on to the Alabaster Hall, and was admitted of the guards. In the center of the hall, nigh to the fountain, sat Cleopatra, and with her were Charmion and the Greek girl Iras, and Merira and other of her waiting ladies. "Go," she said to these, "I would speak with my astrologer." So they went, and left us face to face.

"Stand thou there," she said, lifting her face for the first time. "Come not near me, Harmachis; I trust thee not. Perchance thou hast found another dagger. Now, what hast thou to say? By what right didst thou dare to break in upon my talk with the Roman?"

I felt the blood rush through me like a storm, bitterness and burning anger took hold upon my heart. "What hast thou to say, Cleopatra?" I answered boldly. "Where is thy oath, sworn on the dead heart of Menka-ra, the ever-living? Where now thy challenge to this Roman Antony? Where thy oath that thou wouldst call me 'husband' in the face of Egypt?" And I choked and ceased.

"Well does it become Harmachis, who never was forsworn, to speak to me of oaths!" she said, in bitter mockery. "And yet, O thou most pure Priest of Isis; and yet, O thou most faithful friend, who never didst betray thy friends; and yet, O thou most steadfast, honorable and upright man, who never didst barter thy birthright, thy country and thy cause for the price of woman's passing love; by what token knowest thou that my word is void?"

"Thy taunts I will not answer, Cleopatra," I said, holding back my heart as best I might; "for I have earned them all, though not from thee. By this token, then, I know it. Thou goest to visit Antony; thou goest, as said that Roman knave, 'tricked in the best attire,' to feast with him whom thou shouldst give to vultures for their feast. Perchance, for aught I know, thou art about to squander those treasures that thou hast filched from the body of Menka-ra, those treasures stored against the need of Egypt, upon wanton revels which shall complete the shame of Egypt. By these things, then, I know that thou art forsworn, and I, who, loving thee, believed thee, tricked; and by this, also, that thou who didst but yesternight swear to wed me, dost to-day cover me with taunts, and even before that Roman put me to an open shame!"

"To wed thee! And I did swear to wed thee! Well, and what is marriage? Is it the union of the heart, that bond beautiful as gossamer and than gossamer more light, which binds soul to soul as through the dreamy night of passion they float, a bond to be, perchance, melted in the dews of dawn? Or is it the iron link of enforced, unchanging union whereby if sinks the one the other must be dragged beneath the sea of circumstances, there, like a punished slave, to perish of unavoidable corruption. Marriage! I to marry! I to forget freedom and court the worst slavery of our sex, which, by the selfish will of man, the stronger, doth still bind us to a bed grown hateful, and enforce a service that love mayhap no longer hallows! Of what use, then, to be a Queen, if thereby I may not escape the evil of the meanly born? Mark thou, Harmachis: Woman being grown hath two ills to fear, death and marriage; and of these twain is marriage the more vile; for in death we may find rest, but in marriage, should it fail us, we must find hell. Nay, being above the breath of common slander that would blast those who of true virtue will not consent to stretch affection's bonds, I love, Harmachis, but I marry not!"

"And yesternight thou didst swear that thou wouldst wed me and call me to thy side before the face of Egypt!"

"And yesternight the red ring round the moon did mark the coming of the storm, and yet the day is fair! But who knows that the tempest may not break to-morrow? Who knows that I have not chosen the easier path to save Egypt from the Roman? Who knows, Harmachis, that thou shalt not still call me 'wife!'"

Then no longer could I bear her falsehood, for I saw that she but played with me. And so I spoke that which was in my heart.

"Cleopatra," I cried, "thou didst swear to protect Egypt, and thou art about to betray Egypt to the Roman! Thou didst swear to use the treasures that I revealed to thee for the service of Egypt, and thou art about to use them to be her means of shame—to fashion them as fetters for her wrists! Thou didst swear to wed me, who loved thee, and for thee gave all, and thou dost mock me and reject! Therefore I say—with the voice of the dread Gods I say it—that on thee shall fall the curse of Menka-ra, whom thou hast robbed, indeed! Let me go hence and work out my doom! Let me go, O, thou fair shame! thou living Lie! whom I have loved to my doom, and who hast brought upon me the last curse of doom! Let me hide myself and see thy face no more!"

She rose in her wrath, and terrible she was to see.

"Let thee go to stir up evil against me? Nay, Harmachis, thou shalt not go to build new plots against my throne! I say to thee that thou, too, shalt come to visit Antony in Cilicia, and there, perchance, I will let thee go!" And ere I could answer, she had struck upon the silver gong that hung nigh to where she was.

Ere its rich echo had died away there entered from one door Charmion and the waiting women, and from the other a file of guards—four of them of the Queen's body guard, mighty men, with winged helmets and long, fair hair.

"Seize that traitor!" cried Cleopatra, pointing to me. The Captain of the guard—it was Brennus—saluted and came toward me with drawn sword.

But I, being mad and desperate, and little caring if they slew me, flew straight at his throat, and dealt him such a heavy blow that the great man fell headlong and his armor clashed upon the marble floor. And as he fell I seized his sword and target and, meeting the next, who rushed on me with a shout, caught his blow upon the shield, and in answer [illegible] with all my strength.

THE FAR WEST.

A Round Trip from Michigan to Oregon and California.

(Concluded.)

Six miles from the Pacific Ocean to the south is San Francisco, one of the prettiest cities of the United States. The most of the city is built on side-hills, and one has a commanding view from either land or water. At present there is a population of about 350,000 inhabitants with people of all nationalities, seemingly. There are very many Germans, and Chinese, numbering one tenth of the entire population. This people are an odd looking set, with a long cue of braided hair hanging down the back, and the loose garments of trowsers and blouse in which they are dressed seem to make it a puzzle to know which are the ladies of their household. One will quickly determine, however, by looking at their manner of dressing the hair, which is fixed upon the head with large headed pins of some kind, more like the style of the American ladies. Nor do they wear any kind of a hat or bonnet upon the head, but carry a parasol or umbrella to shield them from the rain or the sun. Many of the Chinese live near together in that part of the city called "Chinatown;" others are scattered about the city as servants, or keeping a laundry.

It may be already known to some of you, that there, as well as most places west of the Rocky mountains, that no piece of money less than a nickle is used, and that our quarters of dollars are called two bits, and our half dollars are four bits. And when the prices of articles are told at the stores of six bits, one dollar and two bits, etc., one unaccustomed to such expressions would have to stop to think and then reckon up the amount.

San Francisco is traversed in nearly all directions by the cable cars which are rapidly taking the place of the horse-cars for rapid transit. It has many fine churches, and school buildings. It has a fine system of public schools, with forty-five free kindergartens. Senator Stanford and wife support two, Miss Francis Willard one, the First Congregational church one, and there are memorial schools also with the others. The Senator and wife are very charitable persons, giving much money to deserving poor through benevolent institutions.

Many ocean vessels and steamers, together with the railroads, bring people and products from all parts of the civilized world.

"Golden Gate Park' is a beautiful place, many acres in extent; and has fine drives, beautiful flowers, shady walks, a play ground, green house, etc. There are also many elegant residences, fine stores, and public buildings. The beauty of the flowers beggars discription. They need only to be seen to call forth many an exclamation of surprise and wonder because they are so large and of so many beautiful colors. The fruit and vegetables are equally abundant and of great varieties, also.

The climate is of two seasons, wet and dry. But the summer season is made cool by the trade winds which blow so hard at that time of the year, making it necessary to wear thick clothing and winter wraps in the city; but back in the country the weather is quite warm there. Of all last summer one day of 80° was the warmest, and then it was in September. From October to April is the rainy season. But it does not rain continually as many think; there being pleasant days between times. An umbrella needs to be a person's constant companion at that season of the year. But during the time from April to October rain is almost unknown.

When leaving that city by ferry-boat, en route to the east, one pleasant afternoon in September, the scene is grand, with several ships anchored a short distance from the land. They flying flags of different nationalities, and with the sunshine on the dancing waves made a sight long to be remembered. Goat Island, in the Bay, about half way across to Oakland, was as barren and pretty as ever with its solitary residence and office of the cable guard. Around the bay, in every direction, could be seen hills, some of which were partly hidden from view by the somewhat misty atmosphere of the distance.

After boarding the cars at Oakland, the other side of the ferry, we rode for miles and miles near the level shore of the bay, on our way to Sacramento. On the one side, for a long distance we were in sight of parts of the bay. While on the other was that grand view of the beautiful villages, through and near which we passed; and also of such fine farms (or ranches as they are there called.) No place in an old or new country could have any finer buildings, orchards, or fences than were seen there. It is truly a garden State. Not far from Oakland on the east is the popular Mills' Seminary—the Wellesley of the Pacific coast. At Benicia, along the bay, were long piers built out to the deep water for many rods, so that boats could be loaded with bales of straw, lumber, grain, fruits etc., all of which abound in that section. After crossing the bay at this point, we passed through two short tunnels, and then arrived at Vallejo, a small hamlet, which judging from the quantities of lumber piled at its landing must have been a shipping point for that material. A little farther along were very large brick buildings used for agricultural works; and near by them an immense long building called the Granger's warehouse. At Port Costa Rica all the cars were run aboard a boat which carried us across the water there. In this valley everywhere grapes are raised in great quantities, and consequently wine-making is quite an industry in some localities. After traveling all night, and passing through many miles of snow sheds on the western slope of the mountains, at daybreak we reached the town of Truckee, a small but pleasant place. Here were seen large charcoal kilns and sawmills. The air at this elevation of nearly 6000 feet was rather chilly, and the warm fires which were built soon after leaving Sacramento the evening before were very comfortable indeed. The sun rising on the not far distant mountain peaks among the trees looked to be very warm, and was a beautiful sight.

We had now passed out of the state of California and into Nevada. The frost was seen in many places, but no snow as yet. As we traveled on, after taking breakfast at Reno, we saw the barren mountain peaks in the distance and passed by a cozy farm house surrounded by green fields of Alfalfa. The soil here by irrigation was made very productive; and by the many stacks seen, concluded that alfalfa must be a profitable crop. No trees except the fruit and many populars grew there, and they having been planted. But in the distance on the mountain sides were some forest trees. All the morning we rode through the barren desert (except sage brush.) At noon the train stopped at Humboldt, about half way from Ogden to San Francisco, a distance of some 894 miles. This little place surrounded by shade trees and having a running fountain was a veritable oasis in the desert.

Winna Mucca, in Nevada, was reached toward noon when the inner-man was again supplied by children who had cans of tea, coffee, and milk, and by bread and pies sold from wagons. It was a novel sight to any looker on. Some Indian huts and old canvas tents were seen on the suburbs, and the Indians themselves are loitering around here and there or sitting in the sun. The houses are of but one story generally; and there were but few trees. Many cattle were seen grazing in the fields near by. For the whole day we rode through the desert, but at sundown we were going "up hill" again which did seem pleasant for a change. At this point could be seen the streams running down the mountain side in different places, and forming the Humboldt River which loses itself in Humboldt Lake many miles away. The beautiful setting sun seemed like a silent benediction to this, the close of a quiet, pleasant day spent upon the high plains of the great west. Many grotesque shapes are suggested by the figures outlined with the different colored seams of rock in the barren mountain sides.

The next morning, Ogden in Utah was reached, after passing Promontory Point not far distant, where the last and golden spike was driven at the completion of the trans Continental Pacific railroad, May 10th, 1869; thereby linking the east with the west. The country round about here seemed pretty well settled, and having good buildings and fine orchards. There were many piles of salt here seen in the country which was made from the springs of salt water here abundant. Ogden has a fine new depot and other nice buildings being built. Not much of the place could be seen from the cars at the station. The single track of street cars seemed to end somewhere in the distance after the cars being turned around at depot. The weather was damp and cold, and the mountains near by were almost hidden by the mist.

Soon after leaving that city coming east, we saw, for the first time this fall, the beautiful colored tints of autumn upon what few bushes were in sight. The country is very level for a long distance, and stretching away to the mountains, or Salt Lake City beyond. There seemed to be more trees growing near to the lake than elsewhere. Nearly all the houses and barns here seemed very low, rarely over one story, and not high at that.

Salt Lake City, 36 miles from Ogden and 735 miles from Denver, is quite a pleasant place, seemingly, with most of its streets bordered with shade trees and little streams of water from the mountains, flowing along the outer edge of the sidewalks. Many of the houses have beautiful lawns and flower gardens, which altogether gives the city the appearance of one immense beautiful garden. Over forty years ago this place was settled by Brigham Young with some one hundred and forty of his followers, who were afterwards joined by about three hundred. The City is laid out in blocks of ten acres each, mostly. Upon the Sacred Square of the Latter Day Saints is the Council Hall, which cost some ninety thousand dollars, and capable of seating three thousand people; and the Tabernacle which is an elliptical building some two hundred and fifty feet long and one hundred and fifty feet wide; and eighty feet from floor to roof. Next to the Grand Central Depot in New York, it has the largest self-supporting roof in America, and it has the next largest organ in the United S will seat ten thousand persons. The most beautiful building in Salt Lake City is the Temple, one hundred and eighty-six long by ninety-nine in width, but not yet completed. It has three towers on each end, the highest being over two hundred feet high. The Council House and Temple are both built of granite, while the Tabernacle is of wood.

From Salt Lake City, we passed through a diversity of scene of the level and hilly country of Utah to the mountains of Colorado, Along the way were many stations but few villages. At one place where we took breakfast, the weather was quite cold and then we were told that the thermoneter ran as low as 62° below zero in the winter time. In Colorado the villages seemed be larger through which we passed then they were in Utah, and there was much nice farming country too. In the early morning we passed through that place which in all the world there is none more beautiful and imposing than the Black Canon of the Gunnison River. Along many miles of this grand gorge the railway lies upon a shelf blasted out of the solid walls of the rock. Now and then the railway changes sides with the stream, and like many of the Colorado Canons the scene is ever changing. It is here the Curicanti Needle is seen, which is a towering monument of solid stone like some great Cathedral spire. A little further on, and about the south central part of the state, we climbed the mountain by a winding path and reached the summit of Marshall Pass, which is 10,852 feet high, and from which we could look down upon four lines of roads, terrace beyond terrace, and the last so far below as to be quite indistinct to view. We also went down on the other side by a circuitous route; and the view being less obstructed at this height the eye roams over miles of cone shaped summits. In going up hill three engines were necessary to draw the cars; but on going down one engine was used to hold back the train; one went ahead all alone, while one took the Springs, Palmer Lake, and then the most beautiful of all is Denver itself.

That part of Nebraska through Hastings and Lincoln, by which we passed to Omaha, was a very pleasant and fertile country. Omaha and Council Bluffs were pleasantly situated upon the east and west banks of the Missouri river.

The southern part of Iowa was level and thickly settled, and looked very much like this part of Michigan. Northern Illinois and Indiana were level and also thickly settled, and not far enough from home to be a very strange country to most of you, and need no comments. From here to the Pacific coast and return, it occupied about six days each way of continuous travel and a distance of about six thousand miles.

"MARK TWAIN'S new book, "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," is creating a stir in literary circles and adds greatly to the reputation of the great humorist. It is a keen and powerful satire on English nobility and royalty and will be greatly relished by every American. It is replete with rich humor and ludicrous situations enforced by 300 characteristic drawings by Dan Beard. The book is sold only by subscription, and agents are wanted by the publishers, R. S. PEALE & Co., Chicago. Ill.

Rheumatism

Is undoubtedly caused by the lactid acid in the blood. This acid attacks the fibrous tissues, and causses the pains and aches in the back, shoulders, knees ankles, hips, and wrists. Thousands of people have found in Hood's Sarsaparilla a positive cure for rheumatism. This medicine, by its purifying action, neutralizes the acidity of the blood, and also builds up and strengthens the whole body.

The publisher of the Household evidently believes in encouraging matrimony, as will be seen by his offer in another column to send a wedding present to every bride who may apply for the same. See his offer in this week's HERALD.

The old folks dance at Armory hall this evening.

Keep your blood pure and you will not have rheumatism. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, and tones the whole system.

Mothers and nurses should always remember that disapointment never attends the use of Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup. Price only 25 cents a bottle.

We have an interesting treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases which we will mail free to those who will send us their address.

A SCRAP OF PAPER.

It is wonderful sometimes what important events spring from trivial beginnings. The play, "A Scrap of paper," is designed to illustrate this fact. The synopsis, which has already appeared in these columns, sufficiently explains the plot of the play. It was presented last Thursday evening at the Opera House for the benefit of the Library Association, and it is no flattery to say that it was one of the finest amateur dramatic entertainments that a Tecumseh audience has witnessed in several years. The play itself is a good one for amateur talent. The plot is a domestic one, with enough love in it to make it spicy, and it requires neither expensive costumes nor elaborate stage scenery. The cast was admirably formed, the rehearsals were carefully attended to, and a first-class entertainment was the result.

S. P. Hosmer as Prosper Couramant was the hero of the play. The character was well adapted to his peculiar talents and he carried it splendidly. No one, however, expected anything else from him. Henry Sweet acted the role of a jealous old covey with a young wife to perfection. His was a minor character in one sense, but he had several opportunities for some fine acting which he improved. Jehiel Davidson was the most natural naturalist we ever saw. In fact Jehiel is always natural, even when personifying fiction. Will Hayden acted the part of a young harum-scarum admirably,—an easy-going young man, who takes the world as he finds it and manages to turn everything into fun. It was one of the most difficult characters of the play and not one was more appropriately acted. Charlie Bidwell "did" the servant up brown. He hadn't much to do but what he did do, he did well. Stella Cleveland personified the Baron's young wife in a very dignified and ladylike manner. She is comparatively a new candidate for favor on the amateur stage, but she displayed a natural talent for acting that surprised many of her acquaintances. The manner in which Clara Hayden filled the part of Susanne challenged the admiration of the audience. With the exception of Prosper, hers was the leading role. She was the "mutual friend," about whom the other characters seemed to revolve, and whose constant care was to harmonize differences and pour oil on the troubled waters. She entered fully into the spirit of the character with relish and enthusiasm and yet without over-acting it; and herein lies the perfection of good playing. Etta Thorpe and Mamie Crowell carried the minor characters of sister and maid very nicely. They displayed a talent sufficient to carry more important parts. Mrs. Crowell personified the prim old maid, with an eye out for a "good catch," in a way that showed her an adept in the art. Although not a pleasant character to assume, Mrs. Crowell handled it very tastily. Could any woman in Tecumseh, either married or single, have carried the role of Madame Dupont any better than Mrs. M. E. Conklin? We doubt it exceedingly. Both as a whole, and in every detail, the play was wisely cast and admirably presented.

The net proceeds of the entertainment, which will accrue to the Library, after paying all expenses, amounted to $71.67. A good many have suggested that the play should be repeated. We believe a repetition of it would draw another good house.

TO YOUNG HOUSEKEEPERS.

Free to all brides. Notice is hereby given to all the readers of this paper and all their friends and acquaintances throughout the United States and Canada, that The Household will be sent one year as a wedding present to every newly married couple whose address—and 10 cents to pay postage—is sent to the publisher within one year from the date of their marriage.

Persons sending for this present are requested to send a copy of a paper containing a notice of their marriage, or some other evidence that will amount to a reasonable proof that they are entitled to the magazine under the above offer. Address, The Household, Brattleboro, Vt.

Five Strong Points of S. S. S.

First. It is entirely vegetable, contains no minerals or poison of any kind, and builds up the system from the first dose.

Second. It cures Cancer of the skin. No other remedy or treatment has ever cured it.

Third. It cures Hereditary Blood Taint, even in the third and fourth generation. No other remedy has ever done it.

Fourth. It has never failed to eradicate Scrofula from the system.

Fifth. It cures Contagious Blood Poison in all its stages by eliminating the horrible virus from the system, thus giving relief from all the consequences of this bane of the human family.

S. S. S. builds up the general health of the patient, instead of pulling it down, as is the case with the Mercury, Potash and old Sarsaparilla mixtures. It is harmless to the most delicate woman or child, yet such is its healing power that it searches out the poison in the blood and roots it out entirely, thus giving nature an opportunity to assert itself, and as a consequence the general health is rapidly improved, and the cure is effected.

THE HERALD FOR 1890.

On the 25th day of May last the HERALD entered upon the fortieth year of its publication. The 15th day of November last completed fifteen years under its present management, and we can truthfully say that the paper never had more friends or truer ones in Northern Lenawee than it has today. But, like Cæsar, we are ambitious. We aim for a larger list and a wider field to swing in, and our terms for 1890 have been adjusted with that purpose in view.

OFFER NO. ONE.

We have made arrangements with that wide awake illustrated farm magzine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct to the address of any of our subscribers who will pay up all arrearages and a year in advance. The subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. It costs you nothing. The two papers at our full rate of $1.50 per year.

OFFER NO. TWO.

The modern magazine may be taken as embodying the best literature of the world, as the magazine editor pays the highest prices to novelists, scientists, statesmen, soldiers and even kings and princes for the best they can furnish in the literary line.

You can obtain the Cosmopolitan, which gives you in a year nearly fourteen hundred pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including six hundred pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point of interest and execution at its regular price, only $2 50, and the HERALD free.

OFFER NO. THREE.

Ropp's Commercial Calculator is a practical arithmetic for practical purposes. It contains a large variety of useful, accurate and convenient tables, together with simple, short and practical methods for rapid calculations. Any subscriber paying arrearages and one year in advance, or any new subscriber paying one year in advance at full rates, $1.50 per year, will receive a copy of this book free.

OFFER NO. FOUR.

The tendency of the times is to lower prices. We offer a liberal reduction in rates for the coming year. We have adopted both a cash and a credit rate. You can pay your money and take your choice. We will furnish the HERALD alone

Here is something about the Russian influenza: In every case the attack begins with violent pains in the head and vertigo, followed by chills and nausea, which lasts nearly an entire day. They are followed in each case by pains in the limbs, an oppressive feeling in the chest and a sense of weariness. At the same time the patients have fever, the pulse being quite rapid and the temperature rising to 102 degrees in the adult, and to 105 degrees in the infant. Sneezing, soreness of the nose and throat follows, and later the sufferers have spells of coughing. In no case is the illness dangerous but great discomfort is experienced. Dr. Cyrus Edson says that in case influenza becomes epidemic it would be well for afflicted persons to spray the affected nose and throat with a solution of quinine, and swallow three grains of quinine, half a grain of camphor and a quarter of a grain of belladonna about six times a day.

EXECUTOR'S AUCTION SALE.

AT 10 o'clock in the forenoon on the 8th day of February, A.D., 1890, I will offer for sale to the highest bidder upon the premises herein described, the home farm of the late Francis Coates, deceased, consisting of about One Hundred and Fifty-three acres on the southeast quarter of section four in township of Ridgeway in this county. The farm is divided by the W. St. L. & P. R. R., and will be offered as a whole, and also in two parcels as divided by said railroad, there being about 83 acres on the west and 70 acres on the east side side thereof. This farm lies practically in the rapidly growing village of Britton—a few rods only from the depot of two railroads, postoffice, stores, etc., and is very desirable for farming purposes, about fifty acres of said premises being good timbered land, with good opportunity to divide a considerable portion into valuable village lots. Terms made known on the day of sale. All rights reserved.

JOHN BRITTON,
Executor of the last will of Francis Coates, deceased.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

The section men for the past two weeks have been ballasting up the sidetrack here.

Charles Burnett, after a few days sickness with typhoid fever, died on Thursday afternoon of last week, at the home of his uncle, Chas. Barrett. The funeral services were held on Saturday, P. M., at the Dutch church on the Ridge. Rev. James Wright, officiating.

On account of so many being under La Grippe's control the meetings were given up this week. If nothing prevents they will begin on Thursday evening of the present week and continue for several weeks.

As there are quite a number sick who were to take part on the program at the next meeting of the library circle, which will meet on Tuesday evening of next week, the author that was selected by the committee will be laid aside for the present and a mixed program, with a debate, will be furnished by the committee.

Wm. Cornell, wife and children of Stoney Creek, spent the Sabbath at her mother's, Mrs. Allison's, who is quite sick.

James Zimmerman of Augusta was in the village on business, Tuesday.

Mcginty has struck the village. If you don't believe it, ask Tink, for he was there when he came.

G. P. Waring spent Friday and Saturday in Chicago, and by the Detroit Journal, we learn that he bought the Center, the State Prohibition paper, and that it will be moved to Adrian at once and run in connection with the Lance, and will be known as the Messenger.

Darius Smith, who is attending Clery's College at Ypsilanti, was home over the Sabbath, and called Sunday evening to see———, but finding La Grippe arrival, came away earlier than usual.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to return our heartfel t appreciation to the friends and neighbors who so readily and willingly contributed to Mrs. M. A. Barrett, in her efforts to raise money, clothing, etc., for us at the time of our sickness.

MR. AND MRS. REUBEN GUNN.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

Weather "horrid" with a slight increase of La Grippe.

Boating below the Ridge is rather thick—about the consistency of hash, with the hair left out. Fair walking on the Ridge—some lead a horse.

F. W. Yates and wife are taking a week's outing at Imlay City, Lapeer county.

Mr. Fred McCleary and Miss Eva Olds, both of Lake Ridge, were married the 7th inst, and everybody is just as well pleased as they are. They have gone to keeping house and a strange rcould not tell that anything had happened.

Mr. and Mrs. Lenna Miller returned from their wedding tour Monday. The folks had a surprise fixed up for them.

Geo. Kempf says the farmers of this town have all paid their taxes, except thirty.

"Yes, it's a fact," that Orrel Harmon, Jim Litchard and Lon Coucher went in swimming—old style—in fountain lake near Lake Ridge hotel on New Year's day, and for 15 minutes there was a lively time. They did it partly for fun, but mainly to beat Detroit, where a few boys went in swimming on Christmas. Lake Ridge claims the medal for this latitude.

They have got the telegraph fever bad in the vicinity of Grange hall. Its a sure go this time. The poles are being cut, and there is enough subscribed to extend the line to C. Mead's.

Miss Minnie Sisson, from Butler, is recreating at home for a short time.

The sick list embraces the following: Mrs. Geo. Kempf, Miss McMannis, Maud Boyce, Mrs. Geo. Bryan and the youngest daughter of J. E. Hunter, who was taken down at Mr. Bryan's with scarlet fever.

Charles Burnett, aged 27, died at his uncle's, Chas. Barrett's, the 16th inst. of typhoid fever. The funeral was conducted at the Lutheran church on the Ridge and the remains deposited in Lake Ridge cemetery the 18th—Elder Wright of Britton, officiating.

A subscription paper is being circulated for the purpose of graveling the highway from the Ridge road near Lake Ridge Postoffice, south to the village of Britton, one foot thick and eight feet wide on top. It is estimated tha $1,000 will do the job, and from present indications, its a go.

Keep your blood pure and you will not have rheumatism. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, and tones the whole system.

FRANKLIN UNION LITERARY AND LYCEUM

The above society met at the residence of A. D. Hunt, Jan. 17th. The house was well filled and everything passed off pleasantly. The Secretary being absent, Minnie Wisner was appointed Sec. pro tem. After the usual miscellaneous business the following program was well rendered.

Inst. Music—Seth Simmons, H. Davenport and L. Mudget.
Rec.—Inez Allen.
Dec.—Leon Allen.
Rec.—Ruth Taylor.
Rec.—Nina Allen.
Dec.—Cecil Billington.
Music by the above string bnd.
Song—Wilfred Allen.
Sel. Read.—Minnie Wisner.
Dec.—Willard Hunt.
Rec.—Rena Allen.
Rec.—Stella Wisner.
Inst. Music.

The two leading disputants being absent the question that was to have been debated was discarded for that evening, and one proposed by old Mr. Hunt, "Are societies a benefit to mankind?" was discussed: Aff—E. E. Wisner, W. E. Spaulding, S. N. Munger and Mr. Hunt, Sen. Neg—Mrs. A. B. Wisner, H. McCollum, J. S. Allen and Clarance Wisner. It was decided unanimously in favor of the Aff.

The next meeting will be held at Ezra Simmon's Jan. 31st. A good program has been prepared. The young folks are to do the debating. The question for discussion is, "Has the stage a moral tendency?"

TIPTON TOPICS.

The roads are getting quite passable, and if it does not rain again, they will soon be good.

The Franklin Center school is closed on account of the teacher having the la grippe. Quite a number of the scholars have it also.

At last report, Frank Lambkin was still quite sick.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Fridd attended the Todd-Wesley wedding at Adrian last week.

Mrs. James Lanning is visiting at C. Vedder's.

Archie Palmer is suffering from an attack of la grippe.

At the regular meeting of Tipton Grange, January 17, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Master—E. C. Cook.
Overseer—S. N. Munger.
Lecturer—Mrs. B. Hurry.
Steward—A. Wilson.
A. S.—J. Q. Osborn.
Chap.—B. Hurry.
Treas.—J. E. Kimball.
Sec.—Tina VanValkenburg.
G. K.—F. E. Erskine.
Ceres—Mrs. R. Langdon.
Pomona—Rose Pawson.
Flora—Mrs. S. N. Munger.
L. A. S.—Mrs. W. J. Hampton.

RAISIN RACKET.

The latest fashion in this vicinity seems to be to have the Grippe, some of its victims having been in a critical condition.

Mrs. Sarah Mead has returned from a six month's visit with her sons at Holly and Manistee.

Chas. Luther keeps things lively in the shipping of stock—a car load every week.

This morning it looks as though we could soon get some of that long looked for ice.

Meetings have been in progress at the Valley church for the last three weeks under the lead of Seth and Hulda Rees.

Meetings begin Sunday night at the Raisin Center church with Lida Romick from Ohio.

Lectures are to be given every week at the Seminary during the winter.

Austin G. Hall has had to give up his school at Raisin Center on account of ill health.

Robt. Westgate would like to be threshing, but his engine and machine are in the regions of rough roads. He has about three weeks work yet of clover seed and wheat.

MACON MUSIC.

M. V. Sickley has gone to Tennessee on business.

Mrs. Calvin Davenport and Mrs. Milan Sage, who have been visiting their brother, Daniel Allen of Vermontville, returned home Monday.

Postmaster Travis has the la grippe.

Frank Day has sold his horse, harness, and cart to Prof. Huston.

Miss Minta Jackson is assisting Mr Travis in the postoffice.

Jas. A. Jackson, who has been in poor health for a long time, is no better at this writing. Mrs. Jackson is suffering from a severe attack of influenza.

Mr. Fuller, our mail carrier, has been very patient in carrying the mail through the mud, but he beat the mud one day—he went on foot.

B. S. Scudder has a set of new double beam Fairbank scales in his store. That means correct weight.

The Patrons of Industry are progressing finely with about 100 members. They held their meeting Saturday night with a good attendance.

Rev. A. W. Stalker extends his thanks to the ladies of Macon for the silk quilt presented to him Christmas.

BENEFIT OF TILING OPEN DITCHES.

BY S. J. WOOLLEY, HILLIARD, OHIO.

Years ago when we commenced to drain with tile it was considered necessary to have an open ditch to run the tile drains into, but as experience is the best teacher in drainage, we have learned by experience and observation that an open ditch is not only a very expensive thing to have, but it is the most inconvenient and destructive as well as the most wasteful thing that can be on a farm.

An open ditch is forever robbing your farm of its most productive and nutritive qualities. Every flood that comes and is permitted to flow into the open ditch carries with it the life and cream of your land—the vegetable mold—which is the most productive part of your farm, and being the lightest it is carried by the flood into the open ditch and on to the larger stream and finally deposited on the overflowed creek or river bottoms. The open ditch is necessarily located on the lowest and richest land where the vegetable mold exists in great abundance, and there makes the waste of this valuable constituent so great.

Wherever a tile drain enters the open ditch the muskrats are very apt to burrow along the tile sometimes to the distance of ten or fifteen rods and very often they will dig under the tile and let it down and ruin your whole drain until it is repaired, and most generally over the tile drain is the lowest place, and the floods make an entrance here to the open ditch, carrying with it the best part of your soil, and if the descent is sufficient to give it a rapid current it sometimes washes the soil off from the tile and is not only a great waste of your best soil but it will cost some labor to cover your tile again.

As open ditches do not always go straight through your field but most generally are in a serpentine shape, which makes your field very unsightly in a bad shape and very inconvenient to farm, and also more expensive on account of so much turning and bridges and crossways to keep up.

The loss of this waste land that the open ditch takes up, although this is the least loss of any, but even this to estimate the grain that would grow on this waste land would in a few years pay for the tile to close the ditch.

The loss of farm stock that is drowned and lost in these open ditches is considerable—the young of all kinds is very often lost in this way, and in fact it is a very common occurrence for old sheep to be lost in these open ditches. Some years ago I had an open ditch across the back part of a field. My sheep run in this field the fore part of the winter, and before I knew it there was enough dead sheep in this ditch to pay for the tile to close it. There was not a big flow of water in it at the time but the sheep would try to jump over it and then get their feet stuck in the tough mucky mortar, and then struggle to get out, but get deeper all the time until they get in the lowest place in the ditch. With their wool all wet in this condition they would soon perish with cold.

Farmers most generally do not think so much of the inconvenience and loss caused by an open ditch as above stated as they do that of keeping it cleaned out. After a man has worked hard all day tugging away at this stiff waxy mortar, his feet all day stuck in the mud trying to make a show of work, but has to scrape the waxy mass from his shovel nearly every shovelfull, you can scarcely see what he has done when night comes; so after this experience from year to year, it is not much wonder that he thinks this is the greatest loss or expense of an open ditch. The cost of keeping an open ditch in repair for ten years will pay for the tile to close it or more than do it, to say nothing of all the other great losses that he sustains.

Now I have spoken very briefly of the losses of an open ditch. I have not mentioned all of them by a long ways. It is well-known by all who have had experience that an open ditch will not drain the land anything like as well as tile will, the action of air, the water, etc., so completely puddles the service over that water does not enter the open ditch freely like it does a tile drain, and the land is never so productive along an open ditch as it is over a tile drain. Some seasons the muskrats are so bad that they'll nearly fill an open ditch, and make excavations back in your field to the danger of your horses breaking through and being crippled, and not only this, but you are forever having bother at the outlet of your tile drains to keep them open and in order, and willows and cottonwood are constantly springing up along your open ditch. But close your open ditch with tile and you have done a great work—a work that will last for all time to come, a work to be appreciated by generations yet unborn; you have made a beautiful field out of a ragged one, and reclaimed the richest waste land, and you have made two bushels grow where but one grew before.

When an open ditch is drained with tile as far down as you intend to tile it there should be a mason work of stone and mortar at the end to keep the muskrats out, and also to keep the water from running over there should be an embankment across the end at least ten feet wide, so as to hold the flood until the water soaks through and runs off by the tile. By this means there is no loss by the washing away of the soil. Last year I raised a field of wheat, through which was a large open ditch closed by tile. All along this ditch there seemed to be twice as much wheat grow as on any other part of the field, and the field averaged 38 bushels to the acre. The wheat was mixed half Gypsy and half Mediterranean.

An 18-inch tile will be sufficient outlet for 800 acres, depending on the fall the drain has The velocity of water in a large tile is so great that it will carry off a very great amount. But a smaller size may be used, but in this case a concave must be left on the surface, so that in case of flood the surface water may run over the top, and this concave surface should be seeded to grass so as to catch the sediment.

The price of tile is so very low at the present time no farmer can afford to keep up many open ditches.

AMERICAN AGRICULTURIST.

A revolution in potato culture is likely to be occasioned by the remarkable results in the American Agriculturist Prize Crop Competition. That magazine a year ago offered prizes aggregating nearly $10,000 for the largest yield on the measured acre each of wheat, oats, corn and potatoes. The oat award for a crop of 135 bushels in the December issue whetted farmers' expectations for big results in the potato class. They were not disappointed, for the grand prize goes to a crop of 738 bushels, 25 pounds of the Dakota Red, grown in one acre of strong clay loam in Aroostook county, Me., manured with a ton of special potato fertilizer. The twelve prize-winning crops averaged within a fraction of 500 bushels per acre, and the first 100 crops averaged 325½ bushels per acre. These details are all the more remarkable when we remember that the average product per acre in the whole United States the past year was only 76 bushels of potatoes. These prize crops were all grown at a large cash profit, showing that so-called high-farming is the most profitable. The American Agriculturist for January, which gives the details of the potato award, also announces a still greater potato contest for 1890. In view of the past year's experience, thousands of progressive farmers will co operate in this renewed attempt to make farming more profitable.

A new establishment in New York city is called the 'Hell Gate Brewery.' The owner of that property certainly believes in calling things by their right name.

A coffin club has been organized in New Jersey to buy coffins for the members on the installment plan, so as to beat the coffin trust. This is vengeance with blue lights.

The salary of the governor of New Jersey has been raised to $10,000 per year. It is well worth that amount to rule over a state whose chief productions are sandbanks and mosquitoes.

The fight over the World's fair of '92 is waxing hotter each day. If the question is decided on its merits alone, New York will be chosen, and the indications now are that New York has the call.

An Ohio man dropped a receipted bill into the ballot box, instead of his ticket, by mistake. The election resulted in a tie. Had he deposited the ballot his man would have won. Every vote counts.

The race war seems to be transferred to Illinois. Monday of this week a negro passenger in a Chicago street car shot and fatally wounded the white conductor, because he gave him so many pennies in change.

This is the way the New York Sun puts it: The proceedings at Washington in the case of the Ohio ballot box forgery are called an investigation, but they are rather in the nature of an inquest, with the corpse in the witness chair.

All general rules have their exceptions, and even free traders sometimes believe in protection. If the present Congress would levy a heavy prohibitive tariff duty on the Russian influenza, we believe the most enthusiastic free trader would acquiesce.

An equal tariff is a misnomer. The very object of a tariff is to create an artificial inequality. It assumes that some special industries need a bonus from the public at large, and the people are taxed by tariff duties to raise this bonus. And the farmers are the principle victims of the system.

The testimony taken last week before a Congressional committee on the Ohio ballot box forgery case places Ex-Gov. Foraker in a most pitiable plight. It seems almost incredible that a public man of his reputation should commit political suicide in so silly a manner.

The plan of transplanting the colored people of the South to Africa is a very pretty theory, but it is utterly impracticable. The whites of the South need the labor of the negro in their fields, mines and shops. It is safe to say that the Southern whites will never consent to banish their chief labor supply.

Here is a nut for sugar consumers to crack. Gov. Warmouth, of Louisiana, in his testimony before the ways and means committee, said that the people would never submit to a direct bounty on sugar, and hence the sugar men preferred an indirect tariff, which is just as beneficial to them. So the tariff is a tax, after all.

The Hon. John James Ingalls has perhaps never shown greater self-command than in refraining, as he says he has refrained, from saying anything disagreeable about the Hon. Benjamin Harrison. There are so many disagreeable things which could be truly said, and the Sunflower Senator could say them so well, that it is a wonder and history's loss that he hasn't said them yet.—New York Sun.

A bill establishing the Australian system of elections was introduced in the New Jersey legislature last week. It will doubtless pass, as the New Jersey Democrats are pledged to this reform. Gov. Campbell's recommendation will certainly be carried into effect in Ohio, and Iowa will fall into line before the flowers bloom in the spring, tra la. Notwithstanding Halstead and Dana and Quay, and Ben Butler and Gorman, the cause of ballot reform is marching on.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

INDUSTRIAL GROWTH OF THE SOUTH.

The famous surrender of Gen. Lee at Appomatox, was the closing scene of the bloodiest and most disastrous war of modern times. It left the South utterly prostrated. Its business interests were ruined; its wealthiest men were bankrupts; its fields were devastated; its cities in ashes. No territory of equal extent in the world was the scene of such desolation. For five years after that surrender those states were ground beneath the heel of military and carpet bag rule. A saturnalia of jobbery and robbery was inaugurated in almost every Southern state. Huge state debts were piled up to enrich a few carpet bag officials. The five years of misgovernment succeeding the war, were but little less disastrous to the industrial interests of the South than the war itself. At the beginning of the decade which opened with 1870, the outlook for that section was gloomy indeed. But the Anglo Saxon blood, which flowed in the veins of the Southern whites, was bound to assert itself in time. The decade following 1870 was devoted chiefly to wresting the Southern states from carpet bag rule, and restoring honesty and intelligence to their rightful position in local and state government. With the opening of 1880, that vital work had been accomplished, and the "New South" then entered in earnest upon its marvellous career of material and industrial growth.

During the decade from 1880 to 1890 the progress of that portion of the Union has been marvellous. Considering the unfavorable circumstances which have environed them, their increase in material wealth is without a parallel in the history of nations. A few statistics will serve to illustrate this statement more emphatically than a whole column of generalization.

In 1880 the South had 220 national banks with a capital of $45,597,000, and in 1889 it had 472 national banks with a capital of $76,454,000. During the same period there was an increase of surplus of 45 per cent in the North, 82 per cent in the West and 146 per cent in the South; of undivided profits, an increase of 43 per cent in the North, 58 per cent in the West, and 92 per cent in the South. A summary published in the Manufacturers' Record of Baltimore gives the new mining and manufacturing enterprises started in the South for the past four years only, as follows: In 1886, 1,575; in 1887, 3,430; in 1888, 3,018; in 1889, 5,135. In the matter of railroad construction, the South shows an equally wonderful progress. In the number of miles of new track laid last year, with the exception of the new state of Washington, Texas and Georgia lead all the other states. Since 1865 over $7,800,000,000 have been thrown into the South to pay for cotton. The value of the cotton exported to Europe during that time has been $5,160,000,000. The agricultural advance has been almost as marked as the industrial. In 1880 the value of their agricultural products was $571,000,000. In 1889 it was over $850,000,000. In 1879 the South produced 431,000,000 bushels of grain and the yield in 1889 exceeded 650,000,000. Their railroad mileage has been increased 21,000 miles since 1880. Since that year over $800,000,000 have been spent in the building of new roads and improving old ones. In 1880 the South made 387,301 tons of pig iron; in 1888, 1,132,000 tons, and in 1889 the output exceeded 1,600,000 tons. In 1880, 6,048,571 tons of coal were mined in the South; in 1888 the output was over 18,000,000 tons. Millions upon millions of Northern capital are pouring into the South with each new year. The year 1890 will witness the inception of some of the most gigantic business enterprises of that section. The "New South" has fairly entered upon a career of progress and development which is already amazing the world.

This wonderful story of industrial progress will serve to point a political moral. It is the most emphatic proof possible that the laboring classes of the South, both white and colored, are contented and prosperous. No government could oppress and tyrannize over its laboring classes, could violate the rules of industrial progress, and yet thrive as the South has done during the past decade. But the South is still far behind the North in manufacturing. It has vast and wonderful resources awaiting development, which has only just begun. As this development progresses, the race question will settle itself. We shall hear no more about schemes to transport the freedmen to Africa. The day is rapidly approaching when the South will need, not only her present negro laborers, but more white ones. The friction between the races, which has been growing less and less during the past ten years, will soon become a thing of the past. And herein lies the real cause of the "solid South." With the restoration of local self government and the return of intelligence and honesty to official power in those states, began the material prosperity of the last decade. The men who now control the destinies of the New South are in no mood to set back the dial of time 20 years and restore the carnival of corruption and debauchery which prevailed during the carpet bag era. This was the chief cause of Mahone's overwhelming defeat in Virginia last fall. The prosperity of that section has come to stay, and every effort by political charlatans to check it will be met by a "solid South."

THE FARMERS' BURDEN.

HOW TO RELIEVE HIM OF HIS TERRIBLE LOAD.

The Present Mortgage System Becoming Unbearable. Farmers and Knights Favor The French Plan.

A question of revolution and not of mere reform is now before the organized farmers and organized workmen of Michigan.

It is proposed to overturn the present system and to do as they do in France, have the government make the loan and charge 1 per cent interest "Government loans money to national banks," is the argument, "and why not to burdened farmers and mechanics?"

Apology for the space which the details of the scheme occupy is found in the intense interest in the subject manifested among the organized farmers and workmen and the merits of the remedy itself.

The convention of the farmers, and the attendance thereat of representatives of the knights of labor in St. Louis, together with the deliberations of the national assembly in Atlanta, are the initiatory touches that have led to a practical grand combination between the farmers and the workmen of the great cities.

When revolutions are intimated, the first question that suggests itself is, "Is the power behind it?" And in this case it may be said that if all who are virtually interested join in maintaining the project and vote accordingly, it would receive the most sweeping majority that the country ever knew.

But there is no design to form an independent party. That was the decision arrived at in St. Louis. It was decided that the farmers and the knights each maintain a separate organization; but when legislative action is required by the farmers the knights will support the measures, and when the latter require assistance the farmers will turn in and help them.

The question of mortgage indebtedness is one which has received the most serious attention on the part of the farmers' alliance of the south, and is one which is now engaging the attention of the patrons of industry of Michigan and other states of the north. A remedy was anxiously looked for by the representives of the alliance visiting Atlanta during the session of the national assembly of the knights of labor in that city, and the knights sought to find that remedy. After mature deliberation they decided to present the following address for the consideration of the farmers and of the thinking men of the country.

"Though we find no reliable figures concerning the mortgage indebtedness of the country, yet enough is well known to prove beyond a doubt that it is frightfully large and dangerously burdensome. As indications to show that what we state is true, we refer to figures said to have originated with Mr. Edward Atkinson, in the service of the money lenders of the east, as follows: Kansas, $235,000,000; Illinois, $1,000,000,000; Indiana, $635,000,000; Ohio, 1,227,000,000; Michigan, $500,000,000; Wisconsin, $357,000,000. These statements have been disputed and vehemently criticised by interested parties on the one hand and partially verified on the other.

"Striking out one half of the amount to cover errors and silence criticism, one still finds the figures and conditions confronting us most appalling. As a fruitage of these conditions, the mortage debtors in many places are unable to pay the interest on loans, and are utterly without hope of ever being able to pay the principal. This condition is not confined merely to the states named. It exists in city and country in nearly every state in the Union. One leading orthodox authority places the mortgage indebtedness of 23 states at one-fourth of the value of their real estate.

"In the midst of this present and approaching distress we also find that through manipulation of the finances the country is everywhere afflicted with falling prices of the products of the land and labor which must be sold to meet monetary obligations. Senator Plumb, president of a national bank, in his place in the United States senate, March 28th, 1888, stated that the money of the country had been contracted the past three years 5 per cent of its volume, which had lowered the price of property in this country three billions of dollars; producing, said the senator, a state of things favorable to loaners but very unfavorable to debtors. Almost unlimited testimony may be produced to sustain the senator's statements concerning the rapid and continuous decrease of the price of property in this country.

"In addition to the mortgage indebtedness of the country, the involved and helpless debtors are also incumbered with increasing billions of national, state and municipal debts, and also fabulous sums of corporate capitalization on which interest and dividends are expected.

"We are thus confronted with all the dangers of individual and general bankruptcy and financial ruin; and the great, freedom loving middle classes of our beloved country are rapidly sinking into hopeless serfdom.

"The means of relief should be direct and immediate—not in the nature of repudiation, but through means and methods considered honorable and legitimate in orthodox business circles. We offer no general panacea for all evils that afflict communities, but for the case in hand We believe a law substantially as follows, would afford relief.

"That it be enacted by congress that on and after July 1, 1890, it shall not be lawful to collect debts that are secured by mortgages on real estate by the usual methods of foreclosure under the laws of the several states; but that the method of procedure and collection shall be as follows:

"First—The creditor holding the mortgage shall proceed in person or by attorney or lawful representative to the office of the register of deeds where the mortage is recorded and there procure a correct abstract of the estate held by this mortgage, including the incumbrance created by his claim or debt. The register of deeds shall certify to the corrections of said abstract and attach his signature. The county clerk of said county shall also examine and certify to the correctness of said abstract and attach his seal and signature, provided after examination the property is found to be worth the full amount of the mortgage.

"Second—It shall be the duty of the creditor to proceed to the office of the county treasurer, where the said abstract shall be permanently placed on file for future reference

"Third—On the presentation of said certified abstract in the county treasurer's office, it shall be the duty of said county treasurer to issue in due form, on blank books prepared for the purpose, a draft for the amount of mortgage debt, including interest and official fees to date, on the treasurer of the United States. The draft shall be examined by the county clerk and certified as correct by his official seal and signature. The draft will then will be due and payable by the treasurer of the United States on demand of any lawful holder of the same. The draft must contain an accurate description and location of the estate mentioned in the abstract and the amount of the draft shall be charged up against the estate, creating a lawful lien. The debtor shall now be allowed 20 years time on the debt by paying interest promptly on the same semi-annually at the rate of 1 per cent per annum, that being the terms allowed to national bankers during the 20 years. The record of the mortgage shall be marked "settled by the United States government."

"Fourth—This procedure shall be the only lawful way for collecting mortgage debts until the aggregate circulation of lawful money in the United States shall amount to $50 per capita of the population, not counting the lawful reserve in banks and other fixed noncirculating deposits required by law.

"Fifth—After said aggregate of $50 per head of population shall have been reached the usual modes of legal procedure in the several cities will again become lawful, except at such times as the increase of population shall require further floating of new money to preserve the even unfluctuating aggregate of $50 per head.

"Sixth—This means of floating money shall not prevent other legitimate means of coining and issuing money in order to facilitate or aid in reaching and maintaining the aggregate and unfluctuating circulation herein mentioned. Nor shall it be considered a bar or hinderance to private parties who desire to settle their own debts in their own way by mutual consent.

"Seventh—To enable the treasury of the United States to meet the demands under this law the treasurer shall be authorized to create and pay out on demand a sufficient amount from time to time of the United States treasury notes receivable by the government of all dues and demands. And in order to show the amount of money afloat and its relation to the number of population, it shall become the duty of the United States treasurer to embody in his monthly reports a careful calculation of the whole population at the end of each month computed on the basis of known percentage of increase and a statement of the money per head afloat at the end of each month. These reports sent out monthly to the registers of deeds in the several counties of the United States shall be the authority indicating the mode of procedure in the collection of mortgages for the ensuing month.

"Eighth—When the mortgage debts become due it shall be the duty of the holder of the mortgage to proceed to collection within 30 days. If procedure is not commenced within 30 days interest shall cease on the said mortgage on the day on which by its terms the debt becomes due and payable.

"Ninth—This law shall be applicable to real estate occupied as individual or family homes and to lands and lots occupied for industrial and business purposes, for family support. It shall not be applicable to unoccupied or unused lands.

"On this plan there is no need of any new officer or any complication or risk in valuing lands and placing mortgages; no new agencies; no straw bonds nor no new risks. No money leaves the United States treasury until paid out in drafts to the lawful holders of the same. The expenses, delays and annoyances of collections are far less than the present legal processes. The debtor is placed on a footing with the national banker."

A THANKSGIVING ROMANCE.

WAS after dinner on the day
Made famous by good living:
They broke the wish
bone, half in play,
In honor of Thanksgiving

Kind fate, that favors
those who dare—
By Cupid never daunted—

Allotted him the larger share—
The part that she had wanted

Her pretty lips set in a pout
She sighed "Ah me, I'm rated!
But tell me what you thought about?
Your wish you haven't stated."

"Alas!" he cried, "it's been declared
That when the bone is broken,
The winner's wish must not be shared,
It must remain unspoken.

"This fatal rule demands that I
The secret shall refuse you;
Yet if I'm mum (he heaved a sigh)
The chances are I'll lose you.

"Oh, cruel fate! what shall I do?
(His hand began to tremble.)
The fact is that—I—wished—for—you.
Why should I, love, dissemble?"

The maid replied, her head bowed low,
Half hiding Cupid's traces:
"Regarding rules, there are, you know,
Exceptions in all cases."

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." "I was caught in a python's folds and saw fierce eyes glaring down into mine. If that tremendous coil were tightened around me, I knew that I might at once check my luggage for the undiscovered bourne. In this crisis of my fate I saw the great python's tail in close proximity to his mouth. I grasped the snake's tail and pushed a yard or two down his yawning jaws. Serpents seldom bite their prey; they lubricate it and suck it down. With such a long and cold-blooded creature, I calculated that it would take over a half a minute before the sensations of his tail could be conveyed to his head and render him aware that he was committing suicide."

THE LADIES' RAID.

Tramp, tramp, tramp!
With the morning clocks at ten,
She skimmed the street with footsteps fleet,
And hustled the timid men,
Tramp, tramp, tramp!
She entered the drygoods store,
And with echoing tread the dance she led
All over the crowded floor.
She charged the throne where the bargains were,
And everybody made way for her;
Wherever she saw a painted sign
She made for that spot a prompt bee line;
Whatever was old or whatever was new,
She had it down and she looked it through.
Whatever it was that caught her eye,
She'd stop and price and pretend to buy;
But t'was either too bad, too common or good
So she did, and she wouldn't, and didn't and would.
And round the counters and up the stairs,
In attic and basement and everywhere;
The salesmen fainted and cashboys dropped,
But still she shopped, and shopped, and shopped;
And round, and round, and round, and round,
Like a winding toy with a key that's wound,
She'd weave, and wriggle, and twist about,
One way in and the other way out,
Till men grew giddy to see her go;
And by and by, when the sun was low,
Homeward she dragged her weary way
And had sent home the spoils of the day—
A spool of silk and a hank of thread—
Eight hours—ten cents—and a dame half dead.

HOME MATTERS.

Cleanse the sink-spout with copperas water.

If sassafras bark is sprinkled among dried fruit it will keep out the worms.

Tin cleaned with paper will shine better than when cleaned with flannel.

Ham should be broiled very quickly, and just enough to cook through.

Yeast jars should be washed in cold water and afterward thoroughly scalded.

Oilcloths will last longer if one or two layers of wadded carpet lining are laid under them.

Tea leaves are good to scatter over carpets before sweeping, not only to freshen the colors, but also to prevent the dust arising.

Plenty of towels in the kitchen is a saving, and six good wipers are none too many. Three each a week and the rinsing after meals is not needed.

Lay a piece of thick canton flannel under your tablecloth. Even coarse napery will look a much better quality with a subcover than if spread directly over the bare table top.

Flowers can be kept fresh for some time if a pinch of soda or saltpeter is added to the water. Wilted roses will regain their freshness if dipped a minute or two in hot water.

In washing tumblers or goblets that have been used for milk do not plunge them into hot water without first rinsing, as it drives the milk into the glass and can not be removed.

To clarify molasses, heat over the fire, pour in one pint of sweet milk to each gallon of molasses. The impurities will rise in scum, which must be taken off before broken by boiling.

Saving in the kitchen tells upon the income and makes the bank account heavier, but there is one saving that exceeds even these, and that is that the wife and mother save herself.

The elasticity of cane chair bottoms can be restored by washing the cane with soap and water until it is well soaked and then drying thoroughly in the air, after which they will become as tight and firm as new, if none of the canes are broken.

RICE PUDDING WITHOUT EGGS.—One cup of rice, well washed; one cup of rich milk, one-half cup of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt, raisins if liked; flavor as you like best. Put all together in a buttered dish or pan, and bake in a slow oven about two and a half hours until the rice is well cooked. To be eaten warm or cold with butter or cream; also good with any plain sauce.

In making pies it is seldom one can guess the exact quantity of crust; almost always there is a little over. If this is set away it will probably sour and be thrown out, as it deserves, but made into a few tarts baked with the fire that cooks the pies, it is well used; besides, how the children's eyes sparkle, for what child does not like "tarts for tea."

FRILLS AND FAVORS.

Those who can afford them favor costumes of velvet, simply made, and edged with Russian sable and other rich furs.

Lilac and pale mauve are favorite colors for evening gowns. The favored materials are velvets and satin brocades.

Novelties in black crepe de chine show tufts and rings of black velvet; also embroidered floral designs in effective arrangements.

Handsome costumes of dark velvet have round skirts edged with blue fox, and left open at two seams to show underskirts of light brocaded satin.

Crepe de chine is used for evening gowns for young ladies, and a leading trade journal predicts that this elegant fabric will find increased consumption next summer, both for entire costumes and in combination with other stuffs.

The "Addison" is a new indoor gown of dark gray cloth with a border of velvet edged on either side with a black braiding. The pointed bodice has a full yoke finished where it joins with velvet and embroidery, the collar and cuffs being the same.

A more dressy Paris mantle is of shaded brown matelasse relieved by long gores of seal-brown plush. The mantle is plain and tight-fitting, and has pointed sleeves edged with passementerie over tight-fitting undersleeves of plush, edged with feather trimming.

The "Camille" is a new coat of dark green cloth with trimmings of black passementerie on the angel sleeves, half of which are composed of black velvet finished with a fringe of heavy cord. Round the neck and down the front is a combined tippet and boa of sable.

Very stately evening gowns of black velvet have trained skirts lined with white satin and bordered with bands of black marabout, edged with curled black cocks' feathers. The high bodices have bands of the plumage around the throat and down the front.

FASHION'S SURPRISES.

MISS MANTILINI GOSSIPS ABOUT RECENT STYLES.

Good Taste in the Accident—The Era of the Bodice—A Pretty Costume for a "Bud"—Novelties in Head Wear—An Elegant Promenade Jacket.

[Special New York Letter.]

URPRISES in the world of fashion are of a happy kind the present season, the tendency being, so far as the dress itself is concerned, towards still greater simplicity, especially in the matter of skirts, that too frequently abused adjunct of the drapery of the female "form divine."

The bodice is, with true artistic sense, being given its due prominence, and, so far as present fashion plates are concerned, the skirt might almost as well be left out of the design, so uniform are its characteristics.

This may truly be termed the era of the bodice. The reign of the untrimmed basque, the tight sleeves, and the bust and waist mathematically defined and cased in a cuirass corsage, is now only a thing of the past. How much more expressive are the folds of soft, flexible material, arranged inside of the half-open bodices, that are now to be seen, and which give such scope to individual taste. Material is of less consequence than suggestions as to form, and a mere hint will aid the imagination in the working out of details that can be left to personal choice.

The bodice, however, affords sufficient scope for the talents of the best designers, and it must be said that never in modern times has dress been treated with more intelligent regard for the laws of good taste than at the present time. The subjection of the bustle is a matter for general rejoicing, for it is a triumph of good sense and good taste. It became monstrosity, that had no good excuse for existence, and placed the taste of civilized nations on a level of that of the most ignorant Hottentot tribes. It may be accepted as the law of good taste, that the skirt of woman's attire should never accentuate that which it is designed to modestly conceal. This end the prevailing fashion correctly avoids, and it is not a result of mere chance or change, but of the intelligent resolve of intelligent women not to submit to the dictates of ignorant pretenders in matters of fashion.

With the bodice it is different. Here art and good taste may properly heighten natural charms, and, with equally delicate revealments and concealments, tell a tale of grace and beauty that is equally in harmony with nature and good taste.

A unique bodice for a "bud," or a ball-room or a reception dress for quite young ladies is of heliotrope velvet, cut decollette, with a straight line across the bust, and small triangular pieces set at the side and reaching up to meet jeweled ornaments which clasped them to larger triangles of velvet resting on the upper sides of the arms for sleeves. The skirt, of course, was plain, the skill of the modiste being employed in the draping. The effect was modish and exceedingly charming. The hair was dressed rather high, but in a simple manner, effect being given to the natural waves.

Jackets made of long-haired, white, woolen cloth, an imitation of expensive real Astrachan (or Thibet lambskin), are highly elegant for the winter promenade. Of course they must be completed by a white muff and hat. Other jackets of beige colored, light green, light blue, and delicately rose-tinted cloth are less stylish, but more useful, and young ladies have a wide range of choice among them.

The female head is equally an object worthy of the highest efforts of taste in proper adornment. Here, too, artistic instinct is once more supreme, and the huge monstrosities so lately in fashion are rarely to be seen. Nor are formal lines much observed. Grace and natural effects are studied, and the results in many cases are most charming.

A Woman's Discovery.

"Another wonderful discovery has been made and that too by a lady in this country. Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for seven years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly and could not sleep. She bought of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night and with one bottle has been miraculously cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Lutz." Thus write W. C. Hamrick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. Get a free trial bottle at Remarkable Nerve.

The early history of America is full of instances of men having great nerve. But we are rapidly becoming the most nervous people on earth. The recent increase of insanity, epileptic fits, headache, backache, neuralgia, sleeplessness, nervousness, dyspepsia, fluttering of the heart, etc., points to an early decay of the race, unless this tendency is checked. Nothing will cure these diseases like Dr. Miles' Nervine, warranted to contain neither opium nor morphine. Sample bottles free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store. Don't fail to try it.

THE ECHO is the weekly edition of the DETROIT EVENING NEWS, and is an eight page, 56 column paper. The latest and best news is carefully condensed and given at a very cheap rate. It is considered one of the very best family papers in the country, containing good and new stories by the most popular authors, and articles from the pens of the best known writers in this and other lands. The Michigan edition of THE ECHO gives the news of the State in a concise and pithy form, over a whole page being devoted to each week. It also furnishes a complete market report, carefully edited and always reliable. During the present year the paper will be enlarged and improved; in fact, no pains will be spared to make it the cheapest and best weekly family paper published in the west. THE ECHO will be sent to any address at $1.00 per year; special rates made for clubs. Send for a sample copy.

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membranes of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic researches, however, has proven this to be a fact, and result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to the applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N. B.—For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet of this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 303 west King street, Toronto, Canada. [Scientific American.

DR. A. TRASKS MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

FINAL FIGHT

For the Coveted Office of Lieutenant Governor.

HOW THE SENATE PROCEEDINGS WILL BE CONDUCTED.

The Evidence to Be Referred to a Committee, Whose Report, With the Arguments of Attorneys and Vote of the Majority, Will Settle It — Political Notes.

COLUMBUS, O., January 18.

Arrangements are being rapidly perfected for the final proceedings in the Marquis Lampson contest for the lieutenant governorship, and it is probable that the case will be disposed of much sooner than has been generally expected. On Tuesday next a resolution will be offered in the Senate in behalf of Mr. Marquis to refer the depositions either to a select committee or the standing committee on privileges and elections for consideration. It is the intention of the attorneys of Mr. Marquis to have the evidence purveyed by the depositions considered in detail by the committee chosen, and have the latter report the result of their deliberations to the Senate. After the report of the committee is received the attorneys for contestant and contestee will make arguments upon the case to the Senate as a jury. At the close of the arguments the Senate will decide the contest. Considerable discussion has arose, since the death of Senator Ashburn, as to whether it will require a constitutional majority or a majority of the quorum present to decide the case. The rules which will govern the proceedings provide that only a majority of the quorum then and there present will be required to render a decision. Lieutenant Governor Lampson, as is provided in the statutes, will not be permitted to preside or even participate in the proceedings, and President pro-tem. Adams will be in the chair. The Democrats will have a decided advantage in the proceedings, as they will have a majority of the quorum and the presiding officer, but those actively interested in the case manifest a desire to have the utmost fairness prevail.

The arguments in the contest will be made by Hon. George S. Converse and Hon. T. E. Powell in behalf of Mr. Marquis, with Hon. George K. Nash and A. C. Vohris, of Summit county, for Mr. Lampson.

NOTES.

John Sarber, treasurer of the Democratic State Executive Committee, and Fred Heer, of the State Central Committee, are candidates for local members of the board of penitentiary managers.

Governor Campbell today issued writs ordering special elections in Franklin, Brown and Clermont counties on February 4, to fill the vacancies in the legislature caused by the deaths of Senator Ashburne and Representative Lawlor.

Governor Campbell's attention has been called by the board of elections to the registration laws relating to vacancies in the house, and it is probable that an election will be called for the third of next month, in order that the vacancy made by the death of John B. Lawlor, may be filled.

Senator-elect and Mrs. Brice were given a brilliant reception at Lima last night by the Quilna club, a leading social organization of that city. The event was a memorable one in the society of that city. Guests were in attendance from several other states and many Ohio cities were represented. Dancing was a feature of the occasion, and Senator Brice waltzed with Miss Hughes, of Lima.

New Spanish Ministry.

MADRID, January 18.—Queen Regent Christine has requsted Senor Martinez, president of the chamber of deputies to form a ministry constituted as nearly as possible to the end of conciliating all parties.

Glass Bottle Trust.

LONDON, January 18.—A glass bottle trust has been formed in London by the uniting of the uniting of twenty-three firms engaged in the manufacture or sale of glass bottles, with a view to the maintenance of uniform prices.

Canadian Reciprocity.

OTTAWA, ONT., January 18.—Reciprocity with the United States in wrecking privileges is to be a feature of this session of the dominion parliament. Three members have given notice of their intention to introduce bills on the subject.

Four Killed and Many Injured.

VIENNA, January 18.—A boiler explosion occurred in a mill at Dobschutz Oberlausitz, Hungary, by which four persons were killed and a large number more or less seriously injured. One of those killed was the fireman, who was blown through the roof. The other three were boys.

Hostility to England.

LISBON, January 18.—Sentiment toward England is very bitter here and several Portuguese houses have discharged their English employees. English residents here, who have suffered by this animosity, intend to send a committee to wait on Lord Salisbury and urge that England adopt a more conciliatory policy.

Brazil Recognized.

NEW YORK, January 18.—The consul general in New York of the Argentine Republic states that on December 3 the government formally recognized the republic of Brazil, and fixed December 8 as a day of national celebration of the event. On the latter day flags were displayed and all public places illuminated in Buenos Ayres, and salutes were fired by Argentine men-of-war at home and abroad.

Liberalist Union Meeting.

LIVERPOOL, January 18.—A Liberal Unionist meeting was held here, which began under most favorable auspices, but ended in a disgraceful row. Mr. T. W. Russell, Unionist member of parliament for South Tyrone, attempted to make a speech, but was vigorously and persistently hissed, whereupon he left the platform. A tremendous uproar ensued, which ended in several fist fights and the informal adjournment of the meeting.

MR. BLAINE

More Talk of the Secretary's Resignation.

WASHINGTON, January 20.—The Herald revives the story about Secretary Blaine's resignation. It says the belief that Mr. Blaine's resignation as secretary of state is impending, has been very strong within the past few days, and after repeating the rumors, current from time to time, as to the strained relations between the president and secretary, the death of his son Walker it is believed, will furnish an additional and very strong reason to Mr. Blaine, for quitting at once his place in the state department. Not only is Walker's death an irreparable personal loss to his father, who was greatly attached to him, but in the discharge of duties as secretary of state, Mr. Blaine found his son an invaluable assistant, whose place it will be impossible to fill. Mr. Walter Blaine had the confidence of his father to a degree which naturally no one could obtain and was thus able to relieve the secretary of the burden of a large amount of labor."

CONGRESSIONAL CREAM

To Be Churned This Week at the National Capital.

JOHN J. INGALLS.

WASHINGTON, January 20.—The feature of the proceedings of congress, which will attract most general attention the coming week, the speech to be delivered in the Senate by Mr. Ingalls. He had proposed to deliver this speech on the same day that Sen. Butler addressed the Senate on the race question, the Kansas senator having chosen the same subject for his address.

But, in view of the fact that there was considerable uncertainty about how, when Senator Butler was to speak, and as Senator Ingalls desired to be reasonably sure that he would have time to conclude his speech on the same day, it was deemed advisable to postpone its delibery until some more opportune occasion. It is now the intention of Senator Ingalls to speak Tuesday as soon as the morning business of the Senate concludes, and he will doubtless speak as in the past, to crowded galleries. There are only two speeches fixed on the calendar of the coming week in the Senate—the speech of Mr. Ingalls and a speech to be delivered on Monday by Mr. Paseo, of Florida, on the views of the proposed federal election control, taken in the president's message. It is stated that Senator Blair proposes at an early date to call up the educational bill so long before Congress and with which he has become so thoroughly identified. There is an undoubted majority in favor of the bill in the Senate, and doubtless a majority in favor of its passage in the House.

The committee on territories will report to the Senate today the bill for the admission of Wyoming, and Senator Platt will give notice that it is his intention to call the bill up for discussion and passage at an early date.

The bill for the organization of a temporary form of government in Oklahoma will be reported favorably from the same committee, and an effort will be made to bring about its passage during the week.

In the session of the Senate, the first of the objected cases will be taken up and disposed of during the coming week—that of Teomas J. Morgan, commissioner of Indian affairs. The nomination of Dr. Dorchester will be taken up at the same time. Both of them will be confirmed.

In the House the Oklahoma bill is certain to occupy at least one more day, probably Monday, but other matters cannot be given such definite places. Mr. McKinley will, if he sees his chance, call up for consideration the customs administration bill, on which the ways and means committee have made favorable report.

There are only a few features of this bill that are not too technical to be passed by over the House and those will be discussed and despatched of in short order.

General interest centers on the reports of majority and minority of the committee on rules. It is said that there will be some opposition on the part of few Republicans to the report. Mr. Reed is expressed to being in.

The party leaders will be well aware of the spirit of the Republicans before bringing in a report. Among the committee hearings during the week will be the following: Senate committees—Pacific Railway; House Committees—Coinage, Weights and Measures; the Silver question, Monday; Civil Service, on the bill to repeal the Civil Service law, Monday; ballot box forgeries, continuation of examination of witnesses, Monday; Merchant, Marine and Fisheries on bills to increase American merchant marine, Wednesday.

SHE GOT $12,000

And Her Attorney Fees in the Breach of Promise Suit.

NEW YORK, January 20.—The jury in the suit of Caroline Cammerer against Clemens Muller for $100,000 damages for breach of promise of marriage, rendered a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $12,000. A motion for a new trial was denied and a motion for an allowance for the plaintiff's attorneys was granted. Daniel Dougherty was counsel for the plaintiff and Colonel Ingersoll for the defendant.

HEAVY SNOW.

Amounting Almost to a Blizzard in Minnesota.

ST. PAUL, January 20.—A heavy snow storm began last night. At midnight nearly a foot of snow had fallen on the level, and with a high wind was drifting badly. The railroad and telegraph service will probably be interrupted.

Will He Marry Mary Anderson?

NEW YORK, January 20.—Mr. Navorro said last night that he had not cabled congratulations to his son Antonio on his engagement to Miss Mary Anderson, who is at San Reno. "I have received several cablegrams from my son recently," said Mr. Navarro, "but he has not announced his engagement. My information comes from the newspapers."

Died of Pneumonia.

WASHINGTON, January 20.—Thurlow W. Chapman, solicitor general of the department of justice, died here of pneumonia.

AT REST.

OBSEQUIES OF THE LATE SAMUEL WALKER BLAINE.

The Funeral Cortage is a Vast One and Contains Representatives from Every Civilized Nation on the Globe—The Details of the Services.

WASHINGTON, January 18.—The funeral of Walker Blaine took place this morning. The preliminary services were held at the residence and were only attended by invited friends. Among those present were members and relatives of the family, President and Mrs. Harrison, Vice President Morton, members of the cabinet, senators and members of the House from Maine and several other New England members of the House and Senate. The services were conducted by Dr. Hamlin and consisted merely of prayer. The pall bearers were Hon. William F. Wharton, Judge John Davis, ex-Chief Clerk of State Department L. A. Brown, Marcellus Barley, M. L. Ruth, A. F. Jenks, F. B. Loring and William Haywood.

The remains were enclosed in a black covered casket, which was heaped with the choicest flowers, the gifts of the president, cabinet officers and others in high official and social positions.

The second service was in the church of the Covenant. Members of the family occupied seats on the right side of the main aisle in front of the pulpit, while opposite sat the President and members of the Cabinet and their families. Behind the family and intimate friends sat representatives of the diplomatic corps, while opposite sat members of Congress. Services here were again conducted by Rev. Dr. Hamlin and the organ was played by Walter Damrosch. After the services which were very simple and impressive, the remains were taken to Oak Hill cemetery for interment in a new lot purchased by Secretary Blaine on Thursday.

The ushers at the church were the personal friends of Mr. Blaine. The attendance at the church was enormous and expressions of sorrow were universal. It was noted that the press to which Mr. Blaine has always been an especial friend, was largely represented. In consequence of the large attendance at the church, many people of prominence were unable to obtain an entrance. One lady fainted away, while several others were overcome by the heated air. The attendance at the funeral represented congressmen from all parts of the country and official representatives of nearly every civilized nation in the world.

Governor Robie, of Maine, and Hon. J. H. Manley, of Augusta, Me., came on especially to attend the funeral.

CLIMATIC PHENOMENA

A CURIOUS STATE OF AFFAIRS REPORTED FROM CALIFORNIA.

Eighteen Feet of Snow Blocks the Railroads at One Place, While Orange Trees are Laden with Fruit Only Eighty Miles Away.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., January 18.—The snow fall of the Sierras for the past two days has again blockaded the railroad traffic on the Central Pacific railroad. No trains arrived yesterday nor today, and none are expected to get through until tomorrow. A similar blockade also exists on the California and Oregon route near the boundary of this state and Oregon. Every effort is being made to reopen traffic on both lines. Referring to this subject the evening bulletin says judging by the comment in some eastern papers the snow question in California is not generally understood. It is made to appear that all California is under snow. The fact should be explained to uninformed easterners that the California where snow is measured by feet is located at an attitude greater than Mount Washington, and such snow falls even at these points are a novelty. Eighteen feet of snow at the Summit at Nevada county and the orange trees laden with fruit at Penryn, 80 miles this side, constitute a climatic phenomenon that strangers should be informed about.

Raum Ruffled.

WASHINGTON, January 18.—General Raum, commissioner of pensions, recommended to Secretary Noble the removal of Henry A. Phillips, of New York, chief of the middle division pension bureau. Mr. Phillips was one of the employes of the office whose pension was re-rated during the administration of Corporal Tanner. Several months ago he was asked by the secretary of the interior to resign, but failed to comply with the request. No further action was taken in this case until now. It is understood that some action will soon be taken the cases of nearly all of the thirty employes whose pensions were re-rated. In the interval that has elapsed since the resignations of two of the employes were requested, the friends of the re-rated have had an opportunity to speak in their behalf. This opportunity has not been neglected and numerous letters have also been filed requesting their retention in office.

GEN. GREEN B. RAUM.

It is stated that while not all of these employes will not be discharged, yet is not the intention to allow them to continue to occupy positions of importance in the pension bureau. Those that are not discharged, it is said, will be reduced to subordinate places. The action in Phillips' case is understook to be only a beginning, and other changes in the same line will follow.

In his letter to the secretary requesting the dismissal of Mr. Phillips, Commisioner Raum states that he thinks such action will promote the efficiency of the department.

POSTPONED BY THE GRIP.

Another Continuance of the Celebrated Flack Divorce Case.

NEW YORK, January 18.—The Flack conspiracy case again wasted the time of the Court of Oyer and Terminer. Postponement has come to be regarded as the natural result of any attempt to bring this case to trial. On Monday last, when it was called, the affidavit by Dr. Phelps was read, stating that Joseph Meeks, the referee in the Flack divorce case, was very ill of la grippe, and an adjournment was granted. This morning a doctor appointed by the court confirmed Dr. Phelps' affidavit that Meeks was unable to appear, and the trial was adjourned for the rest of the term.

The next sitting of Oyer and Terminer will be held in April, when, if none of the other defendants get sick, there is a remote probability that this notorious case will be disposed of.

No need of despairing of sleighing or ice yet a while. The bells did not jingle till the last week in January last year, and the best ice was secured in March.

The boiler which supplies steam for the electric light machinery in Hudson, sprung a leak, one night last week, and the town was thrown back upon the tallow dip for illumination.

Representative Allen is receiving many petitions from the farmers of this district asking that a bill be passed prohibiting dealing in wheat options. Allen intends to support Butterworth on that question.

Uncle Charlie Spafford, of Manitou, made a trip across Devil's Lake recently and reports the waters calm, weather warm, and the lake above high water mark, notwithstanding the many complaints that it was all shing.—Hudson Gazette.

Mr. Thos. Alderdyce says he is tired driving in at the front door of the Exponent office and hitching to the stove pipe, and on Friday last brought us two nice hitching posts for which we return our everlasting thanks.—Brooklyn Exponent.

Kirk Sprague's barn, a mile north, on the county line, was destroyed by fire, Tuesday evening. A quantity of hay was lost, but a horse and a portion of the harness were saved. The property was insured in the Farmer's Mutual for $200.—Hudson Gazette.

Several correspondents' communications were trimmed and others left out last week. The printers had—well they had it—that is all there is about it. First arrivals were printed entire. The la g— tightened and the pruning began. Printers dropped off and letters were abandoned.—Adrian Press.

Since the Russian la grippe has become so popular a malady nearly every disease which afflicts the human human race goes under that name, and if you fail to invent some excuse for claiming it you are decidedly behind the times. Don't plead guilty of having any form of old-fashioned cold any more; that's all out of style.

The Ann Arbor Argus entered upon its 56th year last week. It has but one State contemporary which can boast of an equal age, the Detroit Free Press. It was never so prosperous or so good a newspaper as it now is under the management of Beakes & Morton, but its political principles are the same as at the beginning—strongly d ocratic.

We have on exhibition at this office a specimen of bark fourteen inches thick, which was taken from an ordinary fir tree of Washington forests. It was sent here by George Carmichael, formerly of Wheatland. The tree from which it was peeled measured ten feet in diameter, exclusive of bark, and towered 350 feet above the ground.—Addison Courier.

NOTES FROM THE NORMAL.

School opened again Jan. 7th, but we cannot say with a full attendance. Grippe had much to do with the matter.

Our loyalty to the Union is shown by the stars and stripes which float from the tall flag staff on chapel hall.

A business meeting of the Student's Christian association held Jan. 16, resulted in the election of Samuel Gies, of the class of '90, for president during the coming year.

The several societies composing the Normal Lyceum met in their respective society rooms the Friday evening following vacation, and elected the officers for the last twenty weeks term.

The preceptress, Miss King, has been detained from her duties at the Normal for several days by a severe attack of la grippe. They all have it.

A vigorous athletic association has been organized since vacation, and officers elected. This is a movement which it is hoped will result in a liberal donation from the state towards a Normal gymnasium building and grounds. It has the hearty support of the faculty and the state board. Prof. W. P. Bowen is president.

The present attendance is about two-thirds of what it should be on account of la grippe. It interferes greatly with the advancement of the classes, and the faculty have thought seriously of closing school for a few weeks. Few have been lucky enough to escape the strong grip of Mr. Grippe. We hope soon to see the trouble over and things going on as usual.

THE FARMERS' UNION.

The Union met at B. F. DePuy's Friday evening, Jan. 10, with a large attendance, notwithstanding the bad roads. In the discussion of the question, Resolved, That it would be beneficial to the farmers for the general government to loan them money at the same rate of interest that they do the national banks, an intense interest was manifest, and many facts and figures produced of vital importance to the farmer. The discussion was continued till a late hour and some of the absent ones desired it repeated at some future meeting. The next meeting will be held at Beri VanNess', Friday evening, Jan. 31, with the following program:

Music—Union.
Select Reading—Emma Brown.
Music—Mr. and Mrs. Burt Poucher.
Rec.—Mary Welliver.
Reading—George Sanford.
Chip Basket—Della Freer.
Dec.—W. F. Raymond.
Music—Florence Brothers.
Question—Resolved, That there is more misery and suffering from the use of intoxicating liquors under the present high license than there would be without any tax.
Aff.—Dr. Loree, Robt. Boyd, C. L Lowe. Neg.—H. J. Williams, W. F. Raymond, Wm. Comfort.

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

The Social Club will meet at R. B Gillespie's, Friday evening, Jan. 31, with the following program:

Inst. solo—Rhoda Benedict.
Life of Longfellow—Mrs. F. C. Rector.
Rec.—Louisa Schreder.
Song, The Bridge—Grace and Ora Gillespie.
Rec.—Fred Rector.
Review of Evangeline—Etta Coddington.
Rec.—Jennie Gillespie.
Medley of quotations from Longfellow—Geo. Camburn.
Chronicle—Mrs. Gillespie.
Question—Which is the most profit to the farmer, to sell his cream or make butter or cheese? Opened by Mrs. F. C. Rector.

MARK TWAIN'S new book, "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," is creating a stir in literary circles and adds greatly to the reputation of the great humorist. It is a keen and powerful satire on English nobility and royalty and will be greatly relished by every American. It is replete with rich humor and ludicrous situations enforced by 300 characteristic drawings by Dan Beard. The book is sold only by subscription, and agents are wanted by the publishers, R. S. Dr. C. A. Waldron has recovered sufficiently to get out on the road again.

J. S. Strong is reported on the gain. Even the grippe cannot keep him in doors long.

Frank Snedecor, who has been quite sick for the past two weeks, is able to be out again.

Landlord Patterson's smiling countenance is again seen behind the desk at the Lilley House.

Frank Swick, after a week's visit with his Tecumseh friends, returned to Kalamazoo Monday.

The themometers about town yesterday raged from 4 to 10 degrees above zero. It was several degrees warmer this morning.

Miss Cora Smith, daughter of the editor of the Adrian Press is spending the winter at Howard, Miss. Last week's Press contains a very interesting letter from her pen.

The Philadelphia Times Almanac for 1890 is fully up to the standard of past editions, and is filled with a vast amount of useful statistical information. Its election returns are unusually full and complete.

ANDERSON & Co.

We have received a copy of the seventh annual report of the bureau of labor from commissioner A. H. Heath. It seems to be the most complete report yet issued from that department and contains much valuable statistical information.

Doctors say that colder weather does not in any way diminish the number of cases of influenza, nor the severity of the attacks. "The Microbes," said a prominent physician, "are not disturbed by cold weather, and from what I can learn about the disease in foreign countries, it is the same there. It runs its course and departs; that's about the way of it."

The Detroit Journal Year Book for 1890 is at hand and is a very handy statistical compendium. It contains a full list of the officials of the United States and state goverments, late elections returns, and a large mass of curious and useful matter, seldom found in a condensed form, for ready reference. The book is not for sale, but is presented as a gift to all subscribers to the Journal.

THE HERALD has heretofore spoken about the need of improvements in the country roads. Now see this: The macadamizing of a piece of road increased the value of the adjoining farms $4.00 an acre. Some one ought to go all through the country preaching the gospel of good roads. More money should be spent in making good country roads. Not only the farmers, but business men of every class are interested in it.

The young people of the M. E. Church, will give another of their pleasant socials at the home of Wm. Heck, on Wednesday night of next week. Various devices have been prepared to contribute to the amusements of the occasion, among which will be fortune telling, when all who pay the hag who presides at this booth a half-dime, can listen to a correct revelation of their future. The ladies will also be allowed electoral franchise and can vote to their heart's content (for five cents) for the handsomest gentleman present, while the gentlemen may declare in the same way (five cents per ballot) who is the queen of beauty among the ladies present. Voters are not restricted to one vote, but may vote as long as their nickles hold out. A musical program will also be presented, under Miss Dora Grayson's management.

A SOLDIERS STORY, of the Struggle for Chattanooga, by Rev. Washington Gardner, Post Commander Dept. of Michigan, G. A. R. at Tecumseh Opera House, Wednesday evening Feb. 5th. While our nation has an existence, and history continues, the story of the Rebellion will be respected, and no one can tell it better than the eloquent Washington Gardner. He faced the dangers and endured the privations he so graphically describes, as a private, in the ranks, but by the universal verdict of his comrades and countrymen he is now a Great Captain in the field of oratory. His lecture is a spirited faithful and eloquent delineation of Camp, Siege and battle. Let the people of Tecumseh give him a rousing reception.

Joseph Jefferson's recollections of Edwin Forrest will form an interesting part of the Jefferson autobiography in the Midwinter (February) Century. Four portraits of the famous tragedians—two in character and two as he appeared off the stage—accompany the article.

Rev E. F. Voorhees, of Kalamazoo, will occupy the pulpit of the Baptist Church next Sunday morning and evening, Jan. 26. He is said to be a fine speaker.

Owing to sickness the meeting of the N. L. Farmers' club, which was to have been held Jan. 15, at W. B Keyser's was postponed until Jan. 29, at same place.

O. B. DeWolf left home last Monday for Hot Springs, Ark., where he expects to remain about three months. He will make his home with a sister who resides in that city.

Mrs. Chas. M. Graves, of Napoleon, spent a part of last week with Tecumseh and Franklin friends. Both Mr. and Mrs. Graves find a cordial welcome among their old acquaintances whenever they come this way.

The grippe is getting in its work with our township correspondents. Three of them failed this week solely from that cause, and others have shortened their articles. We expect to hear from them next week.

By an arrangement just completed with "The Voice" newspaper, we can furnish the HERALD and Voice one year for $2.00, and the magnificent premium picture, "The Angelus," will come with The Voice without extra charge.

The W. C. T. U. will hold their annual meeting at their Temperance room, Friday, Jan. 27, at 3 o'clock. Subject before the meeting—Equal suffrage. We shall be pleased to see any ladies at our rooms that day, whether they are in sympathy with us or not.
BY ORDER COM.

The item in last week's HERALD stating that Rev. F. Adkins had gone to Waukegan was not strictly in accordance with the facts. He has not been to Waukegan. He has been to Chicago and in the vicinity most of the time since he left here. He has been sick several days with the influenza, but is now better and may be home next week.

Wm. Bresie's gray team became frightened while standing near S. W. Temple's lumber yard last Friday afternoon and started east on Shawnee street at a terific gait. When near the Union school the rear wheels parted from the forward and turned several somersaults before coming to a standstill. The horses, however kept right on as if nothing had happened, and a block farther east they endeavored to split a telephone pole with the wagon tongue. The attempt was unsuccessful, but the wheels flew up to the wires and the operator probably thought all the offices on the line were calling. The horses separated but were finally captured without doing further harm.

Dr. Bennett will be at the Lilley House Wednesday, Jan. 29. Do you know why Dr. Bennett continues to keep coming in your midst every four weeks, and has been doing so for years past? Is it to beat some one? I guess not. It is because his new way of treating chronic troubles has a bottom to it and does do what it claims. It is scientific yet new, and it is worth the while of all those interested to look him up. Piles, Fissure, Fistula, no matter of what complications, or of how long standing, he gets them well. No old methods or theory either. Go see him and get acquainted. He's a gentleman. Free tickets.

THE HANDLE FACTORY.

Another new industry has just started in Tecumseh, under favorable auspices, and which bids fair to develope into a large and lucrative business. We refer to the new handle factory which is owned and operated by Martin A. Zimmerman. The building and appurtenances were completed last week and the machinery was put in operation. Yesterday we "dropped around" and inspected the new establishment, and we confess we were quite surprised to see what a fine shop had arisen in so short a time. The factory is located on the north side of the street that borders on the Mackinaw depot grounds and directly north of the freight warehouse. The main building is 32 by 8 feet in size. The main floor contains seven machines, including circular saws, lathes etc, and several more machines can be put in without crowding, as will become necessary when the business expands. The engine room is a model of convenience and usefulness. It has a brick floor and walls. The boiler, a fifty horsepower, is one of the Lansing Iron works make. The forty horse engine is from the Fulton Iron works of Detroit. A heater, force pump and boiler pump complete the outfit. The business will embrace all kinds of hard wood handles, axe helves and tool handles of all sorts. Although the machinery has only been running one week a large quantity of axe helves has already been turned out, ready for shipment. As this is the season of the year for buying timber Mr. Zimmerman wishes to gather in his season's supply at once. The wood mostly used is first and second growth hickory. Those who have timber of this kind to sell should give him a call. Mr. Zimmerman is well posted in this line of business, and has selected Tecumseh as the best location among several other towns, for his shop. We welcome him as a citizen of Tecumseh, hoping and believing that he will succeed in building up a thriving business here within the insuing decade. And we should not be at all surprised to see his business, during the next ten years, increase ten fold.

Our subscribers, whose time expires Jan. 1, should bear in mind that the thirty day limit to secure reduced rates will expire February 1. Be wise in time.

One of our compositors came down with the grippe the first of the week, and this morning the foreman failed to show up for the same reason. We have had our hands full to get the paper off to day.

By an arrangement just completed with "The Voice" newspaper, we can furnish the HERALD and the Voice one year for $2.00, and the magnificent premium picture "The Angelus" will come with the Voice without extra charge. All who wish to take a prohibition paper should accept this offer at once. This picture is in 14 oil colors, and is one of the finest reproductions ever issued.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to tender our heartfelt thanks to our friends and neighbors for their kind assistance and sympathy during the recent long illness and funeral of our beloved mother.

Rheumatism

Is undoubtedly caused by the lactic acid in the blood. This acid attacks the fibrous tissues, and causes the pains and aches in the back, shoulders, knees ankles, hips, and wrists. Thousands of people have found in Hood's Sarsaparilla a positive cure for rheumatism. This medicine, by its purifying action, neutralizes the acidity of the blood, and also builds up and strengthens the whole body.

THE ANGELUS.
Costliest Picture in the World.

This masterpiece by the great French painter, Jean Francois Millet, was purchased at auction in Paris last summer by the American Art Association of New York. The cost, $116 000 and duties, amounting in all to about $150,000, was nearly $400 a square inch, as the picture is only 18x21 inches in size. This is the highest price ever paid for a single picture.

A Beautiful Photo Etching, as represented above, the full size of the original, in which the greatest care and artistic ability have been employed to reproduce all the beauties of the painting, has been prepared specially to be sent as a free premium to every annual subscriber of the weekly edition of

SHEM'S DESCENDANTS

And Their Works to be Studied Thoroughly at Harvard.

BOSTON, January 11.—Jacob H. Schiff, of New York, has made Harvard university a gift of $10,000 for the purpose of the purchase of a Semetic collection. There is no museum of this kind in the world. Harvard has given considerable attention to Semetic studies and has courses of instruction in all the leading semetic languages and historical courses in connection with Assyrian, Hebrew and Arabic. The propriety, therefore, of the establishment of such a collection at Harvard is evident. The collection will be made soon as possible. A temporary home for it will be provided in the Peabody museum, and it is hoped a considerable number of interesting and valuable casts and other objects for study will be on hand by or before the opening of next year.

BOILER BURSTS.

A BUILDING BLOWN LIKE CHOPPED STRAW INTO THE STREET.

Five Persons Seriously and One Slightly Injured — Remarkable Escapes From Death.

CHICAGO, January 11.—A terrific boiler explosion occurred shortly after 4 o'clock in the afternoon in the basement of the John Morris stationary and printing company, No.'s 118 and 120 Monroe street, causing $20,000 damage, but no loss of life, though several of the small army of employes were seriously and many slightly hurt.

The entire front of the building, as pertains to glass and doorways, was blown like chopped strow into the street, great pieces of heavy plate glass were strewn for half a block around. So great was the force of the explosion that pices of glass were stuck into the woodwork of buildings across the street. A part of three floors in the rear of the Morris building were torn up and splintered as though by a cyclone. The cause of the explosion is not definitely known. The following is the list of seriously injured:

Charles Wilson, engineer, badly cut about the face and head; hands badly scalded; not thought to be seriously hurt.

Miss Harroll, cut about the face and head.

W. J. Hartman, Herman Swanson and J. H. Smith, badly cut by flying glass.

George Burgess, teamster, blown across the street into an open doorway receiving a bad wound in the head; seriously hurt, but not thought fatally so.

A SLICK ROBBERY.

What Happened to a City Treasurer in a Saloon.

DE PERE, WIS.,—City Treasurer Edward Vandewiele was last night the victim of a robbery to the amount of $400. At the close of the day's business he had in his possession about $1,200. This amount he was desirous of depositing in the bank, and in his anxiety to do so before the bank closed he forgot two packages of $300 and $500 respectively, which with other money was separately placed in a pocketbook. On his way home he entered a saloon on the principal business street, and passed out through the back door. While in the alley, he thought to remove the pocketbook to an inner vest pocket for greater safety. In the act of doing so he received a violent blow in the breast, the pocketbook was snatched from his hand and the robber ran rapidly down a back street. Ineffectual search was made for the robber.

BELIEVED TO BE TOGETHER.

A Grass Widow and a Mill Superintendent Thought to Have Eloped.

SCRANTON, PA., January 11.—The mysterious disappearance of Robert Rankin, of West Pittston, the superintendent of the Wyoming Valley knitting mills, has resolved itself into an elopement that is the talk of the valley. Mrs. Alice Shaw, whose husband was formerly chief rib-knitter in the mills, but who went to Cohoes, N. Y., in the early fall for better employment, went to Plymouth, but disappeared December 15. On December 15 Rankin went to New York, and since then nothing has been heard from him, although he was to return in a few days. An alleged intimacy between him and Mrs. Shaw is now reported, and the couple are no longer considered the victims of suicide or foul play. It is believed they have either crossed the ocean or gone to one of the new Western States.

ENGLAND AND PORTUGAL.

Their Differences About to Be Satisfactorily Adjusted.

LISBON, January 11.—It is semi-officially stated here that Lord Salisbury, the British prime Minister, regards the reply of Senhor Gomes, the Portugese minister of foreign affairs, to the last British note relative to the Anglo-Portugese dispatch concerning territory in East Africa, as affording the basis for an amicable settlement of the trouble. All the political groups in the Cortes concur in the opinion that the Serpa Pinto incident will not retard the two governments reaching a satisfactory agreement.

FOUR ALLEGED SENATORS

Will Ask Admission to Represent Montana.

HELENA, MONT., January 11.—W. F. Sanders and T. C. Power, who were elected United States senators by the Republican legislature, applied to Governor Toole for a certificate of election. It was refused and instead they will take to Washington a certified copy of the proceedings of the Senate and the Republican House. All four senators will proceed to Washington on Monday probably traveling in company.

RACE WAR

Between the Whites and Blacks in the Alton, Ill., Schools.

ALTON, ILL., January 11.—Another unsuccessful effort has been made to force the admission of colored children to the High school at upper Alton. Black and white children were both armed, and a conflict would have resulted seriously. A mandamus suit involving the question is now pending, and if won by the colored people they will insist upon their rights, and forcible resistance will probably be made by the whites.

GLOBE GIRDLERS.

Miss Bisland at Aden Four Days Ahead of Time.

ADEN, January 11.—The German steamer Prussian, with Miss Bisland on her trip westward around the world against Nellie Bly, arrived here Wednesday four days ahead of time. This will bring Miss Bisland to Brindisi about January 16 and to Paris next day.

A Maniac Killed.

PARKERSBURG, W. VA., January 11.—L. G. Earle, a prominent citizen of Ritchie County, was killed by his brother and a neighbor. Earle was a raving maniac, and the two in trying to bind him so as to prevent self-destruction killed him in the tussle.

CLONE STRIKES ST. LOUIS.

Five Persons Killed and Terrible Destruction of Property.

ST. LOUIS, January 13.—This city was visited by a heavy rain and thunder storm between two and shree o'clock in the afternoon, which assumed a cyclone form in a considerable portion. The track of the heaviest wind was through the central part of the city, from a southerly direction to a little east of north. Several churches and buildings were damaged and one, that of the German Lutheran church on Fifteenth and Morgan streets, was blown entirely down, almost to its base.

Many houses were ruined. Chimneys, walls, trees and telegraph poles were blown down. A report was current that great damage had been done at Venice, Ill., just across the river from the northern part of the city. All Western Union telegraph wires east and north were prostrated. The Postal Company have been unable to maintain communications with Chicago and the east, by way of Kansas City.

LATER—Three persons are reported to have been killed by falling debris on Mound street, near Tenth street, in the northern part of the city, and two are reported to have been killed at Venice, Ill. The damage done by the storm can not be estimated at this hour, but it will probably run as high as $100,000.

A dwelling house was wrecked at Tenth and Mound streets by the wind, the following persons were killed:, Mrs. Maggie Connors, aged 40; Bernard M. Connell, aged 40, and Joe Weaver, aged 8 years.

GARFIELD STATUE.

THE MEMORIAL TO THE MARTYRED PRESIDENT.

The Body Shortly to be Removed from the Vault to the Crypt of the Memorial.

CLEVELAND, O., January 13.—The Garfield statue is in the Navy Ark custom house. There is a law permitting the entry free of duty of monuments and works of art for the government building, but Sculptor Doyle wishes to establish a precedent, if possible by having it admitted purely as a work of art by an American artist without regard to the designs for its use. The committee in charge of the work have decided to change the name from Garfield monument the Garfield memorial, the original name being misleading, the structure being more like a building than the properly conceived idea of a monument. The body will be removed privately from the vault to the Crypt of the memorial before long and the dedicatory services will be on memorial day. The statue, which is eight feet tall, besides the pedestal, will be placed in the rotunda of the memorial.

WHITNEY SAYS

Cleveland Will be the Man in 1892.

WASHINGTON, January 13.—The Sunday Herald says at the reception to the New York world's fair delegation at the Arlington last night, ex-Secretary W. C. Whitney in one corner of the room held quite a reception. Everybody appeared glad to see him. The Herald reporter had a short interview with the ex-secretary. Of course Mr. Whitney was heart and soul for New York as the site for the world's fair. In reference to politics he said: "It is too early to anticipate what '92 will bring forth, but I must say the feeling in favor of ex-President Cleveland is very strong, and if it continues to increase nothing can prevent his re-nomination. If anything, I believe Mr. Cleveland is more popular with the masses today than he was in '84."

EIGHTEEN INCHES OF SNOW.

Terrible Drifts and Railway Travel Impeded.

OMAHA, January 13.—A heavy snow began falling in the morning and has continued without interruption up to ten o'clock. About eighteen inches of snow now covers the ground and a high north wind is blowing.

Reports from the interior points in the state say that the storm is very severe, that the snow is fast drifting. Railroad travel is badly impeded and it is likely that a blockade will be the result. The electric and horse cars in Omaha are at a stand still and communication with Council Bluffs is cut completely off.

RAILWAY COLLISION.

One Brakeman Killed and Several Injured.

OLEAN, N. Y., January 13.—A head end collision occurred early in the morning on the Rochester division of the Western New York & Pennsylvania Railroad, the colliding trains being the northward bound local freight 251 and the second section of through freight 286. Both engines were completely wrecked and many cars demolished. Brakeman E. D. Walker was instantly killed and other brakemen were injured.

It is stated that freight conductor B. T. Trobes, of Hinsdale, had orders for the local freight which he failed to deliver. Trobes resigned his position after the accident and has disappeared.

A DISTILLERY

Damaged at Peoria, Illinois, $165,000 by Fire.

PEORIA, ILL., January 13.—Fire started in the afternoon in the tower of the Monarch distillery and before it was gotten under control damage to the extent of $165,500 had done. Seven copper stills, the tower and meal house, engine valved at $115,000, grain worth $10,000, mal kilns valued at $2,500, machinery valued at $4,000, and 100,000 gallons of intoxicated high proof spirits valued at $15,000, were destroyed. The loss is fully covered by insurance. At the time the fire started a violent storm was in progress and the origin of the fire is attributed to lightning.

Lord Huntington Better.

LONDON, January 13.—Lord Huntington, who has been seriously ill with congestion of the lungs, is better, and his physicians state that unless an unexpected relapse occurs he will recover. It seems that the fact of the marquis' illness did not become known to the public until after crisis had been passed, hence the announcement of his prospective recovery is made almost as soon as that of his alarming illess.

A New Dodge in Mississippi.

JACKSON, MISS., January 13.—Senator Williamson has offered a bill in the Senate to amend the charter of this city. It proposes to restrict the right to vote for mayor and other officers to those who can read and write or who own $500 worth of taxable property. The bill will probably pass.

Schooner Pocahontas.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., January 13.—The schooner Pocahontas of Stanton, coal laden Baltimore to Portland, ran ashore of the rocky shouth shore of Block Island at midnight on Saturday and may prove a total loss. The crew of ten men were taken off by the life saving crew.

ESTATE OF McCLURE MINORS.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss. At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Monday the 30th day of December in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Samuel R. McClure Henry W. McClure, Martha G. McClure, and Louis C. McClure, minors.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified of William A. Brown, alleging among other things, that Henry McClure, deceased, did, in his lifetime, to wit, on the 16th day of March, A.D., 1887, duly execute and deliver to petitioner a contract in writing to convey to said petitioner, certain real estate described in said contract, and that said Henry McClure died without making the conveyance required by such contract. That the said premises described in said contract have been set off and assigned to said minors subject to said contract by said Court, that Samuel McClure is the guardian of said minors, and praying that said guardian may be authorized and directed to make and execute and deliver a conveyance of the real estate described in said contract to petitioner upon the terms and conditions therein mentioned, and that such other and further order and proceedings may be had in the premises as may be required by the statute in such case made and provided.

It is ordered, That Monday, the 27th day of January next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the next-of-kin of said minors, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

EXECUTOR'S AUCTION SALE.

AT 10 o'clock in the forenoon on the 8th day of February, A.D., 1890. I will offer for sale to the highest bidder upon the premises herein described, the home farm of the late Francis Coates, deceased, consisting of about One Hundred and Fifty-three acres on the southeast quarter of section four in township of Ridgeway in this county. The farm is divided by the W. St. L. & P. R. R., and will be offered as a whole, and also in two parcels as divided by said railroad, there being about 83 acres on the west and 70 acres on the east side side thereof. This farm lies practically in the rapidly growing village of Britton—a few rods only from the depot of two railroads, postoffice, stores, etc., and is very desirable for farming purposes about fifty acres of said premises being good timbered land, with good opportunity to divide a considerable portion into valuable village lots. Terms made known on the day of sale. All rights reserved.

MORTGAGE SALES.

DEFAULT having been made in the payment of a certain mortgage bearing date March 8, A.D., 1881, made by George L. Bidwell and his wife, Frances Bidwell, to William J. Cocker and Isabella M. Cocker; Which said mortgage was on the Ninth day of March, A. D., 1881, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee County, Michigan, in Liber 109 of mortgages on page 593; And which said mortgage was afterward, to wit, on the 12th day of April, A.D., 1881, duly assigned to Birdsey J. Bidwell, by said William J. Cocker and Isabella M. Cocker, which deed of assignment was on the 29th day of April A.D., 1889, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee County aforesaid in Liber 115 of mortgages on page 537; by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative. And whereas there is at this date claimed to be due and unpaid as principal and interest on the said mortgage the sum of Five Hundred and Ninety-two and 36-100 Dollars, and no proceedings have been instituted at law or in equity to collect the same. Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale and the statutes of the state of Michigan in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the money now as aforesaid due and owing on said mortgage, together with the interest to accrue thereon and costs and charges of this foreclosure, including an attorney fee of Twenty-five Dollars as provided by law and stipulated for in said mortgage, I shall on the Twenty-seventh day of January, A.D., 1890, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at the east front door of the court house in the city of Adrian, in said Lenawee County, (that being the place where the circuit court for said county is holden) sell at public vendue to the highest bidder all that parcel of land situate in the city of Adrian, Lenawee County, Michigan, described as follows, viz.: All the land of the parties of the first part situate on the "Flats," (so called) in said city, bounded on the easterly limit by Winter street, on the south by the northern boundary line of Remington's addition, on the west by College avenue, (or Water street, as is designated on Willitts & Bird's Wall map of 1871) and on the north by the southern boundary line of residence lots, said lots fronting on Church and Winter streets in said city, being in all Three (3) acres of land, more or less; and being same land conveyed in part to said George L. Bidwell by Andrew Clement by deeds recorded book 52, follos 248, 249, and book 52, follos 472, 473, and in part conveyed to George L. Bidwell by Langford G. Berry by deed recorded in book 52, folios 250, 251, and in part by William K. Choate by deed of record in book 53, folios 116, 117; and in part by deed from Nathan Choate, of record in book 53, folios 115, 116. Books refered to being part of Lenawee County records.

THE ODELL TYPE WRITER

$15 will buy the ODELL TYPE WRITER. Warranted to do as good work as any $100 machine.

It combines simplicity with durability—speed, ease of operation—wears longer without cost of repairs than any other machine, has no ink ribbon to bother the operator. It is neat, substantial, nickel plated—perfect and adapted to all kinds of typewriting. Like a printing press, it produces sharp, clean, legible manuscripts. Two to ten copies can be made at one writing. Editors, lawyers, ministers, bankers, manufacturers, business men, etc., cannot make a better investment for $15. Any intelligent person in a week can become a good operator, or a rapid one in two months.

$100 offered any operator who can do better work with a typewriter than that produced by the ODELL. Remember Agents and Salesmen wanted. Special inducements to dealers. For pamphlets, giving endorsements, etc., address the

CLEOPATRA.

Being an Account of the Fall and Vengeance of Harmachis, the Royal Egyptian,

The sword fell where the neck is set into the shoulder and shearing through the joints of his harness slew him, so that his knees were loosened and he sank down dead. And the third, as he came, I caught upon the point of my sword before he could strike, and it pierced him and he died. Then the last rushed on me with a cry of "Taranis!" and I, too, rushed on him, for my blood was aflame. And the women shrieked, only Cleopatra said naught, but stood and watched the unequal fray. We met and I struck with all my strength, and a mighty blow it was, for the sword shore through the iron shield and shattered there, leaving me weaponless. With a shout of triumph the guard swung up his sword and smote down upon my head, but with my shield I caught the blow. Again he smote, and again I parried; but when a third time he raised his sword I saw this might not endure, so with a cry I hurled my buckler at his face. Glancing from his shield it struck him on the breast and staggered him. Then, before he could regain his balance, I rushed in between his guard and gripped him round the middle. For a full minute the tall man and I struggled furiously, and then, so great was my strength in those days, I lifted him like a toy and dashed him down upon the marble floor in such a fashion that his bones were shattered so that he spake no more. But I could not save myself and fell upon him, and as I fell the Captain Brennus, whom I had smitten to earth with my fist, having once more found his sense, came up behind me and smote me sore upon the head and shoulders with the sword of one of those whom I had slain. But I being on the ground the blow fell not with all its weight, also my thick hair and broidered cap broke its force; and thus it came to pass that, though sore wounded, the [illegible] whole in me. But no more could [illegible]

Then the cowardly eunuchs, who [illegible] ered at the sound of blows, [illegible] ood huddled together like a herd of cattle, seeing that I was spent, threw themselves upon me, and would have slain me with their knives. But Brennus, now that I was down, would strike no more, but stood waiting. And the eunuchs had surely slain me, for Cleopatra stood like one who watches in a dream and made no sign. Already was my head dragged back and their knife points at my throat, when Charmion, rushing forward, threw herself upon me, and, calling them "Dogs!" desperately thrust her body before them in such a fashion that smite they could not. Now Brennus, with an oath, seized first one and then another and cast them from me.

"Spare his life, Queen!" he cried, in his barbarous Latin. "By Jupiter, he is a brave man! Myself felled like an ox in the shambles, and three of my boys finished by a man without armor, and taken unawares! I grudge them not to such a man! A boon, Queen! Spare his life, and give him to me!"

"Ay, spare him! spare him!" cried Charmion, white and trembling.

Cleopatra drew near and looked upon the dead and him who lay dying as I had dashed him to the ground, and on me, her lover of two days gone, whose head rested now on Charmion's white robes.

I met the Queen's glance. "Spare not!" I gasped; "va victis!" Then a flush gathered on her brow, methinks it was a flush of shame!

"Dost love this man at heart, Charmion," she said, with a little laugh, "that thou thrustest thy tender body 'twixt him and the knives of these sexless hounds!" and she cast a look of scorn upon the eunuchs.

"Nay," answered the girl, fiercely. "But I can not stand by to see a brave man murdered by such as these."

"Ay!" said Cleopatra, "he is a brave man, and gallantly he fought; never have I seen so fierce a fight even in the games at Rome! Well, I spare his life; though 'tis weak of me, womanish weak. Take him to his chamber and guard him till he is healed or—dead."

And then my brain reeled, a great sickness seized upon me, and I sank into the nothingness of swoon.

Dreams, dreams, dreams! without end and ever changing, as for years and years I seemed to toss upon a sea of agony. And through them a vision of a dark-eyed woman's tender face and the touch of a white hand soothing me to rest. Visions, too, of a Royal countenance bending at times over my rocking bed—a countenance that I could not grasp, but whose beauty flowed through my fevered veins and was a part of me—visions of childhood and of the Temple towers of Abouthis, and of the white-haired Amenembat, my father—ay! and an ever-present vision of that dread hall in Amenti, and of the small altar and the Spirits clad in flame! There I seemed to wander everlastingly, calling on the Holy Mother, whose memory I could not grasp; calling ever and in vain! For no cloud descended upon the altar, only from time to time the voice pealed aloud: "Strike out the name of Harmachis, child of Earth, from the living Book of Her, who Was and Is and Shall Be! Lost! lost! lost!"

And then another voice would answer:

"Not yet! not yet! Repentance is at hand; strike not out the name of Harmachis, child of Earth, from the living Book of Her, who Was and Is and Shall Be! By suffering may sin be wiped away!"

I woke to find myself in my own chambee in the tower of the palace. So weak was I that I scarce could lift my hand, and lift seemed but to flutter in my breast as flutters a dying dove. I could not turn my head; I could not stir; yet in my heart there was a sense of rest, and of dark trouble done. The light hurt my eyes; I shut them; and as I shut them, heard the sweep of a woman's robes upon the stair, and a swift, light step that well I knew. It was that of Cleopatra!

She entered, and her footfall drew nigh. I felt her come! Every pulse in my poor frame beat an answer to her footfall, and all my mighty love and hate rose from the darkness of my death-like sleep and rent me in their struggle! She leaned over me; her ambrosial breath played upon my face. I could hear the beating of her heart! Lower she leaned, till at last her lips touched me softly on the brow. "Poor man!" I heard her murmur. "Poor, weak, dying man! Fate hath been hard to thee! Too good wert thou to be the sport of such a one as I, the pawn that I must move in my play of policy! Ah! Harmachis! thou shouldst have ruled the game! They could give thee learning, those plotting priests; but knowledge of mankind they could not give thee, nor fence thee 'gainst the march of Nature's law. And thou didst love me with all thy heart—ah! well I know it! Man like, thou didst love the eyes that, as a pirate's lights, beckoned thee to shipwrecked ruin, and didst hang doting on the lips that lied thy heart away and call thee 'slave'! Well, the game was fair, for thou wouldst have slain me; and yet I grieve! So thou dost die! and this is my farewell to thee! Never may we meet again on earth; and perchance, 'tis well; for who knows, when my hour of tenderness is past, how I might deal with thee didst thou live? Thou dost die, they say—those learned, long-faced fools, who, if they let thee die, shall pay the price! And where, then, shall we meet again when my last throw is thrown? We shall be equal there, in the kingdom that Osiris rules. A little time, a few years—perchance to-morrow, and we shall meet; then, knowing all I am, how wilt thou greet me there? Nay, here, as there, still must thou love me; for injuries can not touch the immortality of such a love as thine! Contempt alone can, like acid, eat away the strong love of noble hearts and reveal the pitiful truth in its poor nakedness. Still must thou love me, Harmachis; for whatever my sins, yet am I great and set above thy scorn. Would that I could have loved thee as thou lovest me! Almost did I so when thou slewest those guards; and yet, not quite.

"Oh, what a fenced city is my heart, that none can take it, and e'en when I throw wide open the doors no man may win its citadel! Oh, to put away this loneliness and lose me in another's soul. Oh, for a year, a month, an hour to quite forget policy, peoples and my pomp of place, and be but a loving woman! Harmachis, fare thee well! Go join Great Julius whom thine art called up from death before me, and take Egypt's greetings to him. Ah, well I fooled thee; and I fooled Cæsar—perchance before 'tis done fate will find me and myself I shall be fooled! Harmachis, fare thee well!"

She turned to go, and as she turned I heard the sweep of another dress and the light fall of another woman's foot.

"Ah! 'tis thou, Charmion. Well, for all thy watching, the man dies."

"Ay," she answered, in a voice thick with grief. "Ay, O Queen, so say the physicians. Forty hours hath he been in stupor so deep that at times his breath could hardly lift this tiny feather's weight, and scarce could my ear, placed against his breast, take notice of the rising of his heart. For ten long days I now have watched him day and night, till mine eyes stare wide open with want of sleep, and for faintness, scarce can I keep myself from falling. And of all my labor this is the end! The blow of that accursed Brennus has done its work, and Harmachis dies!"

"Love counts not its labor, Charmion, nor can it weigh its tenderness in the scale of purchase. That which it hath it gives, and craves for more to give and give, till the soul's infinity be drained. Dear to thy heart are these nights of watching; sweet to thy weary eyes is that sad sight of strength brought so low that it hangs upon thy weakness like a babe unto its mother's breast! For, Charmion, thou dost love this man who loves not thee, and now that he is helpless thou canst pour thy passion o'er the unanswering darkness of his soul and cheat thyself with dream of what yet might be!"

"I love him not, as thou hast proof, O Queen! How can I love one who would have slain thee, who art as my heart's sister! 'Tis for pity that I nurse him."

She laughed a little as she answereed: "Pity is love's own twin. Wondrous wayward are the paths of woman's love, and thou hast shown thine strangely, that I know. But the more high the love the more deep the gulf wherein it can fall—ay, and thence soar again to heaven, once more to fall! Poor woman, thou art thy passions' plaything; now tender as the morning sky, and now, when jealousy grips thy heart, more cruel than the sea. Well, thus are we made. Soon, after all this troubling naught will be left thee but tears, remorse and memory."

And she went forth.

CHAPTER XXI.

OF THE TENDER CARE OF CHARMION; OF THE HEALING OF HARMACHIS; OF THE SAILING OF THE FLEET OF CLEOPATRA FOR CILICIA; AND OF THE SPEECH OF BRENNUS TO HARMACHIS.

CLEOPATRA went, and for awhile I lay silent, gathering up my strength to speak. But Charmion came and stood over me, and I felt a great tear fall from her dark eyes upon my face, as the first heavy drop of rain falls from a stormy cloud.

"Thou goest," she whispered—"thou goest fast whither I may not follow! O Harmachis, how gladly would I give my life for thine!"

Then at length I opened my eyes, and as best I could I spoke:

"Restrain thy grief, dear friend," I said, "I live yet; and, in truth, I feel as though new life did gather in my breast!"

"Thou livest!" she cried, throwing herself upon her knees beside my couch. "Thou livest—and I thought thee gone! Thou art come back to me! Oh! what say I? How foolish is a woman's heart! 'Tis this long watching! Nay; sleep and rest thee, Harmachis!—why dost thou talk? Not one more word, I command thee, straightly! Oh, where is the draught left by that long-bearded fool? Nay, thou shalt have no draught! There, sleep, Harmachis; sleep!" and she crouched down at my side and laid her cold hand upon my brow, murmuring: "Sleep, sleep, sleep!"

And when I woke up there still she was, but the lights of dawn were peeping through the casement. There still she knelt, one hand upon my forehead, and her head, in all its disarray of curls, resting upon her outstretched arm. "Charmion," I whispered, "have I slept?"

Instantly she was wide awake and gazing on me with tender eyes. "Yea, thou hast slept, Harmachis."

"How long, then, have I slept?"

"Nine hours."

"And thou hast held thy place there, at my side, for nine long hours?"

"Yea, it is naught; I also have slept—I feared to waken thee if I stirred."

"Go rest thee," I said. "It shames me to think of this thing. Go rest thee, Charmion!"

"Vex not thyself," she answered—"see, I will bid a slave watch thee and to wake me if thou needst aught; I sleep there, in the outer chamber. Peace—I go!" and she strove to rise, but, so cramped was she, fell straightway on the floor.

Scarce can I tell the sense of shame that filled me when I saw her fall. Alas! I could not stir to help her.

"It is naught," she said; "move not, I did but catch my foot. There!" and she rose, again to fall—"a pest upon my awkwardness! why—I must be sleeping!—'tis well now, I'll send the slave," and she staggered thence like one o'ercome with wine.

And after that, once more I slept, for I was very weak. When I woke it was afternoon, and I craved for food, which Charmion brought me.

I ate! "Then I die not?" I said.

"Nay," she answered, with a toss of her head, "thou wilt live. In truth, I did waste my pity on thee."

"And thy pity did save my life," I said, wearily, for now I remembered.

"It is naught," she answered, carelessly. "After all, thou art my cousin; also, I love nursing; 'tis a woman's trade. Like enough I had done as much for any slave. Now, too, that the danger is past, I leave thee."

"Better hadst thou done to let me die, Charmion," I said after awhile, "for life to me can now be naught but one long shame. Tell me, then, when sails Cleopatra for Cilicia?"

"In twenty days she sails, and with such pomp and glory as Egypt hath never seen. Of a truth, I can not guess where she has found the gold to gather in this store of splendor, as a husbandman gathers his rich fruits."

But I, knowing whence came the wealth, groaned in bitterness of spirit, and made no answer.

"Goest thou also, Charmion?" I asked, presently.

"Ay, I and all the Court. Thou, too—thou goest."

"I go! Nay, why is this?"

"Because thou art her slave, and must march in gilded chains behind her chariot; because she fears to leave thee here in Khem; because it is her will, and there is an end."

"Charmion, can I not escape?"

"Escape, thou poor sick man! Nay, how canst thou escape? E'en now most strictly art thou guarded. And if thou didst escape, whither wouldst thou fly? There's not an honest man in Egypt but would spit on thee in scorn!"

Once more I groaned in spirit, and being so weak I felt the tears roll a-down my cheek.

"Weep not!" she said, hastily, and turning her face aside. "Be a man, and brave these troubles out. Thou hast sown, now must thou reap; but after harvest the waters rise and wash away the roots, and then once more comes seed time. Perchance, yonder in Cilicia, a way may be found when once more thou art strong whereby thou mayst fly—if in truth thou canst bear thy life apart from Cleopatra's smile; then in some far land must thou dwell till these things are forgotten. And now my task is done, so fare thee well. At times will I come and see that thou needest naught."

So she went, and thenceforward was I nursed, and that skillfully, by the physician and two women slaves; and as my wound healed so my strength came back to me, slowly at first, then most swiftly. In four days from that time I left my couch, and in three more I could walk an hour in the palace gardens; another week and I could read and think, though I went no more to Court. And at length one afternoon Charmion came and bade me make ready, for in two days would the fleet sail, first for the coast of Syria, and thence to the gulf of Issus and Cilicia.

Thereon, with all formality, and in writing, I craved leave of Cleopatra that I might be left, urging that my health was even now so feeble that I could not travel. But in answer a message was sent to me that I must come. And so on the appointed day I was carried on a litter down to the boat, and together with that very soldier who had cut me down, the Captain Brennus, and others of his troop (who, indeed, were sent to guard me), we rowed aboard the vessel where she lay at anchor with the rest of the great fleet. For Cleopatra was voyaging as though to war in much pomp, and escorted by a mighty fleet of ships, whereof her galley, built like a house and lined throughout with cedar and silken hangings, was the most beautiful and costly that the world has ever seen. But on this vessel I went not, and, therefore, it chanced that I saw not Cleopatra nor Charmion till we landed at the mouth of the River Cydnus. The signal being made, the fleet set sail; and the wind being fair, on the evening of the second day we came to Joppa. Thence we sailed slowly with contrary winds up the coast of Syria, making Cæsarea and Ptolemais and Tyrus and Berytus and past Lebanon's white brow crowned with his crest of cedars, on to Heraclea and across the Gulf of Issus to the mouth of Cydnus. And ever as we journeyed the strong breath of the sea brought back my health, till at length, save for a line of white upon my head, where the sword had fallen, was I almost as I had been. And one night, as we drew near Cydnus, while Brennus and I sat alone together on the deck, his eye fell upon the white mark his sword had made, and he swore a great oath by his heathen gods. "An' thou hadst died, lad," he said, "methinks I could never again have held up my head! Ah! that was a coward stroke, and shamed am I to think that I should have struck it, and thou on the ground and with thy back to me! Knowest thou that when thou didst lie 'twixt life and death, every day I came to ask tidings of thee! and I swore by Taranis that if thou didst die I'd turn my back upon that soft palace life and then away for the North."

"Nay, trouble not, Brennus," I answered; "it was thy duty."

"Mayhap! but there are duties that a brave man should not do—nay, not at the bidding of any Queen who ever ruled in Egypt! Thy blow had dazed me or I had not struck. What is it, lad!—art in trouble with this Queen of ours? Why art thou dragged a prisoner upon this pleasure party? Knowest thou that we are strictly charged that if thou dost escape our lives shall pay the price?"

"Ay, in sore trouble, friend," I answered; "ask me no more."

"Then, being of the age thou art—there's a woman in it, that swear I—and, perchance, though I am rough and foolish, I might make a guess. Look thou, lad, what sayest thou? I am a-weary of the service of Cleopatra and this hot land of deserts and of luxury, that sap a man's strength and drain his pocket; and so are others whom I wot of. What sayest thou; let's take one of these unwieldy vessels and away to the North? I'll lead thee to a better land than Egypt—a land of lake and mountain and great forests of sweet-scented pine; ay, and find thee a girl fit to mate with, mine own niece—a strong girl, and tall, with wide blue eyes, and long, fair hair, and arms that would crack thy ribs were she to hug thee! Come, what sayest thou? Put away the past, and away for the bonny North, and be a son to me."

For a moment I thought, and then sadly shook my head; for though sorely was I tempted to be gone, I knew that in Egypt lay my fate, and my fate I might not fly.

"It may not be, Brennus," I answered. "Fain would I that it might be, but I am bound by a chain of destiny which I can not break, and in the land of Egypt I must live and die."

"As thou wilt, lad," said the old warrior. "Dearly should I have loved to marry thee among my people and make a son of thee. At the least, remember that while I am here thou hast Brennus for a friend. And one thing more: beware of that beauteous Queen of thine, for, by Taranis, perchance an hour may come when she will hold that thou knowest too much, and then—" and he drew his hand across his throat. "And now good night; a cup of wine, then to sleep, for to-morrow the foolery—"

[Here several lengths of the second roll of papyrus are so broken as to be indecipherable. They seem to have been descriptive of Cleopatra's voyage up the Cydnus to the city of Tarsus.]

And [the writing continues] to those who could take joy in such things the sight must, indeed, have been a gallant one. For the stern of our galley was covered with sheets of beaten gold, the sails were of the scarlet of Tyre, and the oars of silver dipped in the water to the measure of music. And there in the center of the vessel, beneath an awning ablaze with gold embroidery, lay Cleopatra, attired as the Roman Venus (and surely Venus was not more fair!), in a thin robe of whitest silk, bound in beneath her breast with a golden girdle delicately graven o'er with scenes of love. All about her were little rosy boys, chosen for their beauty, and clad in naught save downy wings strapped upon their shoulders, and on their backs Cupid's bow and quiver, who fanned her with fans of plumes. And upon the vessel's decks, handling the cordage that was of silken web, and softly singing to the sound of harps and the beat of oars, stood no rough sailors, but women lovely to behold, some clad as Graces and some as Nereids—that is, scarce clad at all, save in their scented hair. And behind the couch, with drawn sword, stood Brennus, in splendid armor and winged helm of gold; and by him others—I among them—in robes richly worked, and knew that I was indeed a slave! On the high poop also burned golden censers filled with the costliest incense, whereof the fragrant steam hung in little clouds about our wake.

Thus, as in a dream of luxury, followed by many ships, we glided on toward the wooded slopes of Taurus, at whose foot lay that ancient city Tarshish. And as we came the people gathered on the banks and ran before us shouting: "Venus is risen from the sea! Venus hath come to visit Bacchus!" We drew near to the city, and all its people—every one who could walk or be carried—crowded down in thousands to the docks, and with them came the whole army of Antony, so at length the Triumvir was left alone upon the judgment seat.

With them came Dellius, the false tongued, fawning and bowing, and in the name of Antony gave the "Queen of Beauty" greeting, bidding her to a feast that Antony had made ready. But she made high answer, and said: "Forsooth, 'tis Antony who should wait on us; not we on Antony. Bid the noble Antony to our poor table this night, else we dine alone."

Dellius went, bowing to the ground; the feast was made ready; and then at last I set eyes on Antony. Clad in purple robes he came, a great man and beautiful to see, set in the stout prime of life, with bright eyes of blue, and curling hair, and features cut sharply as a Grecian gem. For great he was of form and royal of mien, and with an open countenance, whereon his thoughts were writ so clear that all might read them; only the weakness of the mouth belied the power of the brow. He came companioned by his generals, and when he reached the couch whereon Cleopatra lay he stood astonished, gazing on her with wide-opened eyes. She, too, gazed on him earnestly; I saw the red blood run up beneath her skin, and a great pang of jealousy seized upon my heart. And Charmion, who saw all beneath her downcast eyes, saw this also and smiled. But Cleopatra spoke no word, only she stretched out her white hand for him to kiss; and he, saying no word, took her hand and kissed it.

"Behold, noble Antony!" she said at last in her voice of music, "thou hast called me, and I am come."

"Venus has come," he answered in his deep notes, and still holding his eyes fast fixed upon her face. "I called a woman; a Goddess hath risen from the deep!"

"To find a God to greet her on the land," she laughed with ready wit. "Well, a truce to compliments, for being on the earth e'en a Venus is a-hungered. Noble Antony, thy hand."

The trumpets blared, and through the bowing crowd, Cleopatra, followed by her train, passed hand in hand with Antony to the feast.

CHAPTER XXII.

OF THE FEAST OF CLEOPATRA; OF THE MELTING OF THE PEARL; OF THE SAYING OF HARMACHIS; AND OF CLEOPATRA'S VOWS OF LOVE.

ON THE third night once more was the feast prepared in the hall of the great house that had been set aside to the use of Cleopatra, and on this night its splendor was greater even than on the nights before. For the twelve triclinia (couches) that were set about the table were embossed with gold, and those of Cleopatra and Antony were of gold set with jewels. The dishes also were all of gold set with jewels, the walls were hung with purple cloths sewn with gold, and on the floor were strewn fresh roses ankle deep, covered with a net of gold, that as the slaves trod them sent up their perfume. Once again was I bid to stand with Charmion and Iras and Merira behind the couch of Cleopatra, and, like a slave, from time to time call out the hours as they flew. And there being no help, wild at heart I went; but this I swore—it should be for the last time, for I could not bear that shame. For though I would not yet believe what Charmion told me—that Cleopatra was about to become the love of Antony—yet could I no more endure this ignominy and torture. For from Cleopatra now I had no words save such words as a Queen speaks to her slave, and methinks it gave her dark heart pleasure to torment me.

FAVORED NEW YORK.

THE COMMITTEE ON WORLD'S FAIR MATTERS APPOINTED.

In Selecting the Members, Speaker Butler Has Evidently Put the Great Event of 1892 in New York City—New Bills Introduced.

WASHINGTON, January 20.—Among the bills introduced in the House today was one by Butterworth, levying a tax on persons dealing in options on grain, meats, cotton and other products, with the purpose of preventing gambling in options. It fixes the tax at twenty cents per bushel on grain handled or professed to be handled in options, and five cents per pound on meats, cotton, etc. Also a bill admitting the Indian Territory as a state; also a bill based upon Secretary Windom's recommendations for the issue of paper currency based upon silver bullion deposited with the treasury department. The value of bullion to be fixed by market prices on gold basis.

The speaker announced the special committee on

as follows; Candler, of Massachusetts, chairman; Belden and Flower, New York; Springer and Hitt, Illinois; Hatch and Frank, Missouri; Bowden, Virginia, and Wilson, West Virginia. This is intended to give two members for each city, with the chairman from a state which has no ambition for itself in exposition matters.

The House then took up the Silcott matter, on motion of Mr. Adams to reconsider the vote by which the bill for the payment of salaries was rejected.

Springer Tries to Head It Off.

WASHINGTON, January 20.—Springer offered a resolution providing that on Thursday next the roll shall be called in the House for a vote by members as to choice of place of holding the world's fair, and each member shall name his choice of place and the roll call shall continue until one city shall receive a majority of the votes, after which a committee shall be appointed to prepare a bill.

The Senate.

WASHINGTON, January 20.—The committee reported favorably a bill to provide a temporary government for Oklahoma and for the admission of Wyoming. Several bills and memorials were introduced regarding the free coinage of silver. After the introduction of a few private measures and the close of the morning hour, Mr. Pasco, in pursuance of the notice given last week, proceeded to speak in regard to the federal election laws as proposed in the president's message.

RIDDLEBERGER,

The Old Virginia Readjuster, Said to be Dying.

WASHINGTON, January 20.—In a private letter received here, a neighbor and friend of ex-Senator Riddleberger writes: "Have you heard that Mr. Riddleberger is very low? His physicians have little or no hope that he can ever get up again, and he may go at any moment."

SENATOR RIDDLEBERGER.

Senator Riddleberger has been drinking very hard of late, and before he left the Senate, it was a rare thing for him to be completely out of the influence of liquor. His friends hoped when he got away from Washington that he might be more temperate. His constitution seemed to be undermined, and the man is worn out.

CUT FROM THE BRAIN.

A Remarkable Surgical Operation Made with Success.

PITTSBURG, PA., January 20.—A wonderful and successful surgical operation was performed here yesterday upon a twelve year old daughter of B. F. Cole, of the Westinghouse company. The little girl fell when she was nine years old and struck her head, making a contussion. That healed, but she has been subject to convulsions ever since. The attending physician concluded that there was a tumor on the brain at the original point of concussion, and so giving her an anesthetic, he cut a portion of the skull bone out and cut off the tumor there disclosed. It was larger than a hen egg. The skull bone was put back and the little girl is doing very well.

BLOOD POISONING

ST. PAUL, January 20.—Miss Helen Luverne died yesterday from blood poisoning, caused by the coloring matter in a kid glove. An abrasion in the skin of her hand became much inflamed after wearing a new pair of gloves, and the swelling increased until symptoms of blood poisoning became plain.

ANOTHER SENATOR SICK.

Senator Richards Very Ill and Threatened With Pneumonia.

IRONTON, O., January 20.—Senator J. K. Richards of this city is very sick with threatened pneumonia, consequent upon an attack of the grippe. He was recovering very nicely, but ventured out too soon and caught cold.

WILL BUILD A BIG HOUSE.

Senator-Elect Brice Will Erect a Mansion at Lima.

LIMA, O., January 20.—Senator-elect Calvin S. Brice left here for New York last night, where he will remain a week, attending to his affairs there, and then return here and commence the building of an elegant mansion.

Fatal Accident on the M. P. R. R.

KANSAS CITY, January 20.—A Missouri Pacific freight train was derailed at New Haven last night. The engine and five freight cars were damaged ten thousand dollars. The engineer and fireman were badly injured. The Missouri Pacific passenger train is delayed three hours.

Heavy Mortality in New York.

NEW YORK, January 20.—The number of deaths in the city during the 26 hours ending at noon was 146, two less than the number reported the preceding 24 hours. Thirty of the deaths were from pneumonia, and twelve from influenza complicated with other diseases.

Big Anthracite Coal Trade.

POTTSVILLE, PA., January 20.—The amount of anthracite coal, domestic sizes, at Tidewater at the close of the week was about one and one-fourth millions of tons, the largest quantity of hard coal ever reported at the wharves in the history of the coal trade.

Henry Mason Has Pneumonia.

BOSTON, January 20.—Henry Mason, the president of the Mason and Hamlin Organ company, is seriously ill from pneumonia at his residence here.

THE SILVER BILL.

THE ADMINISTRATION MEASURE PREPARED

By Secretary Windom and Embodying the Views Proposed in His Annual Report—A Document of Absorbing Interest.

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 20.—The following is the text of the Administration bill, prepared by Secretary Windom, embodying the silver measure prepared in his annual report, and which will be introduced in both the House and the Senate, during the coming week, and probably tomorrow. A bill authorizing the issue of treasury notes on deposits of silver and bullion.

Be it enacted, etc., That any owner of silver bullion, the product of the mines of the United States, of ore smelted or refined in the United States, may deposit the same at any coinage mint, or at any assay office in the United States that the secretary of the treasury may designate and receive therefore treasury notes here-in-after provided for, equal at the date of deposit to the net value of such silver at the market price, such price to be determined by the secretary of the treasury under rules and regulations prescribed, based upon the price current in the leading silver markets of the world; but no deposit consisting in whole or in part of silver bullion or foreign silver coins imported into this country, or bars resulting from melted or refined foreign silver coins, shall be received under the provisions of this act.

Section 2. That the secretary of the treasury shall cause to be prepared treasury notes in such amounts as may be required for the purpose of the above section, and in such form and denominations as he may prescribe: Provided, that no note shall be of a denomination less than one dollar nor more than one thousand dollars.

Section 3. That the note issued under this act shall be receivable for customs, taxes and all public dues, and when received into the treasury may be reissued, and such notes ween held by any national bank, shall be counted as part of its lawful reserve.

Section 5. That the notes issued under the provisions of this act shall be redeemed upon demand at the treasury of the United States, or at the office of the assistant treasurer of the United States, by the issue of a certificate of deposit for the sum of the note so deposited, payable at one of the mints of the United States in an amount of silver bullion equal in value, on the date of said certificate, to the number of dollars stated therein, at the market price of silver to be determined as provided in section one; or such notes may be redeemed in gold coin, at the option of the government: provided, that upon demand of the holder such notes shall be redeemed in silver dollars.

Section 5. That when the market price of silver, as determined by the secretary of the treasury, shall exceed one dollar for 371.25 grains of pure silver, it shall be the duty of the secretary of the treasury to refuse to receive deposits of silver bullion for the purpose of this act.

Section 6. That it shall be lawful for the secretary of the treasury, with the approval of the president of the United States, to suspend temporarily the receipt of silver bullion for treasury notes at any time when he is satisfied that, through combinations or speculative manipulation of the market, the price of silver is arbitrary or ficticious.

Section 7. That the silver bullion deposited under this act, represented by treasury notes which have been redeemed in gold coin or in silver dollars, may be coined into standard silver dollars or any other denomination of silver coin now authorized by law, for the purpose of replacing the coin used in the redemption of the notes.

Section 8. That so much of the act of February 28, 1878, entitled "An act to authorize the coinage of the standard silver dollar and to restore its legal tender character," as requiring the monthly purchase and coinage into silver dollars of not less than $2,000,000, nor more than $4,000,000 worth of silver bullion, is hereby repealed.

Section 9. Than any gain of seigniorage arising from the coinage, which may be executed under the provisions of this act shall be accounted for and paid into the treasury as provided by existing law.

Section 10. That silver bullion received under the provisions of this act shall be subject to the requirements of existing law, and the regulations of the mint's service, governing the methods of receipt, determining the amount of charges or deductions, if any to be made.

Section 11. That nothing in this act shall be construed to prevent the purchase from time to time as may be required, of silver bullion for the subsidiary silver coinage.

Section 12. That a sum to carry out the provisions of this act is hereby appropriated out of any money in the treasury not otherwise appropriated.

Section 13. That all acts and parts of acts in consistent with this act, shall be repealed.

Section 14. That this act shall take effect thirty days from after passed.

Crazy Girl on Her Travels.

NEW YORK, January 20.—A young girl, comfortably dressed but evidently out of her mind, was a passenger on the Cincinnati express train which arrived at the New York Grand Central depot in the morning. The girl gives her name as Goldie Berstein and says she is 18 years of age, and that she left the home of her uncle in Ladonia, Tex., on Wednesday last, to visit her uncle in this city. Pinned to her dress was a paper bearing the address of "L. L. Langleben, No. 50 (or 55) Eldridge street, New York." In her trunk were found several envelopes bearing the card of Crossman Brothers, Ladonia, Fanein county, Tex. Her supposed relative cannot be found in Eldridge street, and the girl. wto is being cared for by the police, will be turned over to the commissioners of charity unless her uncle is found today.

Shot Dead.

BALTIMORE, January 20.—Arthur De Atley, a saloon keeper, was fatally shot early this morning by John J. Eagan, a St. Louis drummer. Eagan entered a saloon with several friends and after taking drinks asked for a dice box, which was refused. A row followed, when the men were ordered out. Refusing to go, De Atley started from behind the bar to close the place, when Eagan fired at him with the result stated. Eagan fled, but was captured later.

Barrymore Arrested.

NEW YORK, January 20.—Maurice Barrymore, the actor, was arrested last night at Broadway A. Thirtyfirst street, charged by an officer with disorderly conduct, refusing to move on and using vile language. He made a counter charge against the officer of using vile language and interfering with a peaceable citizen. He was bailed out, and in court he [illegible]

COLLISION.

Awful Accident on the C., H. & D. Road

AT WINTON PLACE, SEVEN MILES FROM CINCINNATI.

Three Killed and Two Badly Injured—Three Cars Caught Fire and Burned Up—Vestibule Train Runs Into an Accommodation.

CINCINNATI, January 18.—A collision occurred on the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad near Winton Place, Ohio, last evening. Four persons have been taken out dead. Several cars are now burning and it is thought ten or fifteen people have been burned. Particulars later.

Full Particulars.

CINCINNATI, January 18.—The vestibule train from Chicago on the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton railroad due here at 7:10 p. m. ran into the Glendale accommodation at College Hill Junction at ten minutes past seven last night. Conductor Copely and a brakeman, whose name was not learned, were instantly killed. A passenger supposed to be John Wilson, superintendent of the Metropolitan Insurance company, was also killed. Two passengers were badly injured. The engineer of the express supposed that the accommodation was out of the "Block" at the rate they were running, and he had barely time to reverse his engine and, with his fireman, jump to the ground, before they crashed into the rear of the train preceding them. They were badly shaken up, but otherwise uninjured. Three cars caught fire and were burned up.

LATER.—The names of the dead are: James Staley, baggage-master, of Dayton; William Plaintz, plumber, of Carthage; F. W. Witherbee, conductor, of Toledo; Louis Keller, hardware merchant, of Winton place; John Wilson, insurance agent, of 227 Main street, lived at Winton place.

The passengers injured were all on the commuter train. None of the cars of the express were telescoped, as it was a vestibuled train.

General Superintendent Neilson of the road, at Cincinnati, gave out the following statement concerning the accident: "Train 77, the Glendale accommodation, was made up of five cars, a combination baggage and smoking car being the last of the train, and about thirty passengers were on board this train, which is due at Cincinnati at 7:05 p. m."

The vestibuled train, known as No. 31, which left Chicago yesterday morning and was due here at 7:10 p. m., was composed of a baggage car, smoker, day coach and combination dining and chair car. The train was pulled by the "Strong" engine, which has been running over the road between here and Indianapolis pulling the vestibule train for several weeks. "The Strong people," said Mr. Neilson, "have a special engineer, George McGee, they put in charge of their engine. But since it has been running over the C., H. & D. road, I have not allowed it to go out, except in charge of either Engineer Cookley or Cook, both old and experienced C., H. & D. engineers. The Strongs' special engineer has, however, always accompanied the engine on its trips."

Yesterday the engine was in charge of Engineer William Cookley, with McGee as a companion. When Cookley saw that the "Strong" engine would most certainly run into the rear of train 77 he slacked up as much as possible, then hung out of the window of the cab and dropped to the ground, and was injured by so doing, but not seriously, while McGee, who stayed in the engine, escaped without the slightest injury.

AN OLD-TIME EDITOR DIES.

Simeon Whitely Goes to His Eternal Rest at Racine, Wis.

RACINE, WIS., January 18.—Simeon Whitely, a well known and highly respected citizen of this city, died of paralysis. He was born in England and came to this country with his parents in 1842. In 1850 he entered the printing business on the Commercial Advertiser of this city, and afterward became connected with the Watertown Chronicle, the Old Oaken Bucket at Madison, and the Aurora (Ill.) Guardian. He took an active part in Illinois politics, and it is said to have been largely due to his efforts that Abraham Lincoln was nominated for the presidency. When Sumpter was fired on he enrolled as a private in a battalion formed for the immediate defense of Washington, under Cassius M. Clay. In 1863 he accepted the agency to the Grand River Ute Indians, and removed to Denver. He afterward engaged in the publication of the Commonwealth, the oldest daily paper in Colorado. When Colorado adopted the constitution Mr. Whitely returned to Racine.

TRANSGRESSOR'S WAY HARD.

A Bank Thief Captured Two Years After He Ran Away.

NEW YORK, January 18.—Chief Brooks, of the United States secret service, has captured Henry H. Jackson, formedly paying teller at the United States sub-treasury, who stole $10,000 from the funds under his charge on October 13, 1887. Information was received at the sub-treasury that Jackson was in this city, and Chief Brooks' detectives were placed on his track.

Jackson was arrested at the Allman house and was taken to the chief's office in the postoffice building, where he was fully identified. A committment was then made out under direction of the United States district attorney, and Jackson will be held to await the action of the grand jury.

CONTRACTS.

President Young Announces the Following Confirmations.

WASHINGTON, January 18.—Pres. Young, of the National league, has announced the following additions to contracts of base ball players: W. R. Hamilton, with Philadelphia; Thomas J. Tucker, with Boston; C. J. Parsons, W. D. Smalley and W. W. Veach, with Cleveland; P. J. Murphy and Mike Welch, with New York; P. H. Ehret, with Louisville; John O'Connor, with Columbus; T. C. Nicholson, E. E. Rogers, Harry Sage, J. L. Sneed, F. C. Smith, W. J. Vandyke and P. W. Werden, with Toledo; Albert Satouches and Joe Dowie, with Hamilton.

Notification was also given of the release by the Toledo club of Taylor Shaler.

200,000 Acres Sold.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., January 18.—Two hundred thousand acres timber land in southeast Arkansas, belonging to the Iowa & Arkansas Land Company has been sold to Chicago capitalists for $5 per acre.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

The Coming Event and Full List of Subjects.

The coming Farmers' Insitute, to be held at Adrian, January 29, 30 and 31, bids fair to be a meeting of uncommon profit and interest. The program is progressing finely, and a good list of live debatable questions and subjects are arranged. At present we are able to give the following to the public, and names of those who have promised, by letter or silence, to respond. Next week's papers will contain a full programme. Let our thinking people begin now to formulate their ideas upon these topics, that when the time comes a rich feast may be had There will be an aim to have some appointed to lead in discussion following each paper.

FARM, FARM STOCK AND BUILDINGS.

THE HERALD FOR 1890.

On the 25th day of May last the HERALD entered upon the fortieth year of its publication. The 15th day of November last completed fifteen years under its present management, and we can truthfully say that the paper never had more friends or truer ones in Northern Lenawee than it has today. But, like Cæsar, we are ambitious. We aim for a larger list and a wider field to swing in, and our terms for 1890 have been adjusted with that purpose in view.

OFFER NO. ONE.

We have made arrangements with that wide awake illustrated farm magazine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct to the address of any of our subscribers who will pay up all arrearages and a year in advance. The subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. It costs you nothing. The two papers at our full rate of $1.50 per year.

OFFER NO. TWO.

The modern magazine may be taken as embodying the best literature of the world, as the magazine editor pays the highest prices to novelists, scientists, statesmen, soldiers and even kings and princes for the best they can furnish in the literary line.

You can obtain the Cosmopolitan, which gives you in a year nearly fourteen hundred pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including six hundred pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point of interest and execution at its regular price, only $2 50, and the HERALD free.

OFFER NO. THREE.

Ropp's Commercial Calculator is a practical arithmetic for practical purposes. It contains a large variety of useful, accurate and convenient tables, together with simple, short and practical methods for rapid calculations. Any subscriber paying arrearages and one year in advance, or any new subscriber paying one year in advance at full rates, $1.50 per year, will receive a copy of this book free.

OFFER NO. FOUR.

The tendency of the times is to lower prices. We offer a liberal reduction in rates for the coming year. We have adopted both a cash and a credit rate. You can pay your money and take your choice. We will furnish the HERALD alone

WITHIN LENAWEE COUNTY

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage, bearing date the 16th day of January, A.D. 1884, made and executed by Jeremiah M. Burleson and Julia E. Burleson, his wife, of the first part, to Enoch G. Cook, of Tecumseh, Michigan, of the second part, which mortgage was on the 17th day of January, A.D., 1884, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for the county of Lenawee, Michigan, in Liber 109 of Mortgages, on page 691, and which said mortgage was afterwards on the 27th day of May, A. D. 1885, duly assigned by the said Enoch G. Cook to Moses Bartlett, which deed of assignment was on the 20th day of January, A.D., 1890, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee county aforesaid, in Liber 118 of Mortgages, on page 669; by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative. And whereas there is at this date claimed to be due and unpaid, as principal and interest on the said mortgage, the sum of One Thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty-one and 12-100 Dollars ($1751.12) and no proceedings have been instituted at law or in equity to collect the same. Notice is therefore hereby given that, by virtue of said power of sale, and the statutes of the State of Michigan, in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the money now, as aforesaid, due and owing on said mortgage, together with interest to accrue thereon, and the costs and charges of this foreclosure, including an attorney fee of Thirty-five Dollars, as provided by law and stipulated for in said mortgage, I shall on the 21st day of April, A D. 1890, at the east front door of the court house in the city of Adrian, in said county of Lenawee, (that being the place where the circuit court for said county is holden) sell at public vendue to the highest bidder, all those parcels of land situate in the township of Macon, in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan, known and described as follows, to wit: The east half of the northwest quarter of section five (5) town five (5), south, of range five (5) east. Also all that part of the east half of the southwest quarter of said section five (5), town five (5) south, of range five (5) east, bounded as follows: Beginning at the intersection of the Tecumseh and Saline road, so called, with the east line of the southwest quarter of said section five (5); thence running southwesterly in center of said road six (6) rods and twelve (12) links; thence north parallel with east line of said southwest quarter of section five (5) to the north line of said southwest quarter of section five (5); thence east to northeast corner of said southwest quarter of section five (5), thence south to the place of beginning, containing eighty-one acres of land, more or less.

Dated Jan. 23d, 1890.

ESTATE OF WILLIAM TAYLOR.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 20th day of January in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of William Taylor, an insane person.

On reading and filing the petition of Charles C. Tefft, guardian of said insane person, praying for the allowance of his fourth annual account as such guardian; and for such other order and decree, as to this court shall seem proper.

It is Ordered, That Monday, the 17th day of February next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the next of-kin of said insane person and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Erskine Wilson lost a valuable horse last week in spite of two veterinary physicians.

Frank Rogers and family are visiting at the old homestead. Mrs. S. E. Rogers is slowly improving in health.

The funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth Bailey was held at the house of her niece, Mrs. Geo. B. Mize, on Monday of this week.

Celia Macham, Eva Camp, and Barbara Curry are enjoying a lovely visit at the home of their relative, A. D. Macham.

Miss Adda Bethel has gone home to recover from the influenza, and a gentleman is perambulating around the switch board.

The Young Peoples social of the Presbyterian church was well attended last Saturday evening. Raisin young ladies (we mean their shoes,) always bring a good price when auctioned off by as good an auctioneer as John Richard.

The public hall is kept warm most of the time. Patrons meeting on Tuesday night; old folks party Wednesday night; and on Saturday evening a grand entertainment by the celebrated West family will be given, consisting of music, humor and legerdemain.

La Grippe has had a firm hold on this section of the w rld. Even the weather caught cold and was held for a week in icy hands. If there should be an individual who has escaped the epidemic we hope he will report to the HERALD, as Wonderland would be most happy to obtain such a curiosity, and a large reward is out for such a person to put with a thirteen year old boy found by a conductor on board a train of cars. La Grippe! Oh that is a chestnut too old to be resurrected and hence we bury it.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Ezra Simmons has joined his family in Tennessee.

La Grippe has not relaxed his grip in this vicinity.

Mrs. Wilson has resumed her labors in the Central school.

Clinton Leonard has had a very slow recovery from la grippe.

Willie McCollum is visiting his sister, Mrs. L. Herbison in Newburg.

We learn that Frank Lambkin is worse; he had a bad night of it last night.

Uncle Perry Allen's condition was considered critical for a couple of days; on Monday he was a little better. Jas Allen's little baby is also very sick.

The name of Cecil Billington should head the roll of honor of Franklin pupils. Duringthe fourteen years of his life he has never been absent from school a day or hour until la grippe compelled his attendance at home Jan.

Frank Lambkin is still unable to teach. A severe attack of neuralgia and inflammation of the inner ear drum followed close on the heels of la grippe. He was improving at last accounts and his pupils hope to see him in the school room next week.

Out of forty pupils Mrs. Wilson had but seven in attendance, we are told, the remainder being at home entertaining la grippe; she therefore closed her school for the week being herself also a victim, It would be easier to give the names of those who have not than those who have had la grippe. Many of the cases have been severe.

MACON CENTER CHIPS.

During the past week parties have been busy working up an extension of the local telegraph line, It commences at A. Easlick's, going two miles west, one north and three east, and looks now as if it was a sure thing.

At the last meeting of Macon Grange several applications for membership were presented and accepted, and a number more called for and will be filled out and sent in at the next meeting. A called meeting to do regular work, wi l be held on Saturday, Feb. 1st. at 7 o'clock P. M.

The Grange will hold a special meeting on Monday evening, Feb. 3d. at 7 o'clock P. M., for the installation of officers elect. This will be a pub l c meeting and all are cordially invited to attend. Mrs. Perry Mayo, of Battle Creek, will be present and act as instaling officer. As Mrs. Mayo ranks among the very best of Michigan's lady lecturers, it is hoped that all who can will avail themselves of this chance to hear her, as she is to give a lecture after the installation. As this is to be a free entertainment there will be no excuse for any one to m ss hearing a good lecture.

There was an old fashioned crowd in town last Saturday.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

A large factory—Satis-factory.

John Lawton of Clayton, visited his son Bert, last week.

Lou Arner spent Sunday in Tecumseh with Ella Jackson.

The M. E. church people are making an effort to save sinners this week, grippe or no grippe; mud or no mud.

G. W. Arner and wife of Augusta, Mich., are visiting old friends.

Dr. Balcom, (dentist) from Dundee, was in the village Tuesday and Wednesday, doing work in his line.

The report that G. P. Waring will close out his business here is incorrect, at least for the present.

Thomas Florence who has been visiting relatives in the state of N. Y. since last fall, returned last week.

Over one half of the people around here, if not nearly all, have had or are having the la grippe. If the total population of the United States will reach 70,000,000, this year, it seems reasonable to estimate that 17,500,000, or one quarter of the entire population, are victims of the disease. Providing there is an average cost to each one afflicted with it, of twenty-five cents, which also seems reasonable the aggregate cost for relief and cure would amount to about four million, three hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars. Perhaps this is too small an estimate.

If the U. S. Government has been taxing importers 50 per cent duty on silk and cotton ribbons, when they were dutiable at 20 per cent only, and refund to these importers of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and other places, about $6,000,000, will the aforesaid importer refund properly that amount to the jobbers, etc., so they can refund it to its original owners—the consumers? Or, will they salt that down too with the six million already taken from the consumers, and do the sea shore act next season with twelve millions instead of six millions of dollars derived from protection? We want to learn something and will be glad to have any one give us the desired information.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to express our heartfelt thanks to the kind neighbors and friends who so kindly assisted thro' the death and burial of dear nephew. Also to the choir who furnished the fine singing.

CHAS. BARRETT AND FAMILY.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

La Grippe has a number of victims in Clinton.

Elmer Carney returned from Ridgeway Monday.

James B. Hause is slowly improving from his severe illness.

Ed. Rose went to Tecumseh last Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Ed. VanDeMark spent the fore part of the week in Adrian.

Robert Reddy has an addition to the fam ly—an eight pound boy.

Abe Hendershot has gone into the map business. Cambridge is his territory.

Mrs. McClure, who has been visiting with her son Frank returned to her home in Ohio on the 28th.

Mrs. Gardner started for Valley City, Dakota, last Tuesday afternoon. She will stop at Jerome, Mich., to visit her sister on the way.

Mrs. Danforth Keyes, who has been in failing health for several weeks departed this life Monday afternoon. The funeral services were held at the residence on Wednesday afternoon and were largely attended.

RAISIN RACKET.

Bert Selleck was the guest of S. O. Westgate over Sunday.

The enrollment at the seminary this term is 71, the largest for some time.

J. M. Green has been spending the last two weeks visiting his brothers in New York.

Bret Simonds has returned from the west and is at present swinging the axe on the home flats.

The scholars at the seminary have been having some splendid skating, and some very bad bumps.

There was a shoe social held at Wm. Calhoun's Saturday evening, at which there was a good attendance.

Quarterly meeting of the society of friends will be held at Raisin Center, beginning Saturday Feb. 1st.

Sandy Miller has been spending some time visiting his brother, Dr. Thomas Miller, of Washington, D. C.

The lecture given by Mr. Morrow of Adrian, at the Seminary, on labor organizations, was thoroughly instructive.

Sick headache is readily cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which tones and regulates the digestion, and creates an appetite.

TIPTON TOPICS.

Once again we have spring weather.

Eugene Cumburn is on the sick list. La grippe.

Another car load of brick has arrived for the new Patron store.

L. G. Lerch was badly kicked last Monday, while breaking a colt for J. Q. Osborn.

Stephenson & Hoag shipped a car load of sheep, and a car load of hogs last Tuesday.

Cards are out announcing the 20th anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Luce, Tuesday eve. Feb. 4th, 1890.

Geo. Cumburn leads the van for big hogs. Last Monday he butchered a hog which, after being dressed, weighed 603 pounds.

On Wednesday last Miss Alice Osborn passed to her final rest. The deceased was sick but a short time, but during that time suffered greatly. This is the fourth death that has occurred in this family in one short year. Her brother Frank and sister, Mrs. Mead, were here to attend the funeral services, which were held on Friday, Rev. H. Palmer, officiating.

MACON MUSIC.

Michael Hendershot was on the gain at last reports.

Dr. Morden is on the sick list—with the grippe, I suppose.

Mrs. Calvin Davenport has been on the sick list for the past week.

Jesse Frost, Fred Ganoung and Otto Burleson all have the grippe.

Quarterly meeting at the Baptist church next Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Samuel Hatch came home from Detroit Thursday night, returning on Monday.

J. D. Arner of Ridgeway, and Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Jackson of Tecumseh, visited Mr. Jackson's parents on Sunday.

TECUMSEH AND FRANKLIN FARMERS' CLUB

This society met at Mr. A. K. Waldron's Jan. 8th. Owing to the roughness of the roads the attendance was very small. A pleasant time was had however, by those who were fortunate enough to be present. The next meeting will be at the home of Mr. Geo. Swartz on the evening of Feb. 5th, 1890, with the following program:

Music—Mr. and Mrs. Poucher.
Dec.—Thurlow Penticost.
Dec.—Harry Langton.
Reading—Mrs. Hoag.
Music—School Children.
Dec.—Clem Bramble.
Rec—Hattie Hurry.
Reading—Mrs. Swartz.
Music—Mr. and Mrs. Poucher.
Dialogue.
Question—Do orchards pay? Opened by A. K. Waldron.

PRICES OF FARM PRODUCTS JAN 1, 1890.

Correspondents have this month reported very fully and carefully, the prices of the principal farm products in their own home markets, that is where they usually market such products.

The average price of wheat in Michigan January 1, 1890, at the usual places of marketing by the farmers was 73 cents, of corn 39 cents, and of oats 24 cents per bushel, and hay was worth $8.44 per ton.

Fat cattle were bringing an average of $3.67, fat hogs $3.26 and dressed pork $4.35 per 100 lbs.

Colts under one year old were worth an average of $37.67; between one and two years old, $61.43; between two and three years old, $87.89; and horses three years old and over, $118,10

The average price of milch cows was $25 47 per head.

Cattle, other than milch cows, under one year old, were worth per head $6.66; between one and two years old, $11.93; between two and three years old, $18.51; and three years old and over $25.49.

Sheep under one year old were worth $2.30, and over that age $3.01.

Hogs under one year old were worth 3 88, and those one year old and over, $7.48.

The prices here given are the averages for the entire State, and are, except for wheat, and for "cattle other than milch cows," a very little higher than the prices ruling in the southern counties. "Cattle other than milch cows" seem to be bringing considerably lower prices in the central counties than in the southern and northern sections of the State, which reduces the average prices for the State below the prices in the southern counties.

TALKS WITH EDISON.

In the February number of Harper's Magazine, Geo. Parsons Lathrop gives a very interesting pen portrait of Tom Edison, the great inventor. The following extract contains Edison's version of some of his experience as a newsboy.

"At the beginning of the civil war," said Mr. Edison, "I was slaving late and early at selling papers; but, to tell the truth, I was not making a fortune. I worked on so small a margin that I had to be mighty careful not to overload myself with papers that I couldn't sell. On the other hand, I could not afford to carry so few that I should find myself sold out long before the end of the trip. To enable myself to hit the happy mean, I formed a plan which turned out admirably. I made a friend of one of the compositors in the Free Press office, and persuaded him to show me every day a 'galley proof' of the most important news article. From a study of its headlines I soon learned to gauge the value of the day's news and its selling capacity so that I could form a tolerably correct estimate of the number of papers I should need As a rule I could dispose of about 200: but if there was any especial news from the seat of war the sale ran up to 300 or over. Well, one day my compositor brought me a proof slip of which nearly the whole was taken up with a gigantic display head. It was the first report of the battle of Pittsburg Landing—afterward called Shiloh, you know—and it gave the number of killed and wounded as 60,000 men!

"I grasped the situation at once. Here was a chance for enormous sales, if only the people along the line could know what had happened; if only they could see the proof slip I was then reading! Suddenly an idea occurred to me. I rushed off to the telegraph operator and gravely made a proposition to him, which he received just as gravely. He, on his part, was to wire to each of the principal stations on our route, asking the station-master to chalk up on the black bulletin board—used for announcing the times of arrival and departure of trains—the news of the great battle, with its accompanying slaughter. This he was to do at once; while I agreed, in return to supply him 'free gratis, for nothing,' a Harper's Weekly, a Harper's Monthly, and a daily evening paper during the next six months from that date.

"This bargain struck, I began to think me how I was to get enough papers to make the grand coup I intended. I had very little cash, and, I feared, still less credit. I went to the superintendent of the delivery department and profered a modest request for 1,000 copies of the Free Press on trust. But I was not much surprised when my request was curtly and gruffly refused. In those days, though, I was a pretty cheeky boy, and I saw a small fortune in prospect if my telegraph operator had kept his word—a point on which I was still a trifle doubtful. Nerving myself for a great stroke, I marched up-stairs into the office of Wilbur F. Storey himself, and asked to see him. A few minutes later I was shown in to him. I told him who I was and that I wanted fifteen hundred copies of the paper on credit. The tall, thin, dark-eyed, ascetic-looking man stared at me for a moment, and then scratched a few words on a slip of paper. 'Take that down-stairs,' said he, 'and you will get what you want.' And so I did. Then I felt happier than I have ever felt since.

"I took my 1,500 papers, got three boys to help me fold them, and mounted the train, all agog to find out whether the telegraph operator had kept his word. At the town wher our first stop was made I usually sold two papers. As the train swung into that station, I looked ahead and thought there must be a riot going on. A big crowd filled the platform, and as the train drew up I began to realize that they wanted my papers. Before we left I had sold a hundred or two at five cents apiece. At the next station the place was fairly black with people, I raised the ante, and sold 300 papers at ten cents each. So it went on until Port Huron was reached. Then I transferred my remaining stock to the wagon which always waited for me there, hired a small boy to sit on the pile of papers in the back of the wagon, so as to discount any pilfering, and sold out every paper I had at a quarter of a dollar or more per copy. I remember I passed a church full of worshipers, and stopped to yell out my news. In ten seconds there was not a soul left in meeting. All of them including the parson, were clustered around me, bidding against each other for copies of the precious paper.

"You can understand why it struck me then that the telegraph must be about the best thing going, for it was the telegraphic notices on the bulletin boards that had done the trick. I determined at once to become a telegraph operator. But if it hadn't been for Wilbur F. Storey I should never have fully appreciated the wonders of electrical science."

Will the passage of Windom's silver bill help business? We doubt it. It is a mere make shift. Free silver coinage is the tonic which the country needs.

Our protection friends claim that the tariff should be revised by its friends. "Its friends" are going about it now right merrily. They propose to revise the tariff by piling on more tariff taxes.

In the testimony taken before the Ways and Means committee on the tariff, all the big monopolies were represented; but who represented the people, the great army of consumers! Echo answers, who?

Chicago had a knockdown blow, in the World's Fair contest, when a special committee was appointed, but she has scored two big points since, in the recommendations passed by the Ohio and West Virginia legislatures. Chicago is in the ring yet.

The manufactures say they must have free raw materials or they will perish. The high tariff farmers say that raw materials must be fully protected or they will smash things. This is the irrepressible conflict. Let the music proceed. When the monopolists fall out, consumers will get their dues.

The West Virginia contest over the governship is practically settled in favor of Fleming, the Democrat candidate. The report of the investigating committee was so overwhelmingly in his favor that Gen. Goff's counsel withdrew from the case and refused to argue it before the legislature. Fleming will be seated as soon as the legislature comes to a vote.

Good Uncle Rusk has said that alcohol, rather than sugar, would be the paying article made from sorghum and Kansas is foolish in not allowing alcohol to be made in the state. To this argument an exchange adds that an article sold at the Shoreham for 20 cents a drink is also made from corn which the Kansas farmer is using for fuel because it's cheaper than coal.—Toledo Bee.

The people are looking to Congress for relief from the glass trust, the rubber trust, the steel beam trust, the plow trust, the nail trust, the copper trust and other like combines. What explanation will Congress make if they leave on the tariff list excessive duties which operate to encourage frustism by offering producers inordinate profits on condition that they combine and suppress domestic competition?—Chicago Tribune, Rep.

The cry for free raw material in the New England States is not the voice of greed nor of partisanship; it is a cry of distress. The business failures in New England last year show increased liabilities amounting to $21,311,614. This marks where the shoe pinches. Having been "protected" into insolvency, the embarrassed manufacturers now ask for mercy.—Philadelphia Record.

Free necessaries and taxed luxuries is the platform of the Iowa farmers. Now let those among them who believe in a prohibitory tariff on anything demand that the Republican party shall be consistent and put a prohibitive tariff tax on wool, hides and all other raw material which is produced or the production of which can be imagined in America. It is time to bring monopoly to a focus, and the West can do it.

The press report of Col. Brice's speech to the Ohio caucus quoted him as saying that "tariff reform is now of great interest." The Cincinnati Commercial Gazette reports this sentence as "tariff reform is now the great necessity." A contemporary remarks with correctness that "the political difference is immense." It is, indeed. It is such differences of thought and expression that make men Nobodies or Somebodies.

BALLOT REFORM.

Chief among the political issues of recent origin, which are now engaging public attention, is that of ballot reform. The evils that have arisen under the lax election laws now in force have become so glaring that reform has become an absolute necessity, if free institutions are to be preserved. The old saying that "Money Talks," which was formerly applied only to business enterprises, has become emphatically true in politics. A man with plenty of money and without any scruples in using it can soon become a powerful "political boss" in our larger cities, and close states are sometimes carried for one or the other party by the same influences. It is no longer a secret that Indiana was carried for Gen. Harrison in the fall of 1888, by a liberal expenditure of cash on the "blocks of five" plan. It is undoubtedly true that two or three of the Southern states are held in line by the Democrats by means of a systematic suppression of the negro vote. The recent gubernatorial contest in West Virginia disclosed the fact that a whole train load of negro laborers, numbering about five hundred, was voted in West Virginia and also in Virginia at the last general election. Thus a railroad construction train gave the Republican ticket a big boost in two states on the same day. The purchased and fraudulent votes cast at one precinct wiped out the pretended majority for Gen. Goff and elected Fleming, the Democratic candidate. These few illustrations, to say nothing of hundreds of similar occurrences on a smaller scale, have at last aroused the attention of the masses, and they are loudly demanding a radical reform in electoral methods.

The Reform receiving the most favorable attention is known as the Australian system, the distinguishing features of which are these:

First—A registration of the legal voters in every voting precinct. This registration should be periodically made at least once in four years in rural districts, and in large cities a few days prior to every election. Michigan has had such a law for some years, but most states are without it. Ohio has no law of the kind, and even New York has none—except in the cities of New York and Brooklyn.

Secondly—Party caucuses are required to be held several days or weeks before election and all the tickets to be voted are printed on one ballot at the expense of the state. This does away with a large portion of election expenses on the part of the candidates. A large share of the corruption fund used at elections is paid out under the specious plea of "election expenses." In connection with this feature the penalty attached to bribery at elections is increased and the provisions to guard the purity of the ballot box made more stringent.

Thirdly—The polling place is arranged with private compartments. When a voter presents himself to vote, his name is announced to the election board. If his name is on the registry all right, a ballot is handed to him, and he steps into a private compartment, and marks his ballot as he wishes to vote it, either by erasing the names he would vote against, or by making a cross opposite the names he would vote for. All the candidates to be voted for with the party to which they belong are printed on one ballot. This "official ballot" is in the custody of the election board and is only handed out to the voter when he presents himself to vote. Having fixed his ballot, the voter presents it to the chairman of the board, who marks the appropriate number upon it—the same as the number on the poll list—and the ballot is then deposited in the box. In the case of an illiterate voter one member of the board, who is sworn for that purpose, is detailed to assist the voter in fixing his ballot. Details may vary in different localities, but these are the principle features of the new system.

Note the beneficial effects of this system. The complete registry, corrected before each election, and the examination of this list by the election officers when each voter announces his name, to verify his right to vote, will put a stop in toto to the traffic in non-residents and repeaters. The "official ballot" does away with all excuse for extravagant "election expenses." It prevents the printing of mixed tickets and otherwise tampering with tickets before election day. The private compartment arrangement gives the voter absolute secrecy. While fixing his ticket the voter is alone "with his God and his lead pencil." Intimidation is absolutely impossible and bribery is next to impossible, for the briber has no means of knowing whether the goods he has bought will be delivered according to contract. And the man who will sell his vote would not hesitate to swindle the se r.

This reform has made wonderful progress in the last three years, and the better elements of both parties are committed in its favor. It is slowly but surely marching on, and its adoption by all the states is only a question of time.

WHAT THE FARMERS GET.

NOTHING BUT CHEAPER LAND AND LARGER MORTGAGES.

How the Price of Butter, Cheese and Milk Has Declined—The Lookout for the Farmer Under the Present Tariff. Tax on Salt and Tinned Plate.

Protection is extolled by the high tariff party for its benefits to the farmer. If the farmer and his assistants obtain no benefit from protection, then the whole theory fails to the ground, because the farming interest is by far the largest in the country.

Among the most important growing industries of the country is dairy farming. With a continually increasing demand for its products, it would be natural to suppose, if not an increase in prices, at least not a decline. Yet figures show the contrary.

Between 1880 and 1883 the average price of New York state butter was 30 cents a pound. Since 1884 the price has never exceeded 30 cents, and is at present about 23 cents. The average price of New York state factory cheese for some years previous to 1882 was 12 cents a pound. In 1889 the price was from 8 to 9½ cents, with no prospects of improvement.

This means a round reduction of 25 per cent. in the price of dairy produce. Judging by the example of wheat and other export farming products, this reduction has come to stay.

A decline in the price of milk preceded the fall in the average price of butter and cheese. In 1872 the average price paid for milk at the Wassaic condensed milk factory in the state of New York was three and seven-tenths cents per quart. In 1880 the price per quart of milk at the same factory had fallen to two and nine-tenths cents. Since 1880 the average price has not risen above this figure, although in 1885 it was as low as two and eight-tenths cents per quart.

As the price for dairy products has declined, the value of the land from which they are produced has declined. The United States agricultural report for 1886, made up by Mr. Dodge, a conspicuous high protection man, declared that farm lands in the state of New York had depreciated one-third in value during the preceding ten years, and, moreover, that 30 per cent. of the farms in the same state were mortgaged to two-thirds their estimated valuation. Mr. Wood, who is one of the state assessors for the present year, bears testimony, through the columns of the New York Tribune, that the depreciation in the value of the farms of New York state is still going on. "Farming property," says Mr. Wood, "is growing less and less valuable. I cannot see any way for it to improve, and in a few years you will see more tenement farmers than anything else. I don't see how those insurance companies that have advanced money will ever get out whole."

In Vermont the decline in the farming industry has advanced a step further. The New York Tribune had an article on this subject August 11, 1889, in which was said, among other things: "Good lands are offered for sale as low as $3 an acre, and it is said that it will be necessary to make $5 an acre the maximum price for settlers if the new Vermont boomers expect to compete with western lands. It may serve as a vivid notion of the extent to which the depopulating process has gone on to say that no difficulty was encountered in finding enough abandoned farms in one locality to furnish contiguous farms for the first proposed colony of fifty families. In fact, four such localities were found."

It seems then admitted that a steady deterioration of farm values is going on in the eastern states. Cheap transportation has undoubtedly much to do with this result. It matters little that Vermont is nine times nearer the port of New York than Iowa. The difference in freight charges is so small as not to count. The western lands have two advantages which last them for the first few years after settlement. One is the relative cheapness of land, and the other is the virgin richness of a soil unexhausted by overcropping.

But in both these respects time is tending to equalize the values of farms in the eastern and western states. There is no reason to believe that western farmers will be more provident in their treatment of virgin soil than they have been hitherto. Farming land in the state of Illinois is no cheaper than equally good farms in Vermont.

Many years ago the state of New York ranked first in the quantity of wheat grown and exported. With the fall of this cereal below $1 a bushel came the end of the wheat growing on a large scale. It was no longer profitable to grow wheat in New York. Then the farmers turned their energies to dairy farming, and this industry grew and thrived until the decline of prices to their present level. Meanwhile, western states were finding out that the competition of states still further west was rendering the wheat crop an unprofitable one for them, and so took, like New York, to dairy farming.

How far this step has been successful in Illinois may be inferred from the report of the bureau of labor statistics of Illinois made in 1887 on the subject of land mortgages.

In this report it is shown that while the aggregate of all mortgages outside of Cook county increased in amount only 5.7 per cent. between the years 1870 and 1880, since 1880 the increase in amount has been 37 per cent. Between 1880 and 1887 the number of mortgages increased from 80,759 to 90,389, while the aggregate amount of these mortages increased from $103,525,237 to $123,733,098. Taking twenty-two distinctively dairy counties, in the seven years beginning with 1880, fourteen of these show an increase in the percentage of acres mortgaged, while sixteen show an increase in the average incumbrance per acre.

This does not look much like prosperity, and it does not seem as if the farmer in Illinois was much better off than the farmer in New York. Both are apparently in a pretty tight fix. Neither of them can get any higher prices for his goods than what the competition of other nations at Liverpool fixes them at. If there was not enough butter and cheese to go around in this country, then the dairy farmer might obtain the benefit of the tariff which would keep the dairy products of outside nations from competing with the home grown article. But with a surplus for export the case is different. Congress cannot help the farmer to get higher prices for his butter outside the boundaries of the United States. If the farmer could sell his butter and cheese for higher prices at home than he can get for them abroad, no butter or cheese would be exported. But as it is he has to compete fairly and squarely with foreign nations.

But if the farmer cannot get any higher prices for his butter and cheese, he would make more profit off their sale if he had his salt duty free. Other nations against whom he has to compete in the world's markets have free salt and free tinned ware. The amount of duty annually paid by farmers on tinned plate for dairy utensils is not less than $3,500,000. The duty on salt used for dairy purposes is about $1,000,000. So that every farmer who sells a pound of butter or cheese for export has to carry his proportional share of this $3,500,000. Some day the farmers will wake up and realize how unjust this tax is to them.

What Is the Tax For?

The Republican papers are experiencing considerable satisfaction over what they are pleased to call the success of protection in Germany, as a proof of which they point to the activity of the iron trade in that empire.

The main reason for this activity, it is true, is to be found in the orders for iron proceeding from the government itself, a circumstance which somehow usually escapes the notice of our protectionist friends, as does also the fact that imports of iron have likewise largely increased lately.

Then the duty on pig iron is only $2.10 a ton, while in this country it is $6.72. When it was proposed to knock off the odd cents and make the rate $6 by way of avoiding the trouble of making change, the authors of the proposition were stigmatized as "free traders," which is the most opprobrious epithet in the protectionist vocabulary. How a self respecting protectionist can applaud any nation for charging a beggarly duty of $2.10 a ton on pig iron is hard to understand.

But then it is equally hard to understand why our American protectionists should applaud Germany for imposing any protective duty at all. When they are asked what the duty we impose on iron is for, they say it is for the benefit of the American workingman, to keep his wages from falling to the level of the workingmen of free trade England.

This being the object of protection, as the Pennsylvania iron manufacturer frankly admits in those bursts of generous confidence for which he is noted whenever anything is to be got by them, it is not apparent what Germany wants with it. Wages are far lower there than in Great Britain, where her chief competition lies, and probably as low as any country in the world producing iron for export. On the American theory of protection, therefore, she needs none, and our American protectionists should not waste their admiration on her policy.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A New Way of Calculation.

Some of the arguments of our protection brethren remind us of the new species of arithmetic they have developed down in the Argentine Republic. That country is making great efforts to advertise itself, and especially boasts of the growth of its foreign commerce, taking pride in the fact that its exports always exceed its imports. Gold is at a high premium there, and it has just been discovered that the Argentine statisticians calculate their imports on a gold basis and their exports on a paper basis. As their paper dollar is at 33 per cent. discount, the exports on the face of the returns are always greatly in excess of the imports, while in reality the reverse is the case.

Protectionists adopt an equally specious method in speaking of the prosperity of this country. As the total wealth has unquestionably increased they strike an average, and that makes a very fine showing, but they forget to state that the accumulations have been in certain districts and for the benefit of certain classes.

The average of the manufacturer and mill owner and others who are protected is on a gold basis. The farmer and laborer get a paper dollar average, whose face value represents three or four times what they actually have.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Duty on Potatoes.

Mr. John W. Woodside, of Philadelphia, appeared before the committee of ways and means during the tariff hearings. He thought the duty on potatoes should be raised from 15 cents to 25 cents per bushel. Fifteen cents a bushel for potatoes means 40 per cent. ad valorem, so that 25 cents a bushel would mean 66⅔ per cent. ad valorem. With potatoes there is always either a feast or a famine. When the crop in this country is a good one no potatoes are imported. On the other hand, when the crop is a total or a partial failure, as occasionally happens, prices are sufficiently high to be remunerative at home without any duty to enhance them. Potatoes are largely used by the poorer classes. "Dear food for such persons," seems to be a favorite motto with the high tariff party.

The Young Women's Christian association of New York is doing a worthy work. It has evening school classes for working women, in which are taught commercial arithmetic, stenography, typewriting, bookkeeping and penmanship. In still other classes instruction is given in physical culture, choir music, drawing, and coloring and retouching photographs. The instruction got here will enable many a good girl to rise in life.

Their Business Booming.

Probably no one thing has caused such a general revival of trade at C. A. Wright & Co's Drug Store as their giving away to their customers of so many free trial bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Their trade is simply enormous in this very valuable article from the fact that it always cures and never disappoints. Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, and all throat and lung diseases quickly cured. You can test it before buying by getting a trial bottle free, large size $1. Every bottle warranted.

Gross Cruelty.

Parents too frequently permit their children to suffer from headache, fits, St. Vitus Dance, nervousness, etc., when they can be cured. Mrs. P. was cured of sick headache, dizziness, dyspepsia, nervous prostration of eighteen years standing, after failure of sixteen physicians; Mrs K., of sick headache for 35 years; Mrs. P. of twenty to fifty fits a night; others from this vicinity could be mentioned who have been cured by that wonderful nerve food and medicine—Dr. Miles' Nervine, which contains no morphine, opium or dangerous drugs. Free samples may be had at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

"I was caught in a python's folds and saw fierce eyes glaring down into mine. If that tremendous coil were tightened around me, I knew that I might at once check my luggage for the undiscovered bourne. In this crisis of my fate I saw the great python's tail in close proximity to his mouth. I grasped the snake's tail and pushed a yard or two down his gawping jaws. Serpents seldom bite their prey; they lubricate it and suck it down. With such a long and cold-blooded creature, I calculated that it would take over a half a minute before the sensations of his tail could be conveyed to his head, and render him aware that he was committing suicide."

WILHELM'S IMPROVED CREAMERY CAN.

Unequalled for private Dairies of from one cow to full size Creamery. $5.00 will buy FOUR 3-GAL. CANS making a capacity of 12 gallons of milk, and will PRODUCE ALL THE CREAM FROM 4 TO 8 HOURS, in a vat, tub, or any receptacle the farmer may choose, holding water from 10 to 14 inches in depth, and at a temperature from 40 to 60 degrees cool. IT MAKES A PERFECT CREAM and combines the advantage of deep setting, rapid cooling, protecting the milk from all impurities of the atmosphere which so quickly taints cream. Also preventing souring by thunder storms, from flies, insects, dust, and all bad odors; thus preserving both cream and milk, clean and sweet. Over 200,000 in actual use in the U. S. One setting of milk is all that is needed to prove the merit of the can. Usual size of can, 3-gal., price $1.25. A liberal discount on orders of one dozen Cans and upwards. Write for descriptive circular and testimonials. I also make a specialty of building Creameries and furnishing all the best improved machinery and apparatus. JOHN WILHELM, Wooster, Wayne Co., O.

SNOW AND WIND

Ruthlessly Devastate Colorado.

PEOPLE FLEEING FROM THEIR HOMES

To the Brush For Safety—The Mountains Take Fire, and the City of Manatau, a Summer Resort, About to be Wiped out By a Frightful Conflagration.

CHICAGO, ILL., January 27. A special to the Tribune from Denver, Col., say: A terrible storm raged in eastern Colorado all yesterday and Friday night. Denver streets have been almost deserted from morning till night, and reports from the divide county show it to be the worst storm in years. Trains on the Santa Fe, Rio Grande and Ft. Warth were moved yesterday by gangs of section men cleaning the snow which fills the cuts, from the rails. The path of the heaviest storm was down the mountains through Monument, Colorado Springs and Manatau. A telephone message from Monument at 8 o'clock in the evening said that many buildings had been destroyed, and citizens were leaving their houses and taking refuge in the brush. The gale reached a hurricane at Manatau. Buildings are reported wrecked and sidewalks lifted bodily and hurled through the air.

To add to the terror of the situation fire has broken out in the mountains between that point and Pike's Peak and is spreading over the hills with fearful rapidity. The fire is only two miles from the town and a slight change in the wind would soon drive it into town and nothing could save the beautiful mountain resort, with its mammoth hotels and elegant cottages. Heavy explosions, about six o'clock along the mountains, in the vicinity of Grader's Camps on the Pike's Peak railroad, led to the belief that the fire had reached the powder magazine. There are hundreds of men in the mountains and grave fears are entertained for their safety.

Fires are also reported on the mountains east of Pike's Peak. It is reported that the wind is terribly severe on Pike's Peak, and that at a railway grading station half way up the several men were killed by being blown over a precipice. This report is not confirmed. North of Denver the storm has devastated the country for miles, and at Louisville, the centre of the storm, many of the dwellings were wrecked. At Fort Collins buildings were demolished and trains were compelled to stop in sheltered places to avoid the storm.

Another Snow Blockade in Idaho.

CHICAGO, ILL., January 27.—A Herald special from Denver Colorado, says: Reports from Idaho last night are that the worst snow storm of the season has been raging since 2 o'clock Friday afternoon all through the territories. The Utah and Northern railroad is completely blocked again, and all rolling stock and motive power has been ordered side-tracked until the storm is over. The Central Pacific is also in worse condition than ever. It was reported yesterday that the fast mail side tracked at Shady Run, on which the Howard Atheneum Company is, had been gotten out, and that the company were on their way to Omaha to pick up their thread of engagements. The unfortunate train is still stuck fast and is not likely to get out for several days. Nothing can be learned as to their health or condition, but they must be in very unpleasant shape.

VICTORIA AND TENNIE C.

Their Husbands Offer $5,000 for Their Detractors.

LONDON, January 27.—The issuance by Mr. J. Biddulph Martin and Sir Francis Cook of an offer of £1,000 reward for the detection of the parties to the conspiracy to blacken the reputation of their respective wives—formerly Mrs. Victoria C. Woodhull and Tennie C. Claflin—has revived all the scandalous stories circulated about the ladies within the last few years, many of which the gentlemen themselves allude to with sufficient circumstantiality of detail to cause surprise. The husbands declare their intention to ferret out the defamers of their wives and prosecute them to the bitter end. In their publication the gentlemen ask for information concerning the whereabouts of Mrs. Warner, of Elizabeth, N. J., who was connected with the expose of the scandals when they were written. Colonel Martin is in Washington, floating with success a syndicate to run American patents in England.

TO MANUFACTURE SODA ASH.

The Standard Oil Company to Engage in a New Business.

CLEVELAND, January 27.—Two big manufacturing plants now being erected in different parts of the city have for some time been a mystery. The only persons known in the enterprise are F. B. Squire, secretary of the Standard Oil company, and David R. Paige, of New York, but it is thought the Standard Oil company are the real owners. Nearly 60 acres of land has been leased, big buildings erected, and the workmen are now drilling a well for salt.

It is said that the company will manufacture soda ash, great quanties of which are used in the refining of oil, the manufacture of glass and for other purposes. Much curiosity has been aroused over the peculiar silence of the promoters, but to all inquiries they politely reply: "We are not at liberty to say what the works are for."

DARING ESCAPE OF A LUNATIC

From the Bedroom of the Asylum in Which He Was Confined.

NORRISTOWN, PA., January 27.—Isaac P. Anthony made a daring and successful escape from the hospital for the insane at 9 o'clock last evening. The usual monthly ball held by the patients was progress at the time, and Anthony was dancing with a male attendant. The hop was held in the ballroom over the chapel. To secure ventilation one of the window sashes was left down from the top.

As Anthony and the attendant reached the window Anthony tore himself from the attendant's arms, ran to the window and made a dive, head first, to the ground, thirty feet below. In an instant he arose and escaped.

A treaty has been signed with the Argentine Republic by which the dispute in regard to the frontier of the Missiones territory is settled.

NELLIE BLY

Finishes Her Great World Race Against Time.

SHE ARRIVES AT NEW YORK 72 DAYS 3 HOURS AND 11 MINUTES

After the Time of Departing From That Place—Great Crowds Welcome Her Home and She is Tendered a Reception at the World Office.

NEW YORK, January 27.—Nellie Bly, the New York World's globe circler, stepped from the train in the Jersey City station of the Pennsylvania railroad Saturday afternoon. Her actual time in making the circuit of the world, as computed by three official time takers and verified by the World's announcement this evening, was seventy-two days, six hours, and eleven minutes.

A number of ladies and gentlemen, mostly newspaper people, met Miss Bly at Philadelphia and formed a party of escort to this city. The station in Jersey City was crowded with people long before the train was due, and Mayor Cleveland and other officials were there to receive Miss Bly. When the lady alighted she found herself in the midst of an enthusiastic crowd which the police had work to separate. Mayor Cleveland tried to make an address of welcome; but the crowd kept pressing in so closely that it was postponed. The cheering was continued until Miss Bly had taken passage to New York over the Cortland street ferry. This was accomplished only by her escort carrying her the length of the platform. On the trip across to New York every tug boat and steam craft saluted the ferry boat. At Cortland street another tremendous crowd had gathered, and Miss Bly's way to the World office was one of cheers and flowers. At the World office Miss Bly held a short reception. She is in good health and spirits.

Where is Miss Bisland?

NEW YORK, January 27.—Mrs. Bisland, the Cosmopolitan Magazine's round-the-world traveler, who started on the same day with Nellie Bly, is a passenger on the steamship Bothnia, which sailed from Queenstown for New York Sunday, January 19th. The Bothnia is an eight or nine day steamer, and owing to the prevailing bad weather at sea she may occupy an even longer time on this trip.

A CINCINNATI FIRE.

TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN PROPERTY DESTROYED.

Fire Destroys the Elegant Seven-story Nevada Block, Corner Fifth and Sycamore Streets—Origin of Fire Unknown.

CINCINNATI, January 27.—The Nevada building on the southeast corner of Fifth and Sycamore street, a magnificent new seven story structure, was completely gutted by fire last night. The two upper floors were occupied by the Henderson-Achert Lithographing Co. Among the other occupants of the building were Geo. C. Lapthorn & Co., shoe manufacturers; Herman Keck & Co., manufacturing jewelers; Faber & Duncan, manufacturers of paper boxes; Hicks & Farley, hardware; H. B. Eckleman, shoe manufacturer: Ebersole & Co., real estate agents; Houston's printing office, the Franklin Laundry and Hoffman's barber shop. The loss on the building, which is owned by the Glenn estate, is about $75,000. The Henderson-Ackert Company lose $60,000. The total loss is estimated at $200,000, insurance about $75,000. The fire started on the third floor, but its origin is unknown.

CONGRESS.

The Customs Administration Bill Passes—World's Fair Matters.

WASHINGTON, January 27.—The House, immediately after the reading of the journal, went into committee of the whole on the customs administrative bill.

Mr. McKinley offered the following as an additional section, which was adopted: Any merchandise deposited in any public or private bonded warehouse may be withdrawn for consumption within three years from date of original importation on the payment of the duties and charges to which it might be subjected by law at the time of such withdrawals; provided that nothing herein shall affect or impair existing provisions of law in regard to the disposal of perishable or explosive articles; and, provided further that this section shall not apply to any article which has been exported from the United States and re-imported.

Several other amendments were offered and rejected, and the consideration of the bill having been completed, the committee rose and reported the bill to the House favorably.

The first vote was on the amendment to the "Canton" section adopted yesterday providing that the section shall not apply to merchandise imported in cartons, etc., which is subject to a duty equal to or exceeding 60 per cent.

The action of the committee was reversed and the amendment rejected.

The was then passed, yeas 138, nays 121.

Mr. Hitt, of Illinois, offered a resolution increasing the membership of the world's fair special committee from 9 to 13, and providing that the committee shall have jurisdiction over all questions relating to the fair, excepting that of location. The question of location to be decided as follows: On one day the representatives of competing cities shall present their claims, and on the following day the members shall vote their choice of location. The resolution was referred to the committee on rules.

Mrs. Parnell Destitute Again.

BOSTON, January 27.—A Bordentown, N. J., special says: The sum of money recently given to Mrs. Parnell, mother of Charles Stewart Parnell, by her friends in America to enable her to meet the demands made upon her by her creditors was insufficient, and now she is again penniless. Relief expected from certain quarters was not forthcoming and she is again in need of the actual necessaries of life, but will not make another appeal to the public, as she feels that she has already received more than she can reasonably expect from that source.

Fell Under a Train.

HARTFORD, CONN., January 27.—W. V. Morgan, manager of the Postal Telegraph office, fell under a train last night and was so badly injured that he died in a hospital. He leaves a widow and several children. He spent two years traveling for Edison in South America.

Epoch

The transition from long, lingering and painful sickness to robust health marks an epoch in the life of the individual. Such a remarkable event is treasured in the memory and the agency whereby the good health has been attained is greatfully blessed. Hence it is that so much is heard in praise of Electric Bitters. So many feel they owe their restoration to health, to the use of the Great Alterative and Tonic. If you are troubled with any disease of Kidneys, Liver or Stomach, of long or short standing you will surely find relief by use of Electric Bitters. Sold at 50c. and $1 per bottle at

MYSTERIOUS DEATH

Which Will be Investigated by the New Hampshire Authorities.

CONCORD, N. H., January 27.—Perley W. Beck, aged 55, an eccentric farmer, living alone in West Hopkinton, was found dead in his house by neighbors yesterday. His body was frozen, but also bore marks of bruises and other evidence of foul play. His cattle and sheep were found frozen to death in the barn. Until nine years ago Beck had lived with his brother and his wife in this house. At that time Mrs. Beck was found dead the indications being that she was burned to death. Her husband afterwards disappeared. Mrs. Beck left some property but no claimant has ever appeared for it. The authorities will investigate Perley Beck's death.

CATARRH.

Catarrhal Deafness, Hay Fever—A New Home Treatment.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membranes of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic researches, however, has proven this to be a fact, and result is that a simple remedy has been formulated, whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are permanently cured in from one to the applications made at home by the patient once in two weeks. N. B.—For catarrhal discharges peculiar to females (whites) this remedy is a specific. A pamphlet of this new treatment is sent on receipt of ten cents by A. H. Dixon & Son, 303 west King street, Toronto, Canada. [Scientific American.

Sufferers from catarrhal troubles should read the above carefully.

DR. BRADLEY'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

A NEW ENTERPRISE.

THE TECUMSEH TABLE COMPANY IS THE NAME OF OUR LATEST NEW INDUSTRY.

A Strong Company Organized, a Building Leased and Work Will Begin with the Opening of Spring.

The old Agricultural Works building opposite B. J. Bidwell's residence was at one time a hive of industry which provided employment to a large number of workmen and furnished a good annual slice to every business house of Tecumseh. For several years clover hullers, threshing machines and farming implements of various kinds were turned out in large quantities, but the enterprise turned out unfortunately and the company dissolved. For three or four years the building was entirely unoccupied. Mr. Kinney, the present occupant, moved into it three years ago last April and has used it for his furniture rooms and a dwelling. The Tansley Bros.' cigar box factory occupied the upper story for several months. It is one of the very best buildings in Tecumseh for manufacturing purposes. We are happy to state that the building will again become a bee-hive of industry at an early day.

Negotiations have been in progress for several weeks to organize a company for the manufacture of the Lee folding table. They have finally come to a focus and a strong stock company has been organized under the State laws, which will do business under the title of "The Tecumseh Table Company." A few weeks ago a subscription paper was started to raise a bonus for such a company and over fifteen hundred dollars were pledged in a few days. These pledges will become payable as soon as twenty-five regular hands are employed by the company. This condition attached to the bonus shows the confidence which the managers entertain in the stability of the new enterprise. All the patents which were taken out by Mr. H. S. Lee have been transferred to the company, which has taken from Mr. H. W. Conkling a five years' lease of the Agricultural Works building, to begin on the first day of April next, when Mr. Kinney's lease will expire. In the mean time the building will be fitted up with a new boiler and seventy five horse power automatic engine, all the latest and most improved machinery for furniture making, a large dry-kiln, exhaust fans, etc. In short the intention of the projectors is to make a first-class furniture factory of it, in all its details. While these preparations are in progress a committee will visit several furniture factories in other places to post themselves upon the business and ascertain the best kinds of machinery to buy. They expect to have the factory in running order by the middle of April.

Who are the stockholders and managers of the new company, did you ask? That is one of the best points in our story. The stockholders are Wm. Hayden, O. P. Bills, H. W. Conkling, C. A. Slayton, J. H. Smith, and H. S. Lee, all of whom have had extensive business experience in various lines of trade. Six better men could not have been selected in Tecumseh to put a new enterprise on its feet and pilot it successfully. Mr. Hayden's success in building up a large trade for the old Globe mills renders him a peculiarly fit person to head a new manufacturing industry. O. P. Bills has developed first-class business talents since he started the bank which he now controls and he will strengthen the credit of the concern. H. W. Conkling was for years the mechanical foreman in Brewer's foundry. A better man for that place could not be found. J. H. Smith began life as a house builder and for some time he was manager of the Tecumseh Lumber Co. His previous training will make him an excellent man to have around in a furniture factory. C. A. Slayton and Harry Lee have proven themselves hustlers in whatever they have undertaken hitherto, and their connection with the concern will add strength and stability to it from the outset. Our citizens have cause to congratulate themselves upon the inception of an industry that is bound to grow into large proportions within the next ten years. The officers of the company are:

President—Wm. Hayden.
Secretary—J. H. Smith.
Treasurer—C. A. Slayton.

THOROUGH TILE DRAINAGE.

BY C. F. CLARKSON.

Sometimes simple facts will illustrate a great principle better than theories or parables. Tile drainage is a progressive study, and while many think they are very radical advocates of its great importance, they really have a very limited idea of the true principles and the extent of the system.

There were two farmers thirty-three years ago, living adjoining each other in one of the counties of Indiana. Mr. A. owned 200 acres, and Mr. B. 120 acres. They were both industrious, as it was understood in those days, and good practical farmers. But they had never made any advances in progressive farming. They did not know there was such a possibility. But one of them, (Mr. A.) made a visit to Brown county, Ohio, to an old acquaintance, near Georgetown. His friend a few years previous, had redeemed, by ample tile drainage, a burr oak and spice wood swamp, which ordinary farmers in that neighborhood had for years considered worthless. But the soil of that swamp was exceedingly rich, having been the depository for unnumbered centuries, of the wash from the surrounding lands. And while the dry corn lands in Brown county were producing from 25 to 30 bushels of corn per acre, the reclaimed swamp of his friend was producing 89 bushels to the acre. My Hoosier friend got an idea of progress in his head, but unfortunately it was only a limited one, and one which too many advocates of drainage to-day entertain. He was so tickled at the idea that he could not stay to finish his visit, but hurried home, to accomplish a purpose, which had entered his head, caused by the success of his friend's swamp.

Mr. A's neighbor, B, had a fifteen acre swamp, which had been an eyesore to the entire neighborhood, and especially to our new enthusiast for drainage, as it lay in front of his house, across the road. Farmer A had for over a third of a century owned a forty acre tract of rolling, clay land, in the corner of his neighbor's farm, which B had for a long time coveted. So farmer A concluded he could now easily make a trade, and dispose of the worn-out forty acres and get the swamp, with money enough to boot to clear out and thoroughly tile drain the swamp. The trade was soon made. The work of drainage went on vigorously, and soon the imaginary progressive farmer raised twice as much corn, with one-third the work, on the fifteen acres as the other did on the forty. And like perverse human nature, he availed himself of every occasion to crow over his neighbor.

The forty acres had been constantly cropped, without rest, for a third of a century. The writer hereof having tried his energies on it for one season near sixty years ago. Each year the showers of rain were washing its soil into the now reclaimed swamp, and yet continued to do so, until its productive capacity consisted principally of a few mullen stalks and scattered stunted rag weeds. But the constant taunting which the new owner of this impoverished forty acres got, he needed to arouse his energies, and to waken in him a new life. He began to investigate the drainage system, and this naturally led him to seek for more information, as the first taste had whetted his appetite for deeper draughts. He procured books on drainage, on "plant food," and on "how plants grow," as well as on the question of the source of the support of vegetation—how much from the air and how much from the earth. This opened a new field to his vision, more delightful than the fabulous vales of Arcadia. And as these studies of the natural and practical sciences were fascinating, they led him to ways and purposes which changed his whole moral, social and financial condition in life. There was a new and wide field of research and industry opened to his mind. He found that the main benefits of the drainage tile were not from the mere operation of carrying off the surplus water on the surface of the land. He soon discovered the great error of the past ages, that an open ditch was about as good for drainage as under ditching with tile. So he determined to redeem his forty acres by thorough tile drainage, although it was already dry enough for all purposes. But he would do it for that greater purpose, the retaining of the fertilizing gases of the atmosphere by leaching all of the drain water through the soil to the drains, instead of letting it pass off on the sueface, taking with it the atmospheric fertilizers together with the surface soil. In this way he proposed loosening up and opening the pores of the soil, letting in air and warmth, and then with clover and other fertilizers, preparing it for producing such crops as Providence, by the wise supervision of man, intended it should. He had seen that it was useless to add manure so long as heavy rains would wash off as much in an hour as he could haul on in a week. So he determined that drainage was the first thing to be done, so that the surplus water instead of passing off on the surface, and taking along with it the soil, manure, and the ammonia which comes down so copiously in snow and rain, but should pass through the soil to the drain, the soil retaining that which it had long been deprived of by man's neglect.

GUMBO'S GRAB BAG.

Speak, O lovely Ann Eliza, with a terrible coryza,
And a wheezing respiration full of sighs and husky moans,
With a constant lachrymation, and a nasal intonation,
From catarrhal inflammation o'er the turbinated bones!

Why, thou young and happy maiden, is thy conversation laden
With a copious addition of abortive b's and d's?
And from whence did you derive a red and swollen conjunctiva,
And a freqent inclination to incontinently sneeze?

Is this malady outrageous which you suffer with contagious,
Epidemic, or endemic? Tell from whence the thing arose,
Where its place of incubation, what its future destination!
Spake the lovely Ann Eliza, smiling sweetly, "No one nose." S. E. M.

"Got it!" he called out to a friend, as he limped up Michigan avenue.

"Ha! I knew you'd have it. Begin with a chill?"

"No."

"Backache?"

"No."

"Pains in the head?"

"No."

"Then it can't be the Grip."

"Oh, no. I've got my back pension—almost $1,300.—Detroit Free Press.

Scove Stacy, (meeting Rev. Jones in the postoffce)—"Have you escaped the epidemic thus far, Mr. Jones?

Rev. Jones—"I am happy to say that I have."

Scove Stacy—"Well, I have too, and I attribute it solely to the fact that I am blessed with a clear conscience."

Rev. Jones—"I beg your pardon, sir, but perhaps 'tis because you're such a hard case."

Scove Stacy—"That may be, but I think the only safe way of deciding the question is to leave it to some disinterested witness."

There will be no doubts for the future of the Adrian four-years-old, who, when sent for some pork steak the other day, walked boldly up to the markdt counter, and asked for "two pounds of pig, right off."—Times.

A good mot is attributed to Senator Vest in answer to the recent Republican fiction that he once won a saloon on a poker hand in Jefferson City and run it for one night. To a crowd of Republicans who were recently chaffing him in regard to it, he said:

"All I can say, gentlemen, is that if I had sold as poor whisky for 10 cents as your Vice-President sells for 20 the Missouri Democrats would have mobbed my house."

Not long ago Senator Voorhees of Indiana was visited at his home by one of his constituents, who wanted a pension.

"What is your case?" asked the Senator.

"I was in the Fenian raid on Canada in 1870" said the applicant.

"Did you get hurt?"

"My feelings were hurt badly," was the reply.

"My dear sir," said the Senator, "I will see that your case is referred to the committee on foreign affairs."

* * *

When the grippe takes an editor, he has it bad. It isn't simply a cold in the head, with a little extra development of the sneezing apparatus, but it takes the tuck right out of him, rolls him up in a heap and "puts him in his little bed" for a week or two. How it affects some of the brethren can be seen from these few clippings taken from exchanges:

Hotel clerk: "Check your grip, sir?" Guest (with the influenza): "Good Lord, yes; can you do it?"

The chest is simply a sac, according to the physicians. Then if you have the prevailing disease your chest is a grip-sac.

Mayor Cregier says he is determined to keep diseased hogs out of Chicago. The Chicago drummers out on the road who have la grippe will please take notice.

Patient: "That medicine you gave me for my grip, doctor, cured me entirely." Doctor (in surprise): 'Did it? Well, blamed if I don't try it myself. I can't get rid of mine."

Manager: "I shall expect you to play Desdemona next week." Actress: "What! Desdemona next week, with this grippe? Nevah!" "And why not, pray?" 'Imagine Othello raving over my lifeless body and in the most impassioned moment to have Desdemona give a loud double sneeze. Nevah!"

An exchange thinks that with 580 fatal cases of "la gripne" in Paris the American people, and the paragraphers in particular, should cease jeering and laughing. Very true. That is easily done; to cease laughing, particulary when one has the disease, is an easy matter; but will our esteemed contemporary tell us how to cease sneezing?

As the days begin to lengthen the g—p begins to strengthen.

NATIONAL W. C. T. U.

An Invitation Sent Out to the Non-Seceding White Ribboners of Iowa.

CHICAGO, Jan. 16.—An interesting circular, signed by President Frances E. Willard and her colleagues in office, was issued to-day. The full text was as follows:

The general officers of the National W. C. T. U. send greeting to the non-seceding white ribboners of the Iowa W. C. T. T., inviting all who are with the national in its policy of "no sectarianism in religion, no sectionalism in politics, no sex in citizenship, but each and all of us for prohibition by constitutional amendments, national and state, to hold meetings locally and pass resolutions to this effect.

Those local unions already organized in which a majority stand with the National W. C. T. U. should simply declare this fact and go on with their work as heretofore, waiting for the organization of the Iowa W. C. T. U.

We earnestly call the attention of all local and county W. C. T. U.'s throughout the nation to the fact that when any officers or members secede from our organizations, such members have gone out, and such officers have left their positions vacant. The W. C. T. U. remains intact, if it has but one white ribboner left. Therefore, do not reorganize that which is organized already, but let those who go out do the organizing and let those who remain elect officers and go on with their work as usual. These local auxiliaries should be named as always, "Women's Christian Temperance Unions." Report all such organizations to the proper state officials and to the national corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. B. Buell, No. 161 La Salle street, Chicago, and to the Union Signal, Chicago, the official organ of the National W. C. T. U. In response to many inquiries it should also be noted:

1 That the constitution of the National W. C. T. U. has never contained the words non-partisan and non-sectarian, hence these words have never been expurged therefrom.

2. The National W. C. T. U. has always been organically non-partisan because it has never made the slightest partisan requirements of any state auxiliary or of any local union. The National W. C. T. U. was unwilling to put the limitations and restrictions upon its membership which the Iowa W. C. T. U. imposes, but preferred to leave every society free to express its opinions as to methods of securing prohibition according to its judgment.

3. Loyalty to the National W. C. T. U. does not mean that white ribboners must indorse the Prohibition party. In Iowa, where Republicans have declared for the full and complete enforcement of the prohibitory law this would be clearly inconsistent. In Iowa, Dakota and Kansas the W. C. T. U. lends its influence to the Republican party because that party is loyal to prohibition, and the policy of the National has always been to stand by the party that stands by the home.

THE NEW ELECTION LAW.

The Detroit Tribune prints a letter, which is republished below, from Attorney General Trowbridge in reference to the new election law, about which there has been so much said:

"You desire to be informed in particular as to whether in my opinion said act applies to the approaching annual 'township elections' to be held in April next. In reply I am constrained to say that in my judgment the act does not apply to township elections aforesaid. The act seems to be confined under the provisions of article No. 4, section No. 20, of the constitution of this State, I have not expressed an opinion to the effect that the act applies to all elections. I did at one time express the opinion that said act would so far as its provisions relate to the ballots and booths apply to cities and municipalities, but I am, on further deliberation, satisfied that it would so apply only in case of general elections as above defined."

We are glad to see J. S. Strong out again after his quite severe illness.

Mrs. A. C. Wing, of Buffalo, N. Y., a sister of J. S. Kinney, is visiting the latter.

Our Britton correspondent is neither dead nor speechless, but he has the grippe awfully. The latest telegraphic news from him indicates that he will be on deck next week.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Scammell of Detroit, will give one of their popular musicales at the Baptist church, Tuesday evening, Feb. 4th, 1890. All lovers of good music should not fail to hear them. Tickets at Baker & Hall's drug store, 25cts. and 15cts.

Clerk Moffett of the Lilley House has worn an extra smiling countenance for the past two days. Upon enquiring the cause we learned that a nine pound boy arrived at his home last Tuesday morning. We smoke on special occasions.

The company of friends, who so nicely surprised S. W. Temple and wife on their 18th marriage anniversary, (evening of Jan. 18th,) had such a pleasant time that they concluded to pass their visits around on an average of at least one each week. Last Friday evening they surprised Mrs. Emma J. Hoag and family, and this week we expect a half dozen or more families are holding their breath to know who will be next.

A large crowd of young people attended the M. E. social at the residence of W. C. Heck, last evening. The following musical program was presented, after which a ballot was taken for the handsomest lady and gentleman in the house, with the following result:

THE OLD FOLKS' PARTY.

The regular annual "Old Folks" party has been fixed, and the date will be Friday evening of next week, Feb. 7th. It will be given at the Opera House and the music will be furnished by Chas. Wolff's celebrated orchestra of Toledo. The orchestra will consist of six pieces, and all the best of the old fashioned tunes will be given, to accompany the old fashioned dances. These annual parties have always given the best of satisfaction and the committee in charge this year will spare no pains to make this party eclipse all former ones. Admission tickets to the gallery will be placed at 15 cents. Reserved seats at Adamsons for 25 cents. The following are the committee having charge of the party, and these names are a sufficient guarantee that the affair will be a noteworthy event in the social entertainments of the season:

COM. ON ARRANGEMENTS—M. E. Conklin, B. A. Garlinghouse, J. H. Aten, L. P. Tribou, C. F. Patterson, Fred Rosacrans, W. W. Whiting.

COM. ON INVITATION—M. E. Conklin, B. A. Garlinghouse, J. H. Aten, Tecumseh; Fred B. Wood, W. A. Todd, Adrian; Will T. Eccles, Ed. R. Smith, Clinton; Jno. VanVleet, Geo. Sanford, Ridgeway; Chas. Bidwell, Will. Raymond, Raisin; Rice Hendershot, Granville Mills, Macon; Am. Welch, Dell Cairns, Franklin.

FLOOR MANAGERS—Jas. H. Aten, M. E. Conklin, B. A. Garlinghouse, W. W. Whiting.

Township correspondents are requested to send in their letters one day earlier hereafter. Do not forget it.

L. B. Stevens, our foreman, who was in the embrace of the grippe most of last week, returned to his duties yesterday.

Mrs. M. P. Gott, who now resides with a brother at Three Rivers, has concluded to prolong her visit here another week.

Everybody will attend the Old Folks party next week Friday evening, because they know they will have a jolly good time.

Go to the opera house Wednesday evening next and hear what the Past Dept. Com'r of the G. A. R. has to say and how he will say it.

The annual meeting of the Tecumseh & Macon Telegraph Co. will be held Monday afternoon, Feb. 10th, at Grand Army hall in Tecumseh.

James Monaghan has returned to Tecumseh and taken the lease of the Central hotel, David Hunt the former landlord, having removed to Martinsville.

Our subscribers, whose time expires Jan. 1, should bear in mind that the thirty day limit to secure reduced rates will expire February 1. Be wise in time.

Don't fail to hear the Scammell concert at the Baptist church, Tuesday evening next. Mr. Scammell is an organist of fine reputation in Detroit and the State.

Ionia is making extended preparations to accommodate the coming annual session of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows in that city. There will be no lack of accommodations.

A "Sketch of the Lenawee County Savings Bank, Adrian, Mich., on the occasion of its twentieth anniversary" is the title of a neatly printed booklet just received from that institution. It shows the bank to be in a flourishing condition.

The County Grange will meet with Fairfield Grange, Thursday, Feb. 6, at 10 o'clock a.m., at which time the installation of officers will take place. Gov. Luce will act as installing officer and give a talk in connection. All fourth degree members are invited to be present.

It is Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Lockwood now. The marriage nuptials were celebrated Tuesday evening, at the residence of James Mitchell, which made Elmer and Miss Ada Van Valkenburg one and inseparable. The guests were numerous and so also were the presents.

Ten Nights in a Bar room was played to a small house last Tuesday evening. The audience was not overcome by any heavy acting and the performance was extremely amateurish. Those who attended thought the Tecumseh dramatic club gave a better rendition of the play.

In her last letter to the Journalist, Miss Cora DePuy has this complimentary notice, for which many thanks: "The TECUMSEH HERALD has passed its 40th birthday and fifteenth year under its present management. S. C. Stacy, the editor and publisher, did himself proud by issuing an eight page Christmas supplement, the largest ever gotten out by a weekly in the state. The issue, mailed, weighed 150 pounds.

The state prohibition organ which was printed in Chicago but published at Lansing, has been sold to Hon. G. P. Waring, of Ridgeway. It will be consolidated with the Lance, and the new paper, with both county and state editions, will be called the "Michigan Messenger." Mr. Waring will take general charge of the business department and D. W. Grandon will act as editor. They will make a strong team and a good paper. Here's success to the new combination.

Now is the time to pay up.

A. W. Spafford, (Teanie) arrived in this village last Saturday from Conway Springs, Kansas, and has been spending a few days with relatives and friends.

Mrs. Wm. Bresie met with an accident last week from a fall. Dr. Howell was called and pronounced one rib fractured and two or three others cracked. She is doing as well as could be expected.

The W. C. T. U. will give a Tea, at the home of Mrs. Jennie Hall, on Chicago street, Friday January 31st. Tea served from 5 to 7 at ten cents. Proceeds of supper go to help defray the expenses of a missionary in the lumber region.

James A. Jackson of Macon who is 80 years old, has a tobacco box and a copy of the Holy Bible given to him by his father who carried them through the Revolutionary war and were owned by his father before him, which makes them about 150 years old.

La grippe disarranged our weeks program very seriously last week. Our local news was short, and some copy which was prepared was left out entirely as we could not get it in type. But we are settled down again this week at the old stand and prepared to rush business.

The electric light subscriptions now number 26 for the arc light. In addition to these several parties have agreed to take as many incandescent lights as an arc light would cost. Among the latter is the HERALD office. An arc light would be of little use to us, while eight or ten incandescent lights distributed through the work rooms would be well worth their cost.

The subscribers in Tecumseh for the electric light—arc lights—are as follows; Anderson & Co. agree to take six, Satterthwaite Bros & Boyd, two; and the following firms one each—Anderson Bros, C. A. Wright & Co, Geo. Heesen & Son, John J. Orr, W. F. Anderson, Harris & Hiteshu, W. H. Sutfin, W. W. Marsh, Post Office, H. McClure Co, Machan Bros, E. C Keneddy, Spayde Bros, James Lowry, S. P. Hosmer, W. F. Marks, Jacob Cheever, Birdsell & Glenn.

Song by male Quartette. Popular prices. Reserved seats 25c. General admission for adults, 20 cents, down stairs; 15cts. in gallery. Children 12 years old and under admitted to any part of the house for 15cts. Reserved seats at Adamsons.

Mrs. Newton Bryan of Raisin met with a very serious accident one day last week. While sitting near the stove with her back toward it, her dress caught fire in some mysterious way, and she was seriously burned before the flames could be extinguished. Dr. Frost was summoned as soon as possible, and the patient seemed to be doing well last week. On Tuesday of this week a fever set in and her symptoms have taken a change for the worse. Her friends hope for the best, but they regard her condition as very critical.

The Agent of the United States Savings, Loan and Building Company of St. Paul, Minn, has made arrangements with B. F. Steinhoff for the placing of this profitable investment stock in our city, and Messrs. O. P. Bill's & Co, Bankers, are the collectors for the Treasurer, the Germania Bank of St. Paul. This brings to our doors the privilege of joining one of the strongest and best managed Building Associations of that thrifty growing city. The business is over $25,000 per month, and the profits for the last year 21½ per cent. The object is to encourage personal thrift by the saving of a monthly portion of one's means, which in seven years nearly doubles the amount to each member.

THE ANGELUS.

This masterpiece by the great French painter, Jean Francois Millet, was purchased at auction in Paris last summer by the American Art Association of New York. The cost, $115,000 and duties, amounting in all to about $150,000, was nearly $400 a square inch, as the picture is only 18x21 inches in size. This is the highest price ever paid for a single picture.

A Beautiful Photo Etching, as represented above, the full size of the original, in which the greatest care and artistic ability have been employed to reproduce all the beauties of the painting, has been prepared specially to be sent as a free premium to every annual subscriber of the weekly edition of

CONGRESSIONAL

OUTPUT FOR THE COMING WEEK IN OUTLINED DETAIL.

What the Federal Fathers in the Senate and House Will Do—The Great Fight Over the Rules in the Lower Branch of the Solons.

WASHINGTON, January 27.—The Senate made such good progress with the consideration of bills on the calendar during the past week, that senators are quite in the humor for continuing it for a time, and therefore much of the week to come will likely be devoted to the consideration of unobjected measures already reported from the committees. The record made by the Senate during the past week was as follows: Monday, three bills passed; Tuesday, eleven; Wednesday, fourteen; Thursday, eighteen; total, forty-six. If this record could be kept up to the end of the session, the Senate would far transcend the efforts of any of its predecessors. But beginning with the first week in February the Blair educational bill is to be taken up, and the calendar is likely to be neglected after that in favor of disputed measures.

The first bill at the head of the calendar now is the bill to further provide for the disposal of certain public lands in the state of Alabama. This bill has been debated and it now holds its place at the head of the calendar by unanimous consent of the Senate during the absence of Senator Morgan. When he returns it will be taken up and disposed of. The direct tax bill is near the head of the calendar, but it is not likely it will be pressed to immediate consideration. When it is reached, some day will be set probably for its consideration.

No days for fixed speeches have been set aside, but it is possible that Senator Call will address the Senate further on his Florida swamp land bill. Senator George, too, may address the Senate at some length in reply to Senator Ingalls. In his speech on the race question last Thursday, the Kansas senator quoted from a letter in which it was said that two of Senator George's sons were among the "Swamp Angels" charged with terrorizing the negroes in a recent Mississippi election.

Senator George's friends have suggested to him the necessity of replying to Senator Ingalls' attack on the Democrats of Mississippi and on his family. Should Senator George consent to do this, the audience which was disappointed in the absence of personality and invective from Senator Ingalls' speech of Thursday, may have an opportunity of hearing the Kansas senator in his more familiar roll.

The Senate committee on territories will not make a report on the Idaho bill this week, because the Supreme Court has not yet rendered its decision in the "Test oath" case. This matter was under discussion in the Supreme Court consulting room Saturday, and an effort will be made to get a decision a week from tomorrow, when the court will adjourn over for a month.

The nominations of Indian Commissioner Morgan and Superintendent of Indian Schools Dorchester will likely be disposed of in the secret session of the Senate during the coming week. They would have been taken up before, but the public printer disappointed the Senate in the matter of the testimony taken before the committee on Indian affairs, which was to have been laid before the senators in printed form. It is thought that both of these nominations will be confirmed.

Greater doubt is expressed in regard to the fate of Ex-Governor Warmoth, of Louisiana, collector of the port of New Orleans, whose lease is now in the hands of the commerce committee and against whom there is a strong array in the ranks of his own party.

The House is likely to have a very exciting time during the coming week. Monday will be devoted as usual, principally to the call of the roll of states for the itroduction of bills. Tuesday the committee on elections will attempt to call up the first of the contested election cases—that of Smith vs. Jackson, from the fourth district of West Virginia. The Republican majority of the committee on elections has made a report in favor of unseating Jackson (Dem) and seating Smith (Rep). The Democrats have determined in caucus to resist the effort of the Republicans to call up and consider election cases before the House has adopted a full code of rules. They claim that it is the policy of the majority to insert as many Democrats as possible, working under general parliamentary law, so as to increase their majority to a safer number. They will resort to such filibustering as is possible under the rulings of the speaker, and when all other methods fail they threaten to leave the House, hoping that with the death of Judge Kelly and the absence through sickness of othtr members on the Republican side, it will be impossible to obtain a quorum without them.

THE "WASHINGTON CAPITAL"

Passes Into New Hands—A Big Newspaper Deal.

WASHINGTON, January 27.—The Post says: "An important change takes place today in the management of our esteemed contemporary, the Evening Capital, that paper having passed into the hands of Edward D. Cowen, Willis B. Hawkins and William C. Buskett, who propose to stock it with new ideas and push it to the front rank of enterprising and independent journalism. The gentlemen named are fully competent to do this, and they have a field before them that has by no means been overworked. Mr. Hawkins was lately connected with the Post, and his editorial abilities have been widely recognized. Mr. Cowen is well well versed in all branches of city newspaper work, was formerly connected with the Chicago News, and is a traveled and cultured gentleman. Mr. Buskett is also from the west, and possessed of the business qualifications and experience that peculiarly fit him for a successful supervision of the practical affairs of the office. The combination appears to be in all respects an admirable one, and the Evening News (that is to be), and the Sunday Morning News (that is to take the place of the Sunday Capital) have the promise of a popular and prosperous career.

AN EARTHQUAKE

In Tennessee Causes a Panic Among the People.

CAIRO, ILL., January 27.—The officers of the steamer City of Baton Rouge report a heavy shock of earthquake at Bellfoot Lake, Tenn., at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. A veritable panic resulted among the inhabitants of the locality, who have not forgotten the great earthquake of many years ago, when New Madrid and much of the adjacent territory sunk beneath the Mississippi.

A Big Blaze.

GARDNER, MASS., January 27.—The Stevens block here was burned, with a loss of $85,000, mostly in small amounts by numerous tenants.

STEPPED BEFORE A TRAIN.

One Man Killed and Two Seriously Wounded.

NEWARK, O., January 27.—A shocking accident happened just this side of Granville Junction, by which one man, name unknown, was instantly killed, and two others terribly injured, one certainly fatally. They were all in the employ of the State at the reservoir. The men missed the train, and were walking down the track to Newark. Being on the south track they stepped out of the way of an east-bound train, only to be struck by a west-bound passenger, No. 8. The one least hurt was Isaac Hall, aged about thirty-five, who has charge of the reservoir at Lakeside. His injuries are about the head and side, having been struck by the side of the engine.

The other is Abraham Stough, blacksmith at Thurston, O. He is aged about sixty, and will certainly die, the injuries being to the side and internally. Both men have families. The one killed outright had his head frightfully crushed in, the shoes upon being knocked off his feet. His age is about eighteen years. All of the men live at Thurston, and came to the junction on the same train. The yardmen, with an engine, went up and brought the men here, where the two men still alive were placed in charge of the physician of the company, the coroner taking charge of the dead. It is the worst accident yet happening on the double track.

TRAIN BLOWN FROM THE TRACK.

Coaches and Sleeper Take Fire—Passengers Narrowly Rescued.

MONUMENT, COL., January 27.—The Rio Grande express, which left Colorado Springs at 5:30 in the afternoon, was blown from the track at Monument depot, several people being wounded. The wind was blowing a perfect hurricane. Several houses were unroofed.

The two coaches and sleeper immediately took fire, and for a few moments it looked as though the twenty imprisoned passengers would be purned to death. The hurricane fanned the flames to a furnace, but by heroic efforts the trainmen succeeded in extinguishing them before any person was burned. Among the passengers injured are Assistant General Freight Agent Zimmerman, of the Rio Grande. None of the others are fatally hurt.

The wind seems to have been general throughout the state, and in many towns no little damage has been done to buildings, telephone and telegraph wires. It is reported that the wind was unusualy severe on Pike's Peak, and that at the railway grading camps, half way up the mountains, several men were killed by being blown over the precipice. This report, however, is not confirmed.

SONS OF THE REVOLUTION.

Twenty States Now Represented in the Order—Annual Congress to be held at Louisville.

NEW YORK, January 27.—At a meeting of the national executive committee of the Society of Sons of American Revolution, held in New York City, the admission of six new states to the Order was reported, making twenty in all. An application for the organization of a branch of the society in New York, signed by Chauncey M. Depew, General Alexander S. Webb, Hon. William H. Arnoux, Rev. John M. Leavitt, D. D., LL D., and others, was acted upon favorably. Mr. James Otis, of New York City, was elected treasurer-general of the society. The annual congress of the organization will take place at Louisville in April next.

Acknowledgment for Public Sympathy.

WASHINGTON, January 27.—The following card has been given to the press: "The sympathy of friends has been so generously extended to Mr. and Mrs. Blaine in the great grief which has befallen their household, that they are unable to make personal response to each. They beg therefore that this public recognition be accepted as the very grateful acknowledgment of a kindness which has been most helpful through the first days of an irreparable loss."

Corset Manufacturers Failure.

CORTLAND, N. Y., January 27.—P. H. and Delos McGraw, of McGrawville, manufacturers of corsets, have assigned. No statement is yet made of their affairs. They also control the Monarch Wagon Works and Carr's grist mill. All claims against the latter concerns, will, it is said, be paid in full. Warner Brothers, of New York, will continue the corset business.

Indian School House.

WABASH, IND., January 27.—The school house at White's Indiana Manual Labor Institute near this city, where Indian children are being educated at Government expense, burned last night with nearly all its contents. The origin of the fire is a mystery. There was an insurance on the property of $500.

Sea Wreckage.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., January 27.—The United States revenue cutter, U. S. Grant, Captain Stodder, who has arrived from New York, reports that while passing from Montauk to Block Island, she sighted a lot of wreckage, among which was a pilot house of either a steamer or barge; also deck beams and knees.

Blockaded Train Released.

SACRAMENTO, CAL., January 27.—The west-bound overland passenger train on the Central Pacific route, which has been in blockade on the Sierra, between Emigrant Gap and Sacramento, since January 15, has been released at last, and passed through here from Colfax at 2:05 o'clock in the morning enroute for San Francisco.

The Shoemakers' Strike.

HAVERHILL, MASS., Jrnuary 27.—The state board of arbitration agreed with J. H. Winchell & Co., shoe manufacturers, that Monday night be fixed as the limit of time in which to come to an arrangement with their striking employees. It is believed that a settlement will be reached then.

Engineer and Fireman Badly Hurt.

SACRAMENTO, January 27.—A passenger train which left here at 7 o'clock last evening for Knight's Landing, was derailed between Davisville and Swingles. The accident was caused by a washout. The track walker reports that Engineer C. J. Cox and the fireman were nearly killed.

Snow Storm—Lives Lost and Property Destroyed.

VENNA, January 27.—There has been a prolonged snow storm in Hungary and Styria. Houses are demolished and many lives have been lost. St. Martin's cathedral, at Pressburg, is damaged by the storm.

A Pawn Broker Dead.

NEW YORK, January 27.—J. B. Simpson, founder of the well known pawn broking firm of Simpson in this city, died, aged 79 years, leaving a large fortune. He was a native of England, but has been in business here since 1840.

Westinghouse Electric Company.

NEW YORK, January 27.—The attorney of the Westinghouse Electric Company denies a rumor that that company has absorbed the electric subway company.

JESUS IN SIMON'S ARMS.

LESSON V, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, FEB. 2.

Text of the Lesson, Luke ii, 25-35—Commit Verses 29-32—Golden Text, Luke ii, 32—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

In this lesson, as in all Scripture, Jesus is the center—Simeon and Anna, and even Joseph and Mary, are mentioned only because of their interest in and relation to Him whose name is above every name.

25. "And behold there was a man in Jerusalem whose name was Simeon; and this man was righteous and devout, looking for the consolation of Israel" (R. V.). Were there not many righteous men in Jerusalem looking for the Messiah? It does not so appear, or, if there were, here was a choice one who walked with God.

"And the Holy Spirit was upon him." Here is the secret of power to please God: "By My Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts;" "Ye shall receive power after the Holy Spirit is come upon you;" "Tarry in Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high" (Zec. iv, 6; Acts i, 8; Luke xxiv, 49). Let us earnestly seek to be "filled with the Spirit" again and again, and anew for every service.

26. "And it had been revealed unto him by the Holy Spirit;" "The things of God none knoweth save the Spirit of God;" "The Spirit of Truth will guide you into all truth" (I Cor. ii, 11; John xvi, 13). It is impossible for the natural man to understand spiritual things; but being born of God, born from above, and having become partakers of the Divine nature, we have One in us who is perfect in knowledge, who Himself wrote all Scripture, and if we will only be still and hearken diligently, He will guide us into all truth.

27. "And he came by the Spirit into the temple." Notice the three things said of the Spirit in relation to Simeon: The Holy Spirit was upon him, He led him into the temple just at the right time to see the child Jesus; and so he seems to have led Anna also (vs. 38).

28. "Then he received Him into his arms and blessed God" (R. V.). Simeon has never forgotten that day when in his arms lay the Holy Child Jesus, God manifest in the flesh. He had long before received Him by faith into his heart, but now his hands handled and his very eyes saw the Deliverer of whom all the prophets had written—the seed of the woman, the babe born of a virgin.

29. "Lord, now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace, according to Thy word." No fear of death here; he had lived with God on earth, his eyes had now seen the beginning of the fulfillment of that which the prophets had foretold, and he was ready to go out and wait with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob for the complete fulfillment of the mercy promised to them (Mic. vii, 20). There was peace in his soul because he believed the Word of God; he was ready to depart.

30. "Mine eyes have seen Thy salvation." Jacob said, "I have waited for Thy salvation, O Lord." Isaiah sang, "Behold, God is my salvation." Moses and David sang, "The Lord is my strength and song, and He is become my salvation" (Gen. xlix, 18; Isa. xii, 2; Ex. xv, 2; Ps. cxviii, 14). But Simeon is privileged to say that he had seen the salvation of Jehovah, for whatever salvation has been, is, or ever will be manifest on this earth, is always through Jehovah, God of Israel, God manifest in the flesh, Jesus of Nazareth. "Salvation is of the Lord," and "Salvation is of the Jews," and the time will come when these words shall be fulfilled, "The Lord hath comforted His people, He hath redeemed Jerusalem: the Lord hath made bare His holy arm in the eyes of all the nations, and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God" (Jonah ii, 9; John iv, 22; Isa. lii, 9, 10).

31. "Which Thou hast prepared before the face of all people." Whether we look at the person of Jesus or the words or works of Jesus all is of God. As to His body it is written, "A body hast Thou prepared me;" and as to His words and works hear these words, "The Father who sent me, He gave me a commandment, what I should say and what I should speak;" "The Father that dwelleth in me, He doeth the works" (Heb. x, 5; John xii 49; xiv, 10). Then as to the great salvation which He has wrought out for Israel and for all the people it is written, "I have trodden the wine press alone; and of the people there was none with me" (Isa. lxiii, 3). The salvation of Jehovah is a fully prepared salvation presented to us for our acceptance.

32. "A light for revelation to the Gentiles, and the glory of Thy people Israel" (R. V.). The Spirit through Simeon speaks again of that which He had before spoken through the prophets; that the Messiah should not only be the glory of Israel but a light to lighten the nations (Isa. xlii, 6; xlix, 6); and in Isa. lx, 1-3, we have the order of events, where we are told that darkness shall cover the earth and gross darkness the people, but the Lord shall arise upon Israel and His glory shall be seen upon them, and the Gentiles shall come to their light and kings to the brightness of their rising. Let any one read carefully the whole of Isa. lx without perverting Scripture by trying to make Israel and Zion signify the church, and they will see how plain it is.

The Lord is now a light to every individual, Jew or Gentile, who will receive him, but when He has become the Glory of Israel as a nation, then shall all nations flow to them and be enlightened with their light. The Glory of the Lord refers to the visible manifestation of His presence, as when the Glory of the Lord filled the tabernacle and temple (Ex. xl, 34, 35; I Ki. viii, 11). Jesus Himself repeatedly referred to His future coming in power and glory (Matt. xvi, 27; xix, 28; xxiv, 30; xxv, 31); and in Ps. cii, 16 it is written that, "When the Lord shall build up Zion He shall appear in His Glory." Then shall all the earth be filled with the Glory of the Lord, even as He hath sworn (Num. xiv, 21).

33. "And His Father and His mother were marveling at the things which were spoken concerning Him." In our last lesson (vs. 19) we saw Mary keeping and pondering the sayings of the shepherds, and in our next lesson we shall see her keeping and evidently pondering the sayings of Jesus (vs. 51), while here we see her marveling at the sayings of Simeon. If the prophets did not fully comprehend many things which the Spirit caused them to write, as is evident from I Pet. i, 10, 11, it is not to be wondered at that neither Mary nor Joseph should comprehend all that the shepherds and Simeon said about this holy child Jesus. We should not think it strange if we cannot fully comprehend all that is written concerning the details of His coming in glory and the thousand years, and the new heavens and earth; but whatever is written we should meekly receive in our hearts, and prayerfully ponder, constantly expecting light, and sure that in due time the Holy Spirit will give all that we can bear.

34. "Behold this child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel." How Israel's Messiah could be for the fall of many in Israel must have been at that time a dark saying, and yet the Spirit through Isaiah had said, "He shall be for a stone of stumbling and for a rock of offense to both the houses of Israel; * * * and many among them shall stumble and fall," etc. (Isa. viii, 14, 15.)

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage, bearing date the 16th day of January, A. D. 1884, made and executed by Jeremiah M. Burleson and Julia E. Burleson, his wife, of the first part, to Enoch G. Cook, of Tecumseh, Michigan, of the second part, which mortgage was on the 17th day of January, A. D., 1884, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for the county of Lenawee, Michigan, in Liber 109 of Mortgages, on page 591, and which said mortgage was afterwards on the 27th day of May, A. D. 1885, duly assigned by the said Enoch G. Cook to Moses Bartlett, which deed of assignment was on the 30th day of January, A. D., 1890, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee county aforesaid, in Liber 118 of Mortgages, on page 669; by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative. And whereas there is at this date claimed to be due and unpaid, as principal and interest on the said mortgage, the sum of One Thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty-one and 12-100 Dollars ($1751.12) and no proceedings have been instituted at law or in equity to collect the same. Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale, and the statutes of the state of Michigan, in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the money now, as aforesaid, due and owing on said mortgage, together with interest to accrue thereon, and the costs and charges of this foreclosure, including an attorney fee of Fifty-five Dollars, as provided by law and stipulated for in said mortgage, I shall on the 21st day of April, A. D. 1890, at the east front door of the court house in the city of Adrian, in said county of Lenawee, (that being the place where the circuit court for said county is holden) sell at public vendue to the highest bidder, all those parcels of land situate in the township of Macon, in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan known and described as follows, to wit: The east half of the northwest quarter of section five (5) town five (5), south, of range five (5) east. Also all that part of the east half of the southwest quarter of said section five (5), town five (5) south, of range five (5) east, bounded as follows: Beginning at the intersection of the Tecumseh and Saline road, so called, with the east line of the southwest quarter of said section five (5); thence running southwesterly in center of said road six (6) rods and twelve (12) links; thence north parallel with east line of said southwest quarter of section five (5) to the north line of said southwest quarter of section five (5); thence east to northeast corner of said southwest quarter of section five (5), thence south to the place of beginning, containing eighty-one acres of land, more or less.

Dated Jan. 23d, 1890.

EXECUTOR'S AUCTION SALE.

AT 10 o'clock in the forenoon on the 8th day of February, A.D., 1890, I will offer for sale to the highest bidder upon the premises herein described, the home farm of the late Francis Coates, deceased, consisting of about One Hundred and Fifty-three acres on the southeast quarter of section four in township of Ridgeway in this county. The farm is divided by the W. St. L. & P. R. R., and will be offered as a whole, and also in two parcels as divided by said railroad, there being about 83 acres on the west and 70 acres on the east side side thereof. This farm lies practically in the rapidly growing village of Britton—a few rods only from the depot of two railroads, postoffice, stores, etc., and is very desirable for farming purposes, about fifty acres of said premises being good timbered land, with good opportunity to divide a considerable portion into valuable village lots. Terms made known on the day of sale. All rights reserved.

JOHN BRITTON, Executor of the last will of Francis Coates, deceased.

ESTATE OF WILLIAM TAYLOR.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 20th day of January in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of William Tayler, an insane person.

On reading and filing the petition of Charles C. Tefft, guardian of said insane person, praying for the allowance of his fourth annual account as such guardian; and for such other order and decree, as to this court shall seem proper.

It is Ordered, That Monday, the 17th day of February next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the next-of-kin of said insane person and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR PAIN

WHAT IT IS. SIX STANDARD VIRTUES.

ITS EFFICACY.—1. Its effects are prompt. 2. Its relief is sure. 3. Its cures are permanent. 4. Its cures; no return of pain. 5. Its cures in all cases. 6. Used according to directions.

1st. It is in one word a cure; it is not merely a relief and in no sense a cure-all; it is the product of scientific research.

2nd. It strengthens while it soothes and subdues, heals and cures; it literally cures pain.

3rd. Its effects are curative and permanent as to the whole group of muscular miseries and nervous agonies.

4th. It does not merely irritate the outer surface, nor does it merely soften or relax a constricted muscle. To its specific action a superior curative virtue is superaded.

5th. It penetrates deeply but gently; searchingly and surely, seeking the pain-spot in an effort to conquer.

6th. Each constituent of the formula has a recognized intrinsic virtue to serve most surely the cure of pain.

CLEOPATRA.

Being an Account of the Fall and Vengeance of Harmachis, the Royal Egyptian.

Thus it came to pass that the Pharaoh, crowned of Khem, stood among eunuchs and waiting women behind the couch of Egypt's Queen while the feast went merrily and the wine-cup passed. And ever Antony sat, his eyes fixed upon the face of Cleopatra, who from time to time let her deep glance lose itself in his, and then for a little while their talk died away. For he told her tales of war and deeds that he had done—ay, and love-jests such as are not meet for the ears of women. But at naught took she offense; rather, falling into his humor, would she cap his stories with others of a finer wit, but not less shameless.

At length, the rich meal being finished, Antony gazed at the splendor round him.

"Tell me, then, most lovely Egypt!" he said, "are the sands of Nile compact of gold, that thou canst, night by night, thus squander the ransom of a King upon a single feast? Whence comes this untold wealth?"

I bethought me of the tomb of the divine Menka-ra, whose holy treasure was thus wickedly wasted, and looked up, so that Cleopatra's eyes caught mine; but, reading my thoughts, she frowned heavily.

"Why, noble Antony," she said, "surely it is naught! In Egypt we have our secrets, and know whence to conjure riches at our need. Say, what is the value of this golden service, and of the meats and drinks that have been set before us?"

"Maybe, a thousand sestertia."

"Thou hast understated it by half, noble Antony! But, such as it is, I give it thee and those with thee as a free token of my friendship. And more will I show thee now. I, myself, will eat and drink ten thousand sestertia at a draught."

"That can not be, fair Egypt!"

She laughed, and bade a slave bring her vinegar in a glass. When it was brought she set it before her and laughed again, while Antony, rising from his couch, drew near and sat himself at her side, and all the company leant forward to see what she would do. And this she did: From her ears she took one of those great pearls, which last of all had been drawn from the body of the divine Pharaoh; and before any could guess her purpose let it fall into the vinegar. Then came silence, the silence of wonder, and slowly the peerless pearl melted in the acid. When it was melted she took the glass and shook it, then drank the vinegar to the last drop.

"More vinegar, slave!" she cried, "my meal is but half finished!" and she drew forth the second pearl.

"By Bacchus, no! thou shalt not!" cried Antony, snatching at her hands; "I have seen enough." And at that moment, moved thereto by I know not what, I called aloud:

"The hour falls—the hour of the coming of the curse of Menka-ra!"

An ashy whiteness grew upon Cleopatra's face and furiously she turned upon me, while all the company gazed wondering, not knowing what the words might mean.

"Thou ill-omened slave!" she cried. "Speak thus once more and thou shalt be scourged with rods!—ay, scourged like an evil-doer—that I promise thee, Harmachis!"

"What means the knave of an astrologer?" asked Antony. "Speak, sirrah! and make clear thy meaning, for those who deal in curses must warrant their wares."

"I am a servant of the Gods, noble Antony. That which the Gods put in my mind that must I say; nor can I read their meaning," I answered humbly.

"Oh! oh! thou servest the Gods, dost thou, thou many-colored mystery!" (This he said having reference to my splendid robes.) "Well, I serve the Goddesses, which is a softer cult. And there's this between us: that though what they put in my mind I say, neither can I read their meaning," and he glanced at Cleopatra as one who questions.

"Let the knave be," she said impatiently, "to-morrow we'll be rid of him. Sirrah, begone!"

I bowed and went; and, as I went, I heard Antony say: "Well, a knave he may be, for that all men are, but this for thy astrologer—he hath a royal air and the eye of a king—ay, and wit in it."

Without the door I paused, not knowing what to do, for I was bewildered with misery; and, as I stood, some one touched me on the hand. I glanced up—it was Charmion, who, in the confusion of the rising of the guests, had slipped away and followed me.

For in trouble, Charmion was ever at my side.

"Follow me," she whispered; "thou art in danger."

I turned and followed her. Why should I not?

"Whither go we?" I asked, at length.

"To my chamber," she said. "Fear not, we ladies of Cleopatra's Court have small good fame to lose. If any one by chance should see us, they'll think that 'tis a love-tryst, and such are all the fashion."

I followed, and, presently, skirting the crowd, we came, unseen, to a little side entrance that led to a stair up which we passed. The stair ended in a passage; we turned down it till we found a door on the left hand. Silently Charmion entered, and I followed her into a dark chamber. Being in she barred the door, and, kindling tinder to a flame, lit a hanging lamp. As the light grew strong I gazed around. The chamber was not large and had but one casement closely shuttered. For the rest, it was simply furnished, having white walls, some chests for garments, an ancient chair, what I took to be a tiring table, whereon were combs, perfumes and all the frippery that pertains to woman, and a white bed with a broidered coverlid, over which was hung a gnat gauze.

"Be seated, Harmachis," she said, pointing to the chair.

I took the chair, and Charmion, throwing back the gnat gauze, sat herself upon the bed before me.

"Knowest thou what I heard Cleopatra say as thou didst leave the banqueting hall?" she asked presently.

"Nay, I know not."

"She gazed after thee, and, as I went ever to her to do some service, she murmured to herself: 'By Serapis, I will make an end! No longer will I wait; to-morrow he shall be strangled!'"

"So?" I said; "it may be; though, after all that has been, scarce can I believe that she will murder me."

"Why canst thou not believe it, O thou most foolish of men? Dost forget how nigh thou was to death there in the Alabaster Hall? Who saved thee then from the knives of the eunuchs? Was it Cleopatra? Or was it I and Brennus? Stay, I will tell thee. Thou canst not yet believe it, because in thy folly thou dost not think it possible that the woman who has but lately been as a wife to thee can now in so short a time doom thee to be basely done to death. Nay, answer not—I know all; and this I tell thee—thou hast not measured the depth of Cleopatra's perfidy, nor canst thou dream the blackness of her wicked heart. She had surely slain thee in Alexandria had she not feared that thy slaughter, being noised abroad, might bring trouble to her. Therefore has she brought thee here to kill thee secretly. For what more canst thou give her?—she has thy heart's love, and is wearied of thy strength and beauty. She has robbed thee of thy Royal birthright and brought thee, a King, to stand amidst her waiting women behind her at her feasts; she has won from thee the great secret of the holy treasure!—"

"Ah, thou knowest that!"

"Yea, I know all; and to-night thou seest how the wealth stored against the need of Khem is being squandered to fill up the wanton luxury of Khem's Macedonian Queen! Thou seest how she hath kept her oath to wed thee honorably! Harmachis—at length thine eyes are open to the truth!"

"Ay, I see too well; she swore she loved me, and, fool that I was, I did believe her!"

"She swore she loved thee!" answered Charmion, lifting her dark eyes; "now will I show thee how she doth love thee. Knowest thou what was this house? It was a priest's college; and, as thou wottest, Harmachis, priests have their ways. This little chamber aforetime was the chamber of the Head Priest, and the chamber that is beyond and below was the gathering room of the other priests. All this the old slave who keeps the place told me, and also she revealed what I shall show thee. Now, Harmachis, be silent as the dead and follow me!"

She blew out the lamp, and by the little light that crept through the shattered casement led me by the hand to the far corner of the room. Here she pressed upon the wall, and a door opened in its thickness. We entered, and she closed the spring. Now we were in a little chamber, some five cubits in length by four in breadth; for a faint light struggled into the closet, and also the sound of voices, whence I knew not. Loosing my hand, she crept to the end of the place, and looked steadfastly at the wall; then crept back, and, whispering "silence!" led me forward with her. Then I saw that there were eyeholes in the wall, which pierced it, and were hidden on the farther side by carved work in stone. I looked through the hole that was in front of me, and this I saw. Six cubits below was the level of the floor of another chamber, lit with fragrant lamps, and most richly furnished. It was the sleeping place of Cleopatra, and there, within ten cubits of where we stood, sat Cleopatra on a gilded couch, and by her side sat Antony.

"Tell me," Cleopatra murmured—for so was this place built that every word spoken in the room below came to the ears of the listener above—"tell me, noble Antony, wast pleased with my poor festival?"

"Ay," he answered in his deep soldier's voice; "ay, Egypt, I have made feasts, and been bidden to feasts, but never saw I aught like thine; and this I tell thee, though I am rough of tongue and unskilled in pretty sayings such as women love, thou wast the richest sight of all that splendid board. The red wine was not so red as thy beauteous cheek, the roses smelt not so sweet as the odor of thy hair, and no sapphire there with its changing light was so lovely as thy eyes of ocean blue."

"What! praise from Antony? Sweet words from the lips of him whose writings are so harsh! Why, 'tis praise, indeed!"

"Ay," he went on, "'twas a royal feast, though I grieved that thou didst waste that great pearl; and what meant that hour-calling astrologer of thine, with his ill-omened talk of the curse of Menka-ra?"

A shadow fled across her glowing face. "I know not; he was lately wounded in a brawl and methinks the blow has crazed him."

"He seemed not crazed, and there was that about his voice which doth ring in my ears like some oracle of fate. So wildly, too, he looked upon thee, Egypt, with those piercing eyes of his, like one who loved and yet hated through the love."

"'Tis a strange man, I tell thee, noble Antony, and a learned. Myself, at times, I almost fear him, for deeply is he versed in the ancient arts of Egypt. Knowest thou that the man is of royal blood, and once he plotted to slay me? But I won him over, and slew him not, for he had the key to secrets that I fain would learn; and, indeed, I love his wisdom, and to listen to his deep talk of all hidden things."

"By Bacchus, but I grow jealous of the knave! And now, Egypt?"

"And now I have sucked his knowledge dry and have no more cause to fear him. Didst thou not see that these three nights I have made him stand a slave amid my slaves, and call aloud the hours as they fled in festival? No captive king marching in thy Roman triumphs can have suffered keener pangs than that proud Egyptian Prince as he stood and shamed behind my couch."

Here Charmion laid her hand on mine and pressed it, as though in tenderness.

"Well, he shall trouble us no more with his words of evil omen," Cleopatra went on slowly; "to-morrow morn he dies—dies swiftly and in secret, leaving no trace of what his fate hath been. On this is my mind fixed; of a truth, noble Antony, it is fixed. Even as I speak the fear of this man grows and gathers in my breast. Half am I minded to give the word even now, for till he be dead I breathe not freely," and she made as though to rise.

"Let it be till morning," he said, catching her by the hand; "the soldiers drink, and the deed will be ill done. 'Tis pity, too, I love not to think of men slaughtered in their sleep."

"In the morning, perchance, may the hawk have flown," she answered, pondering. "He hath keen ears, this Harmachis, and can summon things that are not of the earth to aid him. Perchance even now he hears me in the spirit; for, of a truth, I seem to feel his presence breathing round me. I could tell thee—but no, let him be! Noble Antony, be my tiring woman and loose me this crown of gold; it chafes my brow. Be gentle, hurt me not—so."

He lifted the uræus crown from her brows, and she shook loose her heavy weight of hair that fell about her like a garment.

"Take thy crown, Royal Egypt," he said, speaking low, "take it from my hand; I will not rob thee of it, but rather set it more firmly on that beauteous brow."

"What means my Lord?" she asked, smiling and looking into his eyes.

"What mean I? Why, then, this; hither thou camest at my bidding, to make answer to the charges laid against thee as to matters politic. And knowest thou, Egypt, that hadst thou been other than thou art thou hadst not gone back to Queen it on the Nile; for of this I am sure, the charges against thee are true, in fact. But being what thou art—and look, thou! never did Nature serve a woman better!—I forgive thee all. E'en for the sake of thy grace and beauty I forgive thee that which hath not been forgiven to virtue, or to patriotism, or to the dignity of age! See, now, how good a thing is woman's wit and loveliness, that can make Kings forget their duty and cozen e'en blindfolded Justice to peep ere she lifts her sword! Take back thy crown, O Egypt! my care now it is that, though it be heavy, it shall not chafe thee."

"Royal words are those, most noble Antony," she made answer; "gracious and generous words, such as befit the Conqueror of the world. And touching my misdeeds in the past—if misdeeds there have been—this I say, and this alone, then I knew not Antony. For, knowing Antony, who could sin against him? What woman could lift a sword against one who must be to all women as a God—one who, seen and known, draws after him the whole allegiance of the heart, as the sun draws flowers? And what more can I say and not cross the bounds of woman's modesty? Why, only this—set that crown upon my brow, great Antony, and I will take it as a gift from thee, by the giving made doubly dear, and to thy uses will I guard it. There now am I thy vassal Queen, and through me all old Egypt that I rule doth homage unto Antony the Triumvir, who shall be Antony the Emperor and Khem's Imperial Lord."

And he, having set the crown upon her locks, stood gazing on her, grown passionate in the warm breath of her living beauty, till at length he caught her by both hands, and, drawing her to him, kissed her thrice, saying:

"Cleopatra, I love thee, Sweet!—I love thee as ne'er I loved before!"

She drew back from his embrace, smiling softly; and as she did so the golden circlet of the sacred snakes fell, being but loosely set upon her brow, and rolled away into the darkness beyond the ring of light.

Even in the bitter anguish of my heart I saw the omen and knew its evil import. But these twain took no note.

"Thou lovest me!" she said most sweetly; "how know I that thou lovest me? Perchance 'tis Fulvia whom thou lovest—Fulvia, thy wedded wife?"

"Nay, 'tis not Fulvia; 'tis thee, Cleopatra, and thee alone. Many women have looked favorably upon me from my boyhood up, but to never a one have I known such desire as to thee, O thou Wonder of the World, like unto whom no woman ever was! Canst thou love me, Cleopatra, and to me be true—not for my place and power, not for that which I can give or can withhold, not for the stern music of my legions' tramp, or for the light that flows from my bright star of fortune; but for myself, for the sake of Antony, the rough captain, grown old in camps? Ay, for the sake of Antony the reveler, the frail, the unfixed of purpose, but who never yet did desert a friend, or rob a poor man, or take an enemy unawares? Say, canst thou love me, Egypt? for if thou canst, why, I am more happy than though to-night I sat crowned in the Capitol at Rome absolute Monarch of the World!"

And ever as he spoke she gazed on him with wonderful eyes, and in them shone a light of truth and honesty such as was strange to me.

"Thou speakest plainly," she said, "and sweet are thy words unto mine ears—sweet would they be even were things otherwise than they are, for what woman would not love to see the world's master at her feet? But things being as they are, why, Antony, what can be so sweet as thy sweet words? The smooth harbor of his rest to the storm-tossed mariner—surely that is sweet! The dream of heaven's bliss that cheers the poor ascetic priest on his path of sacrifice—surely that is sweet! The sight of Dawn, the rosy-fingered, coming in his promise to glad the watching Earth—surely that is sweet! But, ah! not one of these, nor all dear, delightful things that are, can match the honey-sweetness of thy words to me, O Antony! For thou knowest not—never canst thou know—how drear hath been my life and empty, since thus it is ordained that in love only can woman lose her solitude! and I have never loved—never might I love—till this happy night! Ay, take me in thy arms, and let us swear a great oath of love—an oath that may not be broken while life is in us! Behold! Antony! now and for ever do I vow most strict fidelity unto thee! Now and forever am I thine, and thine alone!"

Then Charmion took me by the hand and drew me thence.

"Hast seen enough?" she asked, when once more we were within the chamber and the lamp was lit.

"Yea," I answered; "my eyes are opened."

CHAPTER XXIII.

THE PLAN OF CHARMION; CONFESSION OF CHARMION, AND ANSWER OF HARMACHIS.

FOR some while I sat with bowed head, and the last bitterness of shame sank into my soul. This, then, was the end! For this I had betrayed my oaths; for this I had told the secret of the Pyramid; for this I had lost my Crown, my honor, and, perchance, my hope of Heaven! Could there be another man in the wide world so steeped in sorrow as I was that night? Surely not one! Where should I turn? What could I do? And even through the tempest of my torn heart the bitter voice of jealousy called aloud. For I loved this woman, to whom I had given all; and she at this moment—she was— Ah! I could not bear to think of it; and in my utter agony my heart burst forth in a river of tears such as are terrible to weep!

Then Charmion drew near to me, and I saw that she, too, was weeping.

"Weep not, Harmachis!" she sobbed, kneeling at my side. "I can not endure to see the e'weep. Oh! why wouldst thou not be warned? Then hast thou been great and happy, and not so now. Listen, Harmachis! Thou didst hear what that false and tigerish woman said—to-morrow she hands thee over to the murderers!"

"It is well," I gasped.

"Nay, it is not well. Harmachis, give her not this last triumph over thee. Thou hast lost all save life; but while life remains hope remains also, and with hope the chance of vengeance!"

"Ah!" I said, starting from my seat. "I had not thought of that. Ay, the chance of vengeance! It would be sweet to be avenged!"

"It would be sweet, Harmachis, and yet this—Vengeance is an arrow that in falling oft pierces him who shot it. Myself—I know it," and she sighed. "But a truce to talk and grief. Time will there be for us twain to grieve, if not to talk, in all the heavy coming years. Thou must fly—before the dawning of the light must thou fly. Here is a plan. To-morrow, ere the dawn, a galley that but yesterday came from Alexandria bearing fruit and stores sails thither once again, whereof the Captain is known to me, but to thee he is not known. Now, I will find thee the garb of a Syrian merchant, and cloak thee as I know how, and furnish thee with a letter to the Captain of the galley. He shall give thee passage to Alexandria, for to him thou wilt seem but as a merchant going on the business of thy trade. 'Tis Brennus who is Captain of the Guard to-night, and Brennus is a friend to me and thee. Perchance he will guess somewhat; or, perchance, he will not guess; at the least, the Syrian merchant shall safely pass the lines. What sayest thou?"

"It is well," I answered wearily; "little do I reck the issue."

"Rest thou then here, Harmachis, while I make these matters ready; and, Harmachis, grieve not overmuch; there are others who should grieve more heavily than thou." And she went, leaving me alone with mine agony that rent me like a torture-bed. Methinks, had it not been for that fierce desire of vengeance which from time to time flashed across my tormented mind as the quick lightning o'er a midnight sea, my reason had left me in that dark hour. At length I heard her footstep at the door, and she entered, breathing heavily, for in her arms she bore a sack of clothing.

"All is well," she said; "here is the garb with spare linen, and writing tablets, and all things needful. I have seen Brennus also, and told him that a Syrian merchant would pass the guard an hour before the dawn. And, though he made pretense of sleep, methinks he understood, for he answered, yawning, that if they but had the pass word, 'Antony,' fifty Syrian merchants might go through about their lawful business. And here is the letter to the Captain—thou canst not mistake the galley, for she is moored along the right—a small galley, painted black, as thou dost enter on the great quay, and, moreover, the sailors make ready for sailing. Now will I wait here without while thou dost put off the livery of thy service and array thyself."

When she was gone I tore off my gorgeous garments and spat upon them and trod them on the ground. Then I put on the modest robe of a merchant, and bound round me the tablets, on my feet the sandals of untanned hide, and at my waist the knife. When it was done, Charmion entered once again and looked on me.

"Too much art thou still the Royal Harmachis," she said. "See, it must be changed."

Then she took scissors from her tiring table, and bidding me to be seated, she cut off my locks, clipping the hair close to the head. Next she found stains of such sort as women use to make dark the eyes and mixed them cunningly, rubbing the stuff on my face and hands and on the white mark in my hair where the sword of Brennus had bitten to the bone.

"Now art thou changed—somewhat for the worse, Harmachis," she said, with a dreary laugh; "scarce myself should I know thee. Stay, there is one more thing," and going to a chest of garments, she drew thence a heavy bag of gold.

"Take thou this," she said; "thou wilt have need of money."

"I can not take thy gold, Charmion."

"Yea, take it. It was Sepa who gave it to me for the furtherance of our cause, and therefore 'tis fitting that thou shouldst spend it. Moreover, if I want it, doubtless Antony, who is henceforth my master, will give me more; he is much beholden to me, and this well he knows. There, waste not the precious time in haggling o'er the pelf—not yet art thou all a merchant, Harmachis;" and, without more words, she thrust the pieces into the leather bag that hung across my shoulders. Then she made fast the sack containing the spare garments, and so womanly thoughtful was she, hid therein an alabaster jar of pigment, wherewith I might stain my countenance afresh, and, taking the broidered robes of mine office that I had cast off, hid them in the secret passage. And so at last all was made ready.

"Is it time that I should go?" I asked.

"Not yet awhile. Be patient, Harmachis; for but one little hour more must thou endure my presence, and then, perchance, farewell forever."

I made a gesture signifying that this was no hour for sharp words.

"Forgive me my quick tongue," she said; "but from a salt spring do bitter waters well. Be seated, Harmachis; I have heavier words to speak to thee before thou goest."

"Say on," I answered; "words, however heavy, can move me no more."

She stood before me with folded hands, and the lamp light shone upon her beauteous face. Idly I noticed how great was its pallor and how wide and dark were the rings about the deep black eyes. Twice she lifted her white face and strove to speak, twice her voice failed her; and when at last it came 'twas in a hoarse whisper.

"I can not let thee go," she said—"I can not let thee go unwitting of the truth. Harmachis, 'twas I who did betray thee!"

I sprang to my feet, an oath upon my lips; but she caught me by the hand.

"Oh, be seated," she said—"be seated and hear me; then, when thou hast heard, do unto me as thou wilt. Listen! from that evil moment when, in the presence of thy uncle Sepa, for the second time I set eyes upon thy face, I loved thee—how much, little canst thou guess! Think upon thine own love for Cleopatra, and double it, and double it again, and, perchance, thou mayst come near to my love's mighty sum. I loved thee, day by day I loved thee more, till in thee and for thee alone I seemed to live. But thou wast cold—thou wast worse than cold; thou didst deal with me not as a breathing woman, but rather as the instrument to an end—as a tool wherewith to grave thy fortunes. And then I saw—yea, long before thyself thou knewest it—thy heart's tide was setting strong towards that ruinous shore whereon to-day thy life is broken. And at last came that night, that dreadful night, when, hid within the chamber, I saw thee cast my kerchief to the winds, and with sweet words cherish my Royal rival's gift. Then—oh! thou knowest in my pain I betrayed the secret that thou wouldst not see—and thou didst make a mock of me, Harmachis! Oh the shame of it!—thou, in thy foolishness, didst make a mock of me! I went thence, and within me were rising all the torments which can tear a woman's heart, for now I was sure that thou didst love Cleopatra! Ay, and so mad was I, even that night was I minded to betray thee; but I thought—not yet; not yet; to-morrow he may soften. Then came the morrow, and all was ready for the bursting of the great plot that should make thee Pharaoh. And I, too, came—thou dost remember—and again thou didst put me away when I spake to thee in parables, as something of little worth, as a thing too small to claim a moment's weighty thought. And, knowing that this was because—though knewest it not—thou didst love Cleopatra, whom now thou must straightway slay, I grew mad, and a wicked spirit entered into me, possessing me utterly, so that no longer was I myself. And because thou hadst scorned me, this, to my everlasting shame and sorrow I did!—I passed into Cleopatra's presence and betrayed thee and those with thee, and all our holy cause, saying that I had found a writing which thou hadst let fall and read all this therein."

I gasped and sat silent; and gazing sadly at me she went on:

"When she understood how great was the plot, and how deep its roots, Cleopatra was much troubled; and, at first, she would have fled to Sais or taken ship and run for Cyprus, but I showed her that the ways were barred. Then she said that she would cause thee to be slain, there, in the chamber, and I left her so believing; for, at that hour, fain was I that thou shouldst be slain—ay, even if I wept out my heart upon thy grave. But what said I anon?—vengeance is an arrow that oft falls on him who looses it! So was it with me; for between my going and thy coming she hatched a deeper plan. She feared that to slay thee would but be to light a fierce fire of revolt; but she saw that to bind thee to her, and having left men awhile in doubt, to show thee faithless would strike the imminent danger at its roots and wither it. This plot once formed, being great, she dared its doubtful issue, and—need I go on? Thou knowest, Harmachis, how she won; and thus did the shaft of vengeance that I loosed fall upon my own head. For on the morrow I knew that I had sinned for naught, that on the wretched Paulus had been laid the burden of my betrayal, and that I had but ruined the cause whereto I was sworn and given the man I loved to the arms of wanton Egypt."

AROUND THE COUNTY.

Addison wants a fire engine, if they can buy one for nothing.

The wheelbarrow factory of Hudson is doing a thriving business now.

Congressman Allen has named Nelson Chappell as the new postmaster at Morenci.

Ex-Sheriff Whitmore has taken his old position as private detective for the Lake Shore Railway Co.

Governor Luce has accepted an invitation from the county grange to speak before the organization at Jasper on the 6th of February.

One who has been a victim of the grippe compares the sensation to that of "a misfit skull, that is too tight across the forehead and that pinches behind the ears."

Grandma Allen, of Devil's Lake, is over eighty-five years of age, and on New Years day presented a beautiful quilt composed of 1,500 pieces to Miss Anna Jenkins, of Addison.

Some one had the impudence to ask us the other day what had become of the Blissfield fair association. Gone into the hole bored on Worthy Wood's farm, says the Advance.

It is reported that the Lake Shore will accede to the request of Blissfield people and run the Fayette train to that place morning and evening, when the time table is next changed.

The Locust Corners correspondent of the Hudson Post says: We think if some of the overseers of highways were obliged to ride over some of the roads they worked last fall, late work on highways would grow beautifully less.

While C. D. Keyes, of Clinton, was in attendance at the poultry show, the popular epidemic laid hold of him and he went home to a doctor. The chicken show was a success for which Mr. Keyes is entitled to much of the credit. But a rooster with the pip feels as much like crowing as a man with the grippe.—Adrian Press.

Two of Brooklyn's young men went skating yesterday, but "the ice was thin and they both fell in." They didn't dare go home to ma, so they got the key to the school-house and went down into the furnace room and got dry. Claud and Art must be more careful in the future.—Brooklyn Exponent.

Girls, don't throw away your old rubbers or overshoes. Save them for the agents of the chewing gum manufactories, who are now buying them in all parts of the country. Pulverized rubber boots and overshoes, flavored with vanilla, strawberry and other extracts, make the nicest chewing gum on record.

Gen. Spalding, of Monroe, is after Allen's seat in Congress, and C. R. Miller, of Adrian, is casting longing eyes in that direction. There are many republican friends of Captain Allen who think he will succeed himself. Meanwhile the democrats are standing back and watching the contest.—Ann Arbor Argus.

The Lake Shore and Michigan Southern railroad company does not believe in allowing their freight to clog, as they have ordered 1,500 new cars in addition to those ordered to be delivered in 30 days. Four thousand five hundred new cars have been ordered by the Lake Shore since the first of the year.

Editor Reed, of the defunct Clayton Clarion, has returned to the office of the Benzonia Banner, where he will "set" and cogitate. "Of all sad words of tongue or pen the saddest are these, it might have been.," if Clayton business men had died with la grippe six months ago and given place to others of later and more approved make.—Addison Courier.

An exchange makes a straight hit when it says that the editor of a country newspaper will grant more favors for thanks in a month than any other business man in a year. It is also a well-established fact that he will receive more all around cussing in a week than any other man in a lifetime. That's the reason he's not afraid of hades.

Fears having been expressed as to the safety of the old school-house, the board appointed a mechanical committee, consisting of D. D. Nichols, F. P. Smalley and B. F. Horton, to make an investigation, and they report the building "all right." Years ago there was the same fear about this structure, but it still stands unmoved by the storms.—Morenci Observer.

Farmers, be on your guard. Agents traveling about the country representing the National Union Association, and selling certificates of membership, the object of which they say will enable the farmers to purchase wagons, buggies and farming implements at manufacturer's prices, are frauds, and you should give them the toe of your No. 10 boot and at the same time let the dog loose.

L. Prang & Co., the Boston fine-art publishers, have announced the result of their national flower campaign. The golden rod is victor by a large majority. The result is as follows: Seventy per cent. of all votes for golden rod; sixteen for mayflower, and fourteen scattering for daisy, mountain laurel, dandelion, sunflower and others.

Marriage is not always a failure and a couple in Fairfield are excellent proof thereof. Mr. and Mrs. Henry White were married January 17, 1830, and the sixtieth anniversary of their marriage was duly observed at their home in Fairfield. Mr. White is 81 and the bride is 77, and both are in very good health. There are many older people than they, but there are fewer instances where the husband and wife have for sixty years traveled life's journey together.—Blissfield Advance.

It is now certainly known that whenever the Mackinaw road at the sink-hole goes in, Horseshoe pond, three miles away, rolls up, which shows a sub connection. Mr. W. K. Choate, of Adrian, is the owner of that pond and can see under ground as far as any other man, when money is to be made by it. We do not charge that Choate has tunneled a passage from the pond to the railroad to undermine the road, and run the stock down to a point where he can advantageously load up with it, but one may think what he pleases.—Adrian Press.

In overhauling the oat bins on the second floor of Beardsell's store, a startling discovery was made. The workmen espied a quantity of oat hulls under a plank of the floor, and upon pulling up a portion of the flooring the chaff from fifty bushels of oats was taken out from where it had been carried by mice in twenty years of "splendid piracy." The chaff was packed in so tightly to a depth of eighteen inches between the ceiling and floor that it was as hard and unyielding as the floor itself. The bins have been lined with tin to provide against further operations by the cunning thieves.—Hudson Gazette.

The "religious" editor of the Adrian Press, Philander Perkins, must have been trying to play a game of poker when he read the proof of the item about Ohio's new senator, which item calls him "Calvin Bruch."—Morenci Observer.

Our worthy and esteemed brother of the Observer, whom we wish all happiness and prosperity, is a liar. The maligned individual above never played a game of poker, whist, chess, dice, dominoes, penuckle, penny-ante, seven-up, old sledge, old maid, euchre, progressive euchre, in his life, eu-chre you! The types simply had the grippe. They stood for Brice, but could only make "Bruch" of him, though the Ohio legislature made him a senator.—Press.

"Tell you how I knocked the grippe," quoth "Scotty," the tonsor, Saturday night. "Pains in the back of my neck and other parts of the body apprised me that it was coming; so I sent word up home to have some hot onions ready at noon. (Does the razor pull any?) I ate five or six of them and had the balance made into a poultice, which I placed on my chest and jumped into bed. Didn't I sweat, though! In the morning I felt as fresh as a daisy, and haven't had a suspicion of a pain since. (Once over enough?) Saw the recipe in the paper, and thought I'd try it. The boys in the shop said there was no escape—I was sure to have it, but I fooled 'em. Next!"—Hudson Gazette.

A copy of the Daily Mercury of Dec. 6, an English paper published at Shanghai, reached this office Jan. 14. Folded therein was a Chinese journal, printed on one side of paper as thin as tissue, and after carefully perusing it, we are bound to say that it is a very entertaining and enterprising sheet. From its richly illustrated columns we take these paragraphs:

"Rat-tail soup is particularly healthy at this season of the year.

"If you are affected with that fashionable disease called "La Grippe," quit eating rice and double your usual allowance of opium.

"Hon. F. M. Fisk, an American citizen, is now in this Kingdom, and with his mysterious movements handling bottles and packages, the police are hereby notified to closely watch him.

"A question now agitating the people of the United States is, When will the high-muck-a-mucks appoint a new postmaster for Morenci? Morenci is a large shipping town on the River Bean.

"This is the mildest winter which Old Hyson, the most ancient inhabitant of China, has seen in many years. Fleas are thick."—Morenci Observer.

Capt. Gramkie, an old Petersburgh "salt," and A. A. Walker, U. S. District Attorney of Summerfield, sailed on the Raisin on a recent Sunday. A sudden squall struck the craft as they were weathering Cape Rio, near the Rose palisades, and the captain went down and sat on the bottom of the briny deep, while the lawyer studied the marine statutes, hanging to the upturned keel. Capt. Gramkie, after resting awhile below, got ashore, with a mud-turtle hanging to each thigh, both rubbers gone and part of one heel—swallowed by a shark. He yelled to the attorney to pray, but the latter never had and couldn't. He tried to sing, but the grippe changed his voice to a gobble, and he ceased, feeling that such singing was an abomination in the sight of Heaven. He cut off a button, however, and chucked it into his hat for the heathen—his regular mission contribution—and was looking forgiven, when a revenue cutter rescued him, but claimed salvage, which he disputed as the wreck was not abandoned. Both navigators are mateless old merinos, and they grieved at the peril that threatened to forestall their headship of families. The prospects are brighter now, and they not only attend the protracted meetings, but give liberally of their brass buttons, that the heathen may no longer hitch his suspenders with a shingle nail.—Adrian Press.

THE LADIES' HOME JOURNAL.

Filled with the best things for woman's benefit and pleasure, the February Ladies' Home Journal fulfils its reputation as the best modern magazine for the home. There is a practical ring about everything in the pages of this monthly that at once inspires confidence. Every article shows as much careful thought as if it were the only feature in the magazine. Nothing is printed hap-hazard, the most insignificant atom of advice seems to have been carefully weighed. It is this which makes the Journal so valuable to woman. Her every want is understood, her every need is filled, and there is not a girl or woman but can find something of genuine interest in each number. Only the most experienced pens are employed, such for example as Mrs. A. D. T. Whitney, Dr. Talmage, Josiah Allen's Wife, Kate Tannatt Woods, Maud Howe, Mary J. Holmes,—these, and more than a score of other famous names are in the February issue. Published at 433-435 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa. One Dollar a Year.

It is rumored that the supply of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup is not equal to the demand. Druggists should prepare themselves for all emergencies as the people rely on them for this remedy.

HIGH SCHOOL HAPPENINGS.

La Grippe has not skipped the high school. Several members have been very busy with it.

Monday's essay was delivered by Miss Mame Crowell in her usual eloquent manner.

The High School Lyceum met last Friday afternoon and listened to the discussion on the subject stated last week. It was decided in favor of the negative.

For some unknown reason, Miss Grayson did not put in an appearance last Tuesday morning and the singing lesson was omitted. We hope she will be with us in the future, and that the pupils will take more interest in the singing.

German II. began the translation of "Wilhelm Tell" last Monday.

Mr. Robt. Hicks has designed a very neat roll, with the names of the members of the Class of 90. It is worth looking at. R. F. H.

EDITOR STEARNS PINING AWAY.

When the Saline Observer man called on us recently, for the first time, he surveyed us with attention, and then went home and wrote: "We had expected to meet a big, fat, ruddy-faced knight of the Faber, but instead met a rather dyspeptic-looking individual." Alas! 'tis true. The first picture represents us as we looked when we first tackled this business. Then were we "fat" and "ruddy-faced," and proudly buttoned our coat over an epigastrium as rich and round as a prize pumpkin. Sixteen years of trying to do right, warming ourself by subscription wood and subsisting on donation "wind-falls" and cabbage (pre-empted by insects), credited on account, have worked out their natural conclusions in our system and brought us to the condition of abdominal atrophia and stricture of the gall ducts, observed by the Observer man. We do not expect to be reimbursed in the present world, for all this waste of fatty tissue and brain ooze. The gratitude we earn in one edition of the paper, outlaws in the human breast before the next, yet we are looking hopefully forward to the end, for that meed of praise when it shall be said of us: "Well, the poor devil is gone! there were worse men in the world."—Adrian Press.

Tecumseh's new handle factory is ready for business. The handles will be all ready for the sturdy farmer as soon as he gets the grippe—Hudson Post.

G. W. Carter's failure illustrates the fact that no manufacturer is without appreciation save in his own community. His forge would be burning brightly today if the products of his industry and skill had commanded the respect at home that they deserved; but his acknowledged ability and honesty and long continuance in business counted for naught with a large number of citizens, who preferred a vehicle made elsewhere, and never as much as called on Mr. Carter for estimates. They ignored an institution that has been a credit to Hudson, and with proper appreciation might have been preserved to the village on a sound and prosperous basis.—Hudson Gazette.

The above remark could be truthfully applied to Tecumseh, both in the carriage making and other lines of business. We have known business men in Tecumseh to send to Toledo for a job of printing when they could have obtained the same job in better style, at a cheaper figure, at home, and paid for it in trade besides.

A large drove of Idaho ponies arrived in town yesterday and are now on sale here.

PROTECTION WANTED.

Grangers Ask to Share the Benefits Manufacturers Receive.

WASHINGTON, January 27.—J. H. Brigham, of Delta, Ohio, worthy master of the National Grange of Patrons of Husbandry, appeared before the ways and means committee in the morning. He stated that the organization which he represented was composed of men of every shade of political belief. They dissented on the question of protection and free trade, but they were substantially agreed that whatever policy might be adopted for other industries and interests should be applied to agriculture. If the manufacturers were to be protected the farmers should also be protected. Whatever protection could be accorded to agriculture ought to be given.

He asked for the imposition of the following duties on farm products: Barley, 25 cents a bushel; barley malt, 35 cents; beans, 50 cents; peas, 25 cents; hops, 12 cents; potatoes, 25 cents; hay, $4 a ton; hides, 10 per cent. ad valorem; eggs, 5 cents a dozen; apples, 25 cents a bushel.

He thought that adequate protection should also be given to raw silk and live animals, but could not give the exact duty that should be imposed. He did not think free wool would benefit the farmer.

$800 FOR ONE SILVER DOLLAR.

The Fourth One of the Coinage of 1804 Believed to be Found.

ST. PAUL, January 27.—Numismatists will be interested to know that Dr. Edward Walther, a prominent Germon physician of this city, now has in his possession a silver dollar of the coinage of 1804. In that year four such dollars were minted. The whereabouts of three are known, but for years the fourth has been missing. Dr. Walther found it in the possession of an old Norwegian in the southern part of Minnesota, who brought it from the depths of a stocking and had kept st for many years. The doctor gave $150 for the coin. The listed value of this coin is $800. Many spurious "fourth dollar" have been palmed off on the unsuspecting, but there is no doubt as to the genuineness of Walther's find. He announces his intention of keeping the coin in his private collection.

THE PAN-AMERICANS CATCH IT.

National W. C. T. U. Reproves Them for Indulging in Wine at Banquets.

CHICAGO, January 27.—The National W. C. T. U., in an address has issued over the signature of President Francis E. Willard, and addressed "To the South American, Central American and Mexican Commissioners of the Pan-American Congress," states that the ladies read with surprise that, during the round of banqueting to which the nation's guests were subjected, intoxicating liquors were served upon every occasion and indulged in by the Pan-American delegates.

The W. C. T. U. expresses regret at this fact and assures the Southern delegates that no better end can be subserved by them while in this country than to study the vast benefits of a prohibitory law as practiced in eight states of the Union.

BOUND AND GAGGED.

The Night Clerk and Robbed the Postoffice.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., January 27.—Night Clerk L. L. Roy at the postoffice here, was early yesterday bound and gagged by two masked men who pounded the combination knob off the safe with a sledge hammer and robbed the valut of $500 in money, $1,900 in postage stamps, and several hundred dollers worth of jewelry. All the registered bags were cut open and the first class packages taken. Postmaster Walker thinks the robbers secured several thousand dollars or more, as the amount of money in these packages is not known. The robbers were in the office several hours and after the robbers left Roy freed himself and gave the alarm.

The Fourth Death.

COLUMBUS, O., January 27.

The sadness caused by the horrible explosion of Friday evening has been increased by the death of another victim. Eddie Maotte, the three-year-old son of Mrs. Maotte, the woman killed outright, died at 8 o'clock last evening. The little fellow suffered the most intense pain all day, and about an hour before his death was seized with violent spasms. He died in one of these spasms.

Important Ship Arrivals.

NEW YORK, January 27.—Arrived: Steamers Adriatic, from Liverpool; State of Indiana, Glasgow; Egypt, London; Moravia, Hamburg; Sir William Armstrong, Hamburg; Sorrento, Hamburg; Agann, Kingston; Saale, Bremen; America, Bremen; Colorado, Hull; Orinoco, Berma; Crane, Mediterranean ports.

Nearly all the steamers arriving from Europe experienced terrrbly severe weather and sustained more or less damage.

Riots in Portugal.

LISBON, January 27.—Riots have occurred at Lagos, in the provinces of Algarue, and it is reported that they were in the nature of a Republican uprising. The Dia denies this, and asserts that the trouble was caused by some insubordination soldiers, who forced the gates of the barracks in order to take part in a popular demonstration against the British ultimation.

An Illinois Fire.

CHICAGO, ILL., January 27.—A special to the Tribune from Mason, Illinois, says: a fire in the morning destroyed St. Furo's drug store, Miller's clothing house, Druget's saloon, and a number of other buildings. At last accounts the fire had not been got under control.

At Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., January 27.—Arrived Steamer Euildford Carthagna. She lost two life boats and upper bridge in a gale. She passed considerable wreckage off the coast, consisting of barrels, staves, etc.

German Cool Minds.

BERLIN, January 27.—The coal miners of the Bochum district have resolved, on account of the approaching election of the Reichstag, to defer their proposed strike until March.

Gales on the English Coast.

LONDON, January 27.—The heavy gales prevaient in England for the past two days have increased in violence, and a hurricane is causing much damage in the southern portion of the island.

A Chinook in Montana.

HELENA, MONT., January 27.—Helena is enjoying the first chinook wind of the year. The thermometer has risen thirty degrees since Thursday, and the streets are running with water from the melted snow.

Tammany Gets There.

NEW YORK, January 27.—Edward P. Hagan, a prominent Tammany politician, has been appointed deputy street cleaning commissioner.

Petroleum Found.

JOHNSTOWN, N. Y., January 27.—Petroleum has been struck here at a depth of 915 feet.

THE HERALD FOR 1890.

On the 25th day of May last the HERALD entered upon the fortieth year of its publication. The 15th day of November last completed fifteen years under its present management, and we can truthfully say that the paper never had more friends or truer ones in Northern Lenawee than it has today. But, like Cæsar, we are ambitious. We aim for a larger list and a wider field to swing in, and our terms for 1890 have been adjusted with that purpose in view.

OFFER NO. ONE.

We have made arrangements with that wide awake illustrated farm magazine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct to the address of any of our subscribers who will pay up all arrearages and a year in advance. The subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. It costs you nothing. The two papers at our full rate of $1.50 per year.

OFFER NO. TWO.

The modern magazine may be taken as embodying the best literature of the world, as the magazine editor pays the highest prices to novelists, scientists, statesmen, soldiers and even kings and princes for the best they can furnish in the literary line.

You can obtain the Cosmopolitan, which gives you in a year nearly fourteen hundred pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including six hundred pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point of interest and execution at its regular price, only $2 50, and the HERALD free.

OFFER NO. THREE.

Ropp's Commercial Calculator is a practical arithmetic for practical purposes. It contains a large variety of useful, accurate and convenient tables, together with simple, short and practical methods for rapid calculations. Any subscriber paying arrearages and one year in advance, or any new subscriber paying one year in advance at full rates, $1.50 per year, will receive a copy of this book free.

OFFER NO. FOUR.

The tendency of the times is to lower prices. We offer a liberal reduction in rates for the coming year. We have adopted both a cash and a credit rate. You can pay your money and take your choice. We will furnish the HERALD alone

The Plight of a Louisiana Gentleman—He Loses His Finger Nails and Hair.

The following is an extract from a letter written by Mr. William S. Loomis, of Shreveport, La., under date of September 15th, 1888:

"For a year I was afflicted with a horrible case of blood poison, and upwards of five months of that time I was unable to do work of any kind. My finger nails came off, and my hair dropped out leaving my head as clean and smoothe as if it had been shaved. I consulted the best local physicians, and spent hundreds of dollars for medicines of different kinds but without receiving the slightest benefit. I was advised finally to visit Hot Springs. This I did, but becoming disgusted with the treatment I was receiving there, commenced taking Swift's Specific (S.S.S.) The effect that S.S.S. had on me was truly wonderful. I commenced to recover after taking the first bottle, and by the time I had taken twelve bottles I was entirely cured—cured by Swift's Specific (S.S.S.) when the world-renowned Hot Springs had failed.

"WM. S. LOOMIS, Shreveport, La."

S.S.S. is entirely a vegetable remedy; contains no Mercury, Potash, or any mineral or poison. We have a complete treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases, which will be mailed free to those who will send us their address. THE SWIFT SPECIFC CO., Atlanta, Ga.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

The series of revival meetings are being held this week.

Sheriff Baldwin of Adrian was in the village on business Friday.

Miss Alice Carlinghouse of Tecumseh, spent Sunday with the Miller sisters.

E. W. Rappleye and wife are visiting friends in Dundee and Toledo this week.

Mrs. John Beckley is very sick at present writing, with a relapse of la grippe.

Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Andrews of Ohio, visited Mr. and Mrs. Burt Nichols Tuesday.

Mrs. F. J. Temple visited Mrs. Alf. Lucking of Detroit, last week, returning Saturday.

Chas. Underwood had a relapse of la grippe last week, and was quite sick for several days.

Some of our citizens attended the farmers' club, held at Mr. VanNess' in Raisin, last Friday evening and report a very pleasant time.

W. F. Horton and wife of Millington, Mich, visited their cousins, H. J. Williams and wife, last week, returning to their home Monday.

The librarian, Miss Salome Clark, while entertaining the Emperor at her fireside last week, was relieved of her library duties by Miss Kittie Clark.

Willie Harrington while on his way to Blissfield last week, sprained his ankle by jumping from his cart, and has been obliged to use crutches since.

We received a letter and paper recently from Marshal D. Snedicor, by which we learn that he has a position on the staff of the "Salida Mail" of Salida, Colorado.

As the HERALD goes to press earlier in the week hereafter, we will have to send our report not later than Tuesday noon, and those wishing to send items with our letter must hand them in Monday hereafter.

The committee to provide the program for the next meeting of the circle are obliged to postpone the next entertainment for two weeks, or until the close of the series of meetings, as they can't complete their program before. Due notice will be given as soon as the date is settled on.

W. P. Cadmus has put one of the Victor fire proof safes in his shoeshop. It is a fine 800 lb. safe, with the latest improvements. Any who think of purchasing one will find it to their advantage to consult David Coryell, as he is agent for the Victor safe and can give you satisfactory information.

There was a good attendance at the library circle held on Tuesday evening of last week. The discussion of the question: Resolved that Lincoln did more for his country as a statesman than Washington. Chas. Hiscock and Minnie Barrett, Aff.; Geo. D. Arner and Lulu Rappleye; Neg., conducted the debate very pleasantly. The young ladies furnished argument in defense of their side of the question, equal if not superior to the gentlemen. If we are not misinformed, it is the first attempt of the young ladies to take part in a debate. The committee seemed to be of one mind in their decision and gave a verdict in favor of the affirmative.

TIPTON TOPICS.

An open winter, muddy roads and rainy weather seems to be our lot.

Mrs. Wm. Perkins is very low and her condition is considered critical.

Miss Hattie Holloway, who has been visiting Franklin friends, returned home Monday.

The installation of Grange officers and the oyster supper following, last Saturday evening, were well attended.

Mr. Maltby, father of Mrs. Frank Mangus, who was very sick last week, is slowly recovering.

A shoe social will be held at the Congregational Church next Thursday afternoon and evening. All are cordially invited to come and show their shoes.

Uncle Perry Allen, one of the oldest pioneer settlers of Franklin, died Sunday, Feb. 2nd. The funeral services were held at his home, Monday, Feb. 3rd, Rev. Stalker of Clinton officiating.

The children's health must not be neglected. Colds in the head and scrofula bring on catarrh and lung affections. Ely's Cream Balm cures at once. It is perfectly safe and is easily applied into the nostrils. It also cures catarrh, the worst cases yielding to it.

It is dangerous to tamper with irritating liquids and exciting snuffs. Use Ely's Cream Balm, which is safe and pleasant, and is easily applied. It cures the worst cases of catarrh, cold in the head and hay fever, giving relief from the first application. Price 50 cents.

BRITTON BUDGET.

No ground hog shadow.

Dave Weigle is able to work again.

G. W. Hough spent last Sunday in Detroit.

Wm. Underwood is still confined to the house.

Weather too soft for any kind of business except thinking.

Miss Gertie Saxon is assisting Mrs. E. A. Sink in her millinery and dressmaking establishment.

Macon township turns in more sparrow scalps than any other township in the county—bet a nickle.

Sheriff Baldwin passed though the village one day last week and took occasion to shake with all the boys.

A. King from toward the Orient, has been carrying on negotiations for some time in our village, not through a minister extraordinary or envoy plenipotentiary but in person. Looks as though a treaty of annexation would be the result.

A lot of young bloods with a jug of hard cider, made a public nuisance of themselves, around the village one night last week. We understand steps have been taken to take care of the next disturbance of this nature and do it effectually too. These boys don't live in the village; if they did, we would take pleasure in giving their names.

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Gillen, who had been suffering for some days from an attack of membranous croup, died about ten o'clock Monday a. m. She was an exceptionally bright little girl and had made herself loved by all who knew her. Mr. and Mrs. Gillen have the sympathy of the entire community in their bereavement.

And now the Ladies missionary society have to announce that the quilt drawing will take place Wednesday evening, Feby. 5th, at the church where a supper will be served. Remember this is one of Grandma Britton's famous quilts, and the lucky person will receive an article valued not only for its beauty and usefulness, but as a souvenir of the estimable old lady. May she live to piece an hundred more quilts.

The pork and beans supper was simply immense. Such beans, and such lots of them, and such hungry people. Everybody ate, ate lots, but the agent of the Wabash seemed to eat more than anybody else, kept two people busy attending his wants, calling for the different varieties in quick succession, and when he named "Bohemian beans" we drew away to a safer distance. He said he went home that night feeling like a bloated beanholder.

Why can't we have a library and reading room in Britton? There are plenty of suitable rooms, and quite an interest felt in the matter. Lets talk it up and provide some place for the young people and children, or make it a circulating library, or whatever might be deemed best. We wish now, to just call attention to the matter. We believe that twenty persons can be found in Britton who will each pledge themselves for twenty-five volumes, and a shoulder to the wheel. This would give us a nucleus of five hundred volumes. Then there are a hundred other people who would aid in lesser amounts. It can be done, and as a pledge of good faith in bringing the matter up will say the Budget is good for the first 25 vols., and a hearty support. We may have more to say about this in the near future.

Now come here, my Phunny Phellow, get up in my lap, let me wipe off your chin; there now lay your head on my shoulder, and tell me all about it. What! 'Your corns hurt?' 'somebody stepped on them?' There don't cry, go on. 'Frightened you with Bear stories?' Made fun of the toboggan slide, and said 'skunk' right out loud? And you only said he or she, or whoever they are, might be the lineal descendants of J. Allen's wife, D. Boon, Petroleum V. or even old 'Wax Nux' himself? You didn't call him a son-of-a-gun; no, I am glad of that. There now put on your straw hat and go and play. Make mud pies, aerial cross walks or turn all the water the wrong way, write poetry, or even echoes if it please you and if any one dares to grieve you again just set up another yell and we will come to your relief immediately.

Bainbridge & Hause attended the funeral of Michael Hendershot, Monday.

James Hause, who has been on the sick list for some days, is able to be around again.

Geo. VanGieson has lost his 'grip' and his familiar form is once more about town.

Meetings are being held at the M. E. church this week, conducted by Rev. A. W. Stalker.

Alonzo Clark and wife went to Hillsdale Thursday to attend the funeral of William Clark.

Gilbert Weir of LaGrange, Ind., was here Sunday and Monday to attend the funeral of his Father.

Willian Tolton and George R. Gibson, two enterprising young men are selling a patent dust pan.

The Band boys are rapidly perfecting the program for their concert, which they will present in the near future.

Miss Martha Carmer died last evening of stricture of the Oesophagus, being unable to take sufficient food to sustain life.

The apples stored in the cellar under F. D. Lancaster's are being over hauled and shipped to Cleveland and Philadelphia.

Addie St. John drove to Britton Tuesday with the hearse to attend the funeral of the infant child of Michael Gillen.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Freese returned last Friday from their six months sojourn in the west. Mr. F. is greatly improved in health.

Mrs. Fries, who has been visiting her son, Rev. A. A. Fries of this place, since October, has returned to her home in New York state.

Charles Randall appeared on the streets this week in company with a pair of crutches. Ervsipelas in one foot caused the acquaintance.

Miss Ellis, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. B. O. Randall, returned to her home at Oscoda, last Thursday accompanied by her two sons.

George Wier, after a protracted illness, passed quietly away last Friday. The friends were all present, including his son Gilbert from Indiana.

The Boston Ideal Guitar Banjo and Mandoline Club are advertised to give one of their pleasing entertainments, Feb. 13th, at the Congregational church.

Ray Blanchard has a number of men on the road selling his Crescent cough cure and a patent mop, of which he has the general agency of the state of Michigan.

Ray Vest and family of Saline, visited friends in town over Sunday. He expects to become a resident of Clinton again and resume his former position in the woolen mills.

Our woolen mill is giving the employees a rest by discontinuing their running over time. It will last but a short time, however, as they are now behind with their orders.

Chas. S. Burroughs informs us that he expects soon to move to Kokomo, Ind., in which enterprising city he will engage in the manufacture of chewing gum. Success to him.

E. F. Kirchgessner went to Adrian Monday and paid the county treasurer $2,115.61 state taxes and $1,534 34 county taxes, the same being the total amount assessed to this township.

Mrs. Liebelt, who has been in the employ of H. Lancaster for some weeks past, will shortly store her goods and take up her abode in Tecumseh, in the capacity of housekeeper for Mrs. Sutton.

Frank Rose, traveling agent of the Detroit Free Press, was in town Thursday and transfered the agency from Eugene VanDeMark to E. F. Kirchgessner. The latter young gentleman, beside doing a good jewelry business, has numerous minor things to claim his attention.

Malcolm McDougall, a well-known citizen of Bridgewater, died last Thursday, of heart trouble. He was born in New York in 1814, and came to this county 1838, settling in Bridgewater township. He served as town clerk and for thirty years was a justice of the peace. He was a strong democrat of the old school, was a good citizen, an excellent man and many friends throughout the county will regret his death. For the past two years he had been in poor health. The funeral was held Saturday afternoon and the remains were deposited in the Clinton cemetery.

GONE HOME.

Only a few months have passed since the friends of the late Danforth Keyes of Clinton followed his remains to the tomb. A few weeks after his demise, the Angel of Death again invaded the household and Mary was called to meet her father on the other shore. And now the mother has gone home to dwell with the husband and daughter in that realm where sorrow and sighing shall flee away.

Mary Ann Keyes, whose maiden name was Hamilton, was born at Pelham, Mass., July 12, 1819. When nine years old her parents removed to the state of New York. In 1830 the family was caught in the tide of emigration then flowing westward, and came to the territory of Michigan, settling in the town of Salem, Washtenaw County. Her home was with her parents in Salem until she married Danforth Keyes, which event occurred on Christmas day, 1840, and she then took up her abode with her husband in the village of Clinton, where she has continued to reside since that time. Had she lived until next Christmas she would have completed a residence of 50 years in Clinton. She became a member of the Presbyterian church early in life, and later she became a communicant in the Episcopal church. She had been an invalid for many years, and yet such was her fortitude under suffering and her ambition to live and fill the place of help mate for her husband that a stranger would not have realized it. None but her most intimate friends knew the frailness of the thread that bound her to this earthly life. During the past few weeks, her physical health had been gradually failing and it became apparent to her friends that her allotted time on earth was nearly closed. On Monday afternoon Jan. 27th, she passed peacefully away. The funeral services were held at the family residence Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 29. The beautiful funeral ritual of the Episcopal church was recited by Rev. J. Phelps, of Tecumseh, in the presence of a large concourse of sympathizing friends, and the remains were deposited in the Clinton cemetery to rest with those of her husband and daughter. Of the four children who grew to manhood and womanhood, Mary has gone before, and three sons survive her, Arthur, Chas. D., and John E.

In its public manifestations, the story of her life is briefly told. But no words can fitly express to the surviving members of that family the loss which they have sustained in her death. During all the years of her married life, she was a ministering angel of light and happiness in the little family circle in which she moved. Her Christian hopefulness amid misfortune, her motherly devotion to her children, her love for her husband in his declining years shed a halo of victory over her own life, and imparted an influence for good over those around her. Her daily life was a sermon of self sacrifice and a benediction of love toward her friends. A "Mother in Israel" has left the cares and toils of this earth behind and gone home to the Heavenly mansions, to abide forever with the blest.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Maurice Nay is on the sick list.

Fred Wickwire, of Ridgeway, was in town Saturday.

Joe Campbell, of St. Johns, Mich., is visiting his parents at this place.

Mrs. Will Wilson and Miss Ellen Atwell are both sick with la grippe.

Mrs. F. G. Florence spent last Sunday at Willis, with Mrs. Geo. Bethel.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Goff, of Tipton, paid a flying visit to this place on Saturday.

Miss May Kelley, of Adrian, spent last Thursday with her sister, Mrs. F. G. Florence.

Mr. P. M. Lossing shipped a carload of hogs from here Thursday, and had the misfortune to lose his pocketbook, containing about $50.

The West family gave a good entertainment on Saturday evening. Prof. West is an excellent violinist and can personate anything, from a pig to a drunken husband.

Miss Adda Bethel has so far recovered that she expects to resume her duties at this station before the week is over. Mr. Harry Parshall, who has had charge of the station during her absence, has formed many friends among the people here.

The Old Folks' Party at the Hall was well attended on Wednesday of last week, in spite of rain, sickness and horrible roads, there being about thirty numbers. Excellent music, good dancers and pleasant company made the evening seem very short.

Mr. Bull has become so rich under a free trade policy that he is compelled to seek investments abroad for his surplus capital.

Tennessee farmers unite in calling a state convention to consider the question of good roads and how to secure them. It is a notable event in the present history of "conventions" which farmers of other states woul do well to consider. Good roads are scarcely second in importance to good laws.

Unless there is a radical change in tariff tactics by the Republican majority at the present session of Congress, the fate of 'the grand old party' of high protection robbery is sealed. That the tariff will be reduced much seems to be improbable, because the Republicans from various parts of the country cannot agree upon any reduction outside of whisky and tobacco—the very things from which the tax should never be taken.

A SCRAP OF LOCAL HISTORY.

Morenci is a flourishing village in the Southwest portion of the banner agricultural county of the Union. It possesses a good newspaper, edited by a young man of brains and muscle, who has views of his own on all subjects and is not afraid to express them. Vern Allen is his cognomen, and he happens to be a namesake of Capt. E. P. Allen, who represents this district in Congress. But the remark which the late lamented A. Ward made about Geo. Washington—"that he never slopped over"—could scarcely be applied to Editor Allen. A late issue of the Evening News contains an interview with Mr. Allen in which he uses some rather bold and emphatic language. Here is the nub of the interview.

"No, sir; Capt. Allen will never represent the second district in congress again, not much," said a large and emphatic young man yesterday, as he stopped to chat in a Woodward avenue restaurant.

"Why not?" asked a listener, who took the positive young man to be Vern Allen, the editor of the Morenci Observer, and one of the rising young republicans in the district represented by Congressman Allen.

"Why!" exclaimed young Allen, n a mighty voice. "WHY! Because his methods are unrepublican, inconsistent, and devoid of ordinary political discretion. He has stirred up such unnecessary factional strife as to put the district, now strongly republican, in such a condition that the democrats are very liable to take it away from us.

"Can I state reasons? Well, I should say I could. Say, there is town after town where the selection in the one matter of postmaster is raising the very old Cain. There's Ann Arbor in a state of war among republicans; Ypsilanti isn't much better off, altho' it is still in abeyance; at Blissfield the working republicans are as mad as hornets and wouldn't look at Allen as a further candidate if he were as big as your new Hammond building here; in my own town, Morenci, there is the—the—well, the warmest little row you ever saw in your life. Mr. Chappell, the man selected for post master through some occult spiritual influence probably, is not a worker in our party and was not the choice of the workers, although he is a good and reputable citizen and doubtless a competent man. In fact, all over the district the republicans are in a state of ferment and dissatisfaction.

This unpleasantness among our Republican friends is no funeral of ours, that is true. If the faithful wish to pull hair, and call names, and yank noses, and raise hades over a division of the spoils, that is their privilege. But we dislike to see a newspaper man, especially one who has a future before him, tearing around in this fashion, like unto a bull in a crockery store, for it brings discredit upon the profession. Capt. Allen may have made mistakes. He doesn't claim to be a perfect man. We admit that we are not in love with his tariff notions, but we have never heard the most rabid Democrat question his honesty or honor. The harrying, the coaxing, the teasing, the bulldozing, the lampooning to which the valiant Captain has been subjected during the past year has been without a precedent since the second district was legislated into being. And what is all this hubbub about? What has caused our usually temperate knight of the shears to empty his bucket of gall upon an unoffending public? Because, forsooth, some of the postoffices have not been distributed according to his liking. Very well, editor Allen does'nt represent this district in Congress just yet. Capt. E. P. Allen, who fills that position, is a hard-working, pains-taking honorable man, who is manfully endeavoring to represent the whole district, rather than a few spoils hunters who would make life a burden to him. If his action is creating factional trouble, whose fault is it? Primarily, it is the fault of the fault finders. The remote cause is found in the spoils system itself, in the lax method, now in vogue, of distributing federal offices; and so long as this method obtains, the party in power will be rent by factional feuds.

Two illustrations of this truth can be given in this connection, with which many of our readers are familiar. Edwin Willitts was one of the best congressmen who ever represented this district in Washington. During his last term a postoffice war arose in Tecumseh over the appointment of Fred Rosacrans as postmaster. About the same time a feud broke out in Adrian city owing to the removal of the postoffice from Masonic Temple to South Main street. These two feuds deprived Mr. Willitts of a portion of the Lenawee county delegation and defeated his nomination. And the very same causes elected Col. Eldredge to congress at the next general election. During Col. Eldredge's second term, the distribution of the postoffices was saddled upon his shoulders. Although his selections as a whole were exceedingly creditable and gave general satisfaction, yet he failed to satisfy everybody. These causes in turn defeated his renomination and elected Capt. Allen to congress in 1886. In both of these cases the party controlling the spoils found it an element of weakness rather than strength. And the fundamental cause of the factional trouble was in the inherent defects of the system itself, not in the faithful servant of the people, who was toiling day and night for the welfare of his constituents, and "fighting fire" for two long years while parceling out the spoils.

IT IS AN AGE OF SHODDY.

WHY DIFFICULTY IS FOUND IN GETTING A GOOD COAT OR CARPET.

The Shoddy Business Grows Immensely with Each Year, and the Makers of Spurious Cloth Are Protected by High Tariff Laws.

Considerable comment was excited in the last presidential election by one of President Harrison's speeches in which he declared that he had little sympathy with the demand for cheap coats, for a cheap coat, he claimed, usually covers a cheap man.

President Harrison was right in one sense. A man who has to wear a coat that is threadbare and out at the elbows loses his self respect. He feels humiliated when men look at his shoddy garment and make remarks about its seedy appearance. He feels cheap.

But a cheap coat and a shabby coat are not the same thing. No man who wears a good coat becomes a cheap man simply because he bought his coat at Mr. Wanamaker's bargain counter. Like the flowers that bloom in the spring, that has nothing to do with the case.

But why is it so hard to get a cheap coat of good quality?

The answer is simple: It is shoddy.

It is not generally known to what an extent the shoddy business is carried on in this country, nor how the business has come to regard itself as one of the legitimate industries of the country. In 1870 the shoddy mills of the United States used 19,000,000 pounds of raw shoddy, and in 1880 they used 52,000,000. There are more than 100 shoddy mills in the United States, and about $50,000,000 is invested in these enterprises and in handling rags.

The rise of this remarkable development forms a curious illustration of how a congressional committee can be hoodwinked by those who have axes of various kinds to grind. In 1875 the joint executive committee of the wool growers and the wool manufacturers asked for duties which discriminated heavily against the ordinary cheap clothing, such as is worn by the great majority of the people. They gave as an excuse for this request their desire to protect the American working people from foreign shoddy goods.

"These goods," they said, "if admitted at moderate duties, would take the place of our sound clothes." They further told the committee that the American manufacturer would be compelled to "fabricate their goods of the same worthless material or surrender the business to the foreigner."

Now, then, what was the action of the committee in view of this "state of things?"

To prevent the deplorable results pointed out by the growers and the manufacturers the committee recommended a duty of 12 cents a pound on importations of foreign shoddy, and, in order to make their action still more effective, duties ranging from 80 to 120 per cent. were placed upon the imports of manufactures of shoddy. The petitioners, as usual, had gotten what they asked for; to those who had knocked the doors were opened.

But note now the consequences: Now that America was to be no longer the dumping ground for European shoddy, our own manufacturers rushed with eager haste into the shoddy business themselves. Already in 1880 the shoddy used by American mills had grown to three times the quantity used in 1870; and the census of this year will show that the same rate of increase has been more than maintained. On the 8th of last October, The Philadelphia Record reported that: "During the last seven months the imports of woolen rags and shoddy were more than doubled in quantity and value in comparison with the imports in the corresponding period of 1888."

The shoddy business now considers itself one of the legitimate claimants for protection. Two years ago the shoddy men went before the senate committee "with the intent," they said, "merely of setting forth a few of the questions which are of vital importance to the labor interest."

They submitted a report in which they attacked the Mills bill with all their venom and they would hear nothing of free wool. Free woolen rags were also an object of their ire. A free woolen rag shaken at them had the effect that the red rag of the Spanish bull fighter has on a mad bull. They predicted that if these woolen rags and wool extracts were put upon the free list, the American manufactures of shoddy would ship their stock to Europe, there have it worked up and returned to this country. "And the cost," they curiously confessed, "would not be more than one-half of what it costs now."

So, then, we not only wear our American manufactured shoddy, but we pay, according to this confession of the shoddy makers, double what the cost would be under free raw materials. Even shoddy rests upon the tariff and pleads its right to the home market. Two years ago the Republican national committee sent out a circular signed by seventeen firms of shoddy manufacturers, in which these men protested strenuously against the free wool offered the country by the Mills bill.

"This bill," they said, "as far as it affects the industry in which we are engaged, is a free trade measure, and as such we are decidedly opposed to it. We have determined in the coming election to support the candidates of the protection party, Harrison and Morton. Their election we consider to be indispensable to the maintenance of our business."

The development of this shoddy business has had very wide reaching results. The figures of the census of 1880 show that 108 pounds of shoddy are mixed with every 118 pounds of pure wool to make our so called woolen goods.

It is also true that the ratio of shoddy in carpets has been increasing rapidly. In 1870 carpets were made of 80 parts of wool to 20 parts of shoddy; in 1880 the wool had fallen to 68 parts, and the shoddy had risen to 32 parts.

A more recent comparison is given by the Dobsons, a large firm of carpet manufacturers in Philadelphia. They say that in 55,000,000 pounds of carpet materials there are 10,000,000 pounds of clean wool, 20,000,000 of shoddy and 25,000,000 of other mixtures.

How much further this flood of shoddy will invade our fabrics cannot yet be estimated. It is learned, however, that some of the carpet manufacturers have recently added to their plant an "improved" style of machinery which will enable them to spin stuff which up to this time they have not been able to use.

The Dextrine Duty.

Editor of New York Evening Post—In these days of protectionists' outcries it is interesting to note the appearance before the senate committee recently of a gentleman from Boston asking that a duty of three cents per pound (equivalent to 120 per cent. of its cost) shall be put on imported potato dextrine, when there is not a single pound of this dextrine manufactured in this country. Whom does he desire to protect? Perhaps a future investment of this pet protectionist as opposed to the interests of the thousands of textile, paper and other manufacturers who are using this raw material in finishing their product.

Though the domestic manufacturers are making dextrine here from a basis of corn starch at less than half the cost of potato, yet the imported article is preferred, and they are unable to compete. The gentleman from Boston omits to state that dextrine is largely used as a substitute for glue, which is at present protected by a 20 per cent. duty, whereas dextrine already pays 40 per cent. His statement that dextrine is only a substitute for starch is therefore incorrect.

Foreign potato starch is taxed 2 cents per pound, which amounts to almost 100 per cent. Nine-tenths of the domestic product is made by small factories in the New England and New York states, and is almost all controlled by one Boston house, which makes cash advances, with good profit to itself, as against the interest of the many manufacturers who consume this article. A protection of 50 per cent. should be ample to enable this infant industry to compete with the better grade foreign articles and give the manufacturers raw material at a price which will afford them a chance to compete with imported textiles and fabrics.

We think it about time that the American people should cease protecting one or two favored individuals and monopolies as against the many manufacturers who would be enabled by cheaper raw material to compete in the world's market, and increase our home industries and wealth. JUSTICE.

Beans Without Boston.

Mr. S. C. Bowen, of Medina, N. Y., appeared at the tariff hearings of the ways and means committee. His theme was beans. He read a long paper to the committee on the history of bean growing and bean eating in the United States. He warned the committee that a tariff of 10 per cent. ad valorem would be insufficient to protect the bean growers of this country. Mr. Bowen thought that a specific duty of fifty cents a bushel would about suit him. The desire of Mr. Bowen's heart appeared to be that as long as the country lasted beans should never be sold below $2 a bushel.

To Mr. Breckinridge's question as to who ate most beans, Mr. Bowen was obliged to reply that the poorer classes did. Mr. Bowen was further obliged to admit that dear beans meant, therefore, increased expense to the poorer classes.

The whole subject appears to have been discussed and settled without the intervention of Boston. As dear beans in the Hub would mean a famine in that quarter of Massachusetts, it is to be presumed that the last has not yet been heard of the attempt to increase the duty on Boston's one dish to 25 per cent. ad valorem.

It Acts Both Ways.

Although the iron used for making steel plates has been cheaper in this country for a month or so past than in Great Britain, a tariff of $28 per ton enables Mr. Carnegie to extort from Duluth ship builders $60 per ton for 5,000 tons of steel plates, which could have been bought in Glasgow for half the money. The lake vessels to the cost of which the tariff has added this $150,000 will be used in carrying northwestern wheat to foreign free trade markets, and this extra cost will of course be added to the freight charges and ultimately come out of the pockets of wheat growers. If they cannot see how the tariff reduces the price of every bushel they send to market by rail or water, they cannot, of course, see how it robs them of a large part of what they get for it by laying taxes on their clothing, sugar and all they buy.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Millers Want Free Jute.

Though the farmer won't see it, his next friend, the miller, is beginning to tumble. The National Millers' association have petitioned the committee on ways and means that jute and jute cloth or burlap be put on the free list. The association alleges that, owing to the present tariff on these raw materials for flour bags, "the cost of the bags used in exporting flour was increased from 22 to 30 per cent., and was a heavy burden on all exporters of flour." Of course the farmers have no interest in this. They do not export flour like the millers. But what about grain bags, on which a similar tax is levied?

A protectionist journal insists that it is not the custom house tariff but the railroad tariff that compels the farmers in Kansas and Nebraska to burn corn instead of coal for fuel. This is a superficial view. The custom house tariff not only prevents the farmer from profitably exchanging his corn for other taxed necessaries he needs, but the cost of the railroads has been nearly doubled at the same time and the cost of carriage has been thereby greatly increased. The cost of carrying corn on taxed rails is graduated according to the tax.—Philadelphia Record.

Blood vs. Nerves.

Great mistakes have been made in the world, by supposing many nervous troubles were due to bad blood. Thus headache, fits, dizziness, sleeplessness, etc., are always due to weakness or irritation of the nerves of the brain: dyspepsia, pain, wind, etc. to weakness of the nerves of the stomach: weak lungs is caused by weakness o the parts: billiousness, constipation, etc. to weakness of the nerves of the liver or bowels: pains, irregularity, sterility to derangement of the uterine nerves. For all weakness, Dr. Miles' great nerve and brain food surpasses all other remedies. Trial bottle free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

WHAT IS

SCROFULA

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or the many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors;" which, fastening upon the lungs, causes consumption and death. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How Can It Be CURED

By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the remarkable cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. Some of these cures are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula, be sure to try Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"My daughter Mary was afflicted with scrofulous sore neck from the time she was 22 months old till she became six years of age. Lumps formed in her neck, and one of them after growing to the size of a pigeon's egg, became a running sore for over three years. We gave her Hood's Sarsaparilla, when the lump and all indications of scrofula entirely disappeared, and now she seems to be a healthy child." J. S. CARLILE, Naught, N. J.

"I was caught in a python's folds and saw fierce eyes glaring down into mine. If that tremendous coil were tightened around me, I knew that I might at once close my luggage for the undiscovered bourne. In this crisis of my fate I saw the great python's tail in close proximity to his mouth. I grasped the snake's tail and pushed a yard or two down his yawning jaws. Serpents seldom bite their prey; they lubricate it and suck it down. With such a long and cold-blooded creature I calculated that it would take over a half a minute before the sensations of his tail could be conveyed to his brain and render him aware that he was committing suicide."

ROASTED.

Six Persons Perish and Eight Others

INJURED BY JUMPING FROM THE WINDOWS.

The Terrible Disaster to the Unfortunate Italians, Inmates of a Boston Boarding House—A Marvel That Any Escaped Alive—A Four Story Building Filled With Lodgers and Boarders.

BOSTON, February 3.—A terrible fire occurred on North street early in the morning, resulting in the death of at least six persons. The fire originated in a mysterious manner in the clothing store, No. 255 North street, kept by a Jew whose name is at present unknown. The floors quickly communicated to the floors above, which were occupied as an Italian boarding house, and contained a large number of lodgers. So quickly was the place wrapped in flames that retreat for some of them was impossible, and they were roasted to death.

Others attempted to escape by jumping from windows, and thereby received serious injuries. Five are already dead, and one other was said to be dying when removed to the hospital. The damage to the building will not be large. Only one of the five victims has been identified, a woman, Mrs. Della Scanlon, about forty-five years of age.

The other dead are three men and one child. Besides these five there were seven removed to the police station, where they received medical attendance, and were taken to the hospital. There names are given as follows: Mrs. Hannah Gilmartino, very badly burned about the body; Guiseppi Cerolio, three years old, severe burns about the legs, chest and side; Ludovico Mulana, broken ribs, caused by jumping from a third-story window; Peter Lombardzzio, shoulder broken by jumping from window; Francesca Letiere, slight injuries about the arms and body.

Bernard Gilmartino, husband of Hannah, injured about the legs and body. An unknown man, terribly burned, said to be dying.

With the exception of the children noted above, the other sufferers are between 20 40 years of age.

building is a four-story brick struc- (and the three upper stories were filled w... lodgers and boarders, there being in some families six and eight persons. Owing to the fact of of their being foreigners, it is impossible to give at present an absolutely correct list of their names, but the number of casualities given is believed to be correct.

SENATOR INGALLS' MAIL.

Congratulations Pouring in Upon Him for His Late Speech.

WASHINGTON, February 3.—While Senator Ingalls mail is always large, requiring the services of two type writer operators continually, since his celebrated negro question speech, it has become necessary to bring it to his committee room in a sack, the morning mail being about 800 letters, and the other four mails adding about 400. The senator goes carefully over his entire mail single-handed and disposes of it each day. Congratulations pour in on him from all quarters of the country. For the first three days after the delivery of his speech he was flooded with telegrams, his admirers from across the water adding their contribution to the rest.

He has received a number of letters from ministers, some of whom have said they intend to preach on the subject, using his speech as a text. Many of the great educators and deep thinkers of the land have also expressed their favorable sentiments. A number of the senator's congratulations have come from the south. He has been the recipient of no letters from the usual run of cranks who sometimes bother great orators with letters written in red ink and ornamented with devils heads, threatening all sorts of destruction and due vengeance. But few letters have been received by him that could be laid to the door of this class, one of which consisted of simply a blank piece of paper enclosing a card bearing on one side, a Confederate flag on the other and the inscription "Bah." Another was so badly written as to be indecipherable.

The following letter, written on a business firm's letter head, reached the Sentor Saturday:

"VIDALIA, GA., January 30, 1890.

"U. S. Senator Ingalls, Washington, D. C.:

"We would more cheerfully pay $2,000 towards burning every newspaper and their editors that publish your fool speeches, than we pay two cents to carry this to you. You are certainly the most cursed hell-bent fool on earth, and how a crowd can waste the time to listen to you can be accounted for only that they are United States Senators. Our estimation on that body goes down nearly every time we hear from it. We can congratulate you on being a successful or lucky man. You are lucky that you find fools to tolerate you. That the devil is crowded with such as you, or he would have taken you alive.

Yours truly,
(Signed.) B. N. BLACK & Co."

The Senator had a hearty laugh over this letter, and turning to his clerk, said: "Well, send them a pamphlet copy of the speech; although it is very likely they cannot read."

SUSPECTED WIFE MURDER.

A New Jersey Woman Found Dead With Suspicious Circumstances.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., February 3.—Mrs. Harvey Cole, of Brookside, was found by the neighbors lying on the floor of her kitchen, unconscious from a wound in the head. She died shortly after being found, without regaining consciousness. Mrs. Cole's husband was arrested on suspicion of having struck the fatal blow, and was locked up to await the result of the investigation by the coroner. Mrs. Cole recently had a colored man arrested on a charge of assault and battery, but the negro proved an alibi and was discharged. Many people saw him at the time that Cole committed the assault, and compelled his wife through threats to accuse the negro.

Bad for Indianapolis.

New York, Feb. 3.—An afternoon paper ... that a few of the Indianapolis ... will play with the New York ... league team this season. Jack Glasscock and Jerry Denny, it is stated, are among the quintety. With the five western men as a nucleus the New York League management calculates on getting together a presentable nine to take the place of the ... of last season. The new men will ... in the New Yorks on their southern trip, according to the story. President Brush of the Indianapolis nine, denies the truth of the statement.

THE RAILROAD RESPONSIBLE.

Investigation of the Causes of the Monon Disaster Concluded.

INDIANAPOLIS, February 3.—Coroner Dove, of Hamilton county, has concluded his inquiry into the causes of the Monon disaster, but will not return a verdict until today. It is known, however, that it will embrace the following points: That the wreck was due to the turning of a rail on the curve approaching the trestle; that the rail was insecurely fastened down, many of the spikes not penetrating through the "shiving" placed under the rails on Friday; that the ties were rotten, and that the trestle, from a similar condition of the woodwork was unsafe. Both the company and the section foreman will be blamed. Judge Field, of Chicago, the principal attorney of the road, is here looking after the claims of the injured. It is not probable that many of these will be settled, as damages will be demanded. The official inquiry has developed such criminal carelessness on the part of the company that every person injured will demand full compensation, and their settlement will prove a heavy tax upon the company.

CONGRESS CHAFF

TO BE BLOWN OUT OF THE NATIONAL WIND-MILL THIS WEEK.

The Blair Educational Bill—The Contemplated Admission of Idaho Into the Union—Oklahoma Wants to be a Territory—What the House Will Do in the Bushwhacking Business.

WASHINGTON, February 3.—The Senate has set aside Monday of the coming week for the consideration of the Blair educational bill. It comes up today at 9 o'clock as the unfinished business of the Senate and it will continue to come at 2 o'clock each day until it is disposed of. Its passage is a foregone conclusion, but it may be debated at some length, and its consideration may eat up two or three afternoons.

A decision is expected from the Supreme Court of the United States today in the suit involving the validity of the Idaho test oath. In event, this decision is rendered the committee on territories may dispose of the bill for the admission of Idaho at its meeting today.

Senator Platt the chairman of the committee has, however, more urgent matter to bring before the Senate. The secretary of the interior in an interview with him last Friday laid before him the necessity of pushing to a passage the bill already reported from the committee providing a temporary government for Oklahoma.

Senator Platt will ask the Senate to consider this measure at an early day.

The customs administration bill will be reported to the finance committee Tuesday by the sub-committee—Senators Allison, Aldrich and McPherson, which will, doubtless, be reported to the Senate the same day. A number of amendments will be suggested, and when the Senate passes the measure it will be thrown into conference where it will stay for some days.

The discussion of Senator Butler's bill to assist the emigrant may be resisted in some form or other. The Senator from South Carolina himself may make a brief speech explaining the character of the measure further, as he believes it has been seriously misunderstood by some of the Speakers who have discussed it in the Senate.

In the secret session the nominations of Indian Commissioner Morgan and the superintendent of Indian schools, Dr. Dorchester, are still awaiting consideration. It is believed that much of the delay in consideration of these cases is due to the fear that if they were brought up at this time they would be acted upon adversely. So they may not be considered during the coming week. An effort will be made, however, to obtain for the consideration of the Samoan treaty, which is now pending. Senator Hiscock's committee on quadri centennial will probably meet during the week, but no report is expected from it immediately.

The exciting scene that characterized the proceedings of the House last week will begin a e... today, and will last until the Republican members of the committee on rules submit speaker Reee's new codes.

It is the purpose of the majority members of the election committee to report the Atkinson-Pendleton contested case as soon as the Smith-Jackson case is disposed of. The committee has heard the evidence in the case, but has had no meeting to decide on its disposal. According to the agreement entered into by the members of the committee, the case would come up before the committee on Tuesday, February 18, but the majority of the members have decided to call a meeting and take a vote on the matter, so that the case can be reported to the House immediately after the Smith-Jackson case is gotten out of the way.

With the admission of Mr. Smith to the Republican ranks the majority would be quite certain of always having a quorum on hand to dispose of the other cases. A vote on the Smith-Jackson case will be taken tomorrow if possible. Mr. Jackson will be unseated and then the Atkinson-Pendleton case will be called up. The Democrats intend to continue the fight to the last and they will use every strategy to delay the action.

Little is known concerning other business that may come before the House. As it is, there is slight prospects of the enactment of any legislation for the present.

The members of the world's fair committee are undecided as to what shall be done with the general bill they have under consideration. Some members of the committee are in favor of letting the bill go over until the new rules are adopted, while others are anxious to break in at any time and dispose of the bill without long debate. Mr. Hiatt, of Illinois, favors the latter plan. He thinks that the bill can be disposed within an hour. The committee on territories will probably report the Oklahoma bill during the week and take speedy action on it.

A HEARTLESS MOTHER.

She Throws Her Baby From a Car Window, But It is Rescued Unhurt.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., February 3.—In the afternoon, while a train on the Chattanooga, Rome & Columbus railroad, coming this way, was running at the rate of forty miles an hour, between Buchanan and Cedartown, a woman deliberately threw a little baby out of the window. The conductor saw the act, stopped the train, ran back a mile and a half and picked up the little one unhurt, except from bruises about the head. The would-be murderess, who gave her name as Lucinda Hammond, said the babe jumped from her arms, but as the infant was but two months olds, the story was not accepted. She got off at Young's Station, taking her offspring with her.

Chief Clerk Cripe, of freight offices of C. C. & C., at Springfield, suspended and his accounts ordered to be investigated.

BRAZIL.

Financial Anarchy Now Appears.

THE MINISTER OF COMMERCE RESIGNS.

Business Men Lose Confidence in the New Government—Europeans Leaving as Fast as Possible—Virulent Cholera in Persia—Hartington to go to Egypt.

NEW YORK, February 3.—A special cable from Rio de Janeiro to the Mail and Express says: It looks here just now as if financial anarchy were threatened by the unsettled condition of affairs, and this may lead to serious trouble. Senhor Romeiro, the minister of commerce, has resigned his office, and European residents of Rio are leaving the country as fast as their affairs will permit. All the berths in all the steamers leaving this port up to April are already taken, and all confidence of the business men in the provisional government appears to be at an end.

Change in the Brazilian Cabinet.

RIO JANEIRO, February 3.—Senhor Demetrio Ribeiro has retired from the post of minister of commerce, and has been succeeded by Senhor Francisco Glycirio.

The cabinet had a meeting which lasted until 2 o'clock in the morning. After studying fully the subject which gave rise to the crisis, the members of the government arrived at a perfectly harmonious decision regarding the measures to be adopted.

Cholera in Europe Predicted.

LONDON, February 3.—An English medical light, whose articles in the Lancet and other pathological journals always provoke considerable controversy, is of the opinion that Europe has a great deal to fear from the cholera during the coming summe

"The virulent type it has assumed i Persia," he says, "is highly unusual i the winter months, and marks an almost unprecedented malignity in the fearful pestilence."

Salisbury—Marquis of Hartington.

LONDON, February 3.—Salisbury, owing to the pressure brought upon him, has abandoned his proposed trip to the continent, for the present at least. His health is very poor, and it is believed that at the cabinet council, which is to be held within a few days he will pave the way for his resignation from the foreign office, the recent exactions of which have told heavily on his physical and vital resources. Speculation is rife as to the cabinet changes which will result from his withdrawal from the foreign department, but nothing worthy of serious acceptance is evolved from the labors of the self-constituted slate-makers, whose vaticinations are as varied as they are absurd.

The Marquis of Hartington will take his departure for Egypt on Friday, to be absent indefinitely. He has rallied somewhat from his shattered state in which his recent illness left him, but is still greatly in need of the change he seeks. He has deputized Sir Henry James to act as the parliamentary leader of the Unionists in his absence, and instructed him to consult with Mr. Chamberlain upon questions of great importance. The measure of Mr. Chamberlain's acquiescence in this arrangement is not stated.

CATHOLIC CONGRESS.

His Holiness, the Pope's Reply to Cardinal Gibbons.

BALTIMORE, February 3.—On the 15th of last December Cardinal Gibbons wrote a letter to Cardinal Rampolla at Rome advising him in detail of the proceedings of the Catholic Congress held in this city in November, and of the celebration of the 100th anniversary of the establishment of the Hierarchy of the Catholic church in the United States. The Catholic Mirror is in possession of the following reply to Cardinal Gibbons:

ROME, January 13, 1890.

James Cardinal Gibbons, Archbisop of Baltimore:

YOUR EMINENCE—"Having made known to the Holy Father the contents of your estoemed favor of the 15th of last December, I now discharge the agreeable duty of informing you that His Holiness experienced the liveliest satisfaction at everything done in connection with the Catholic Congress held lately in your city with a grandeur that rendered it worthy of a people universally admired for their energy and civil progress. His holiness also spoke of yourself in terms of the highest praise for all you didon that occasion and said at the same time that he approves most fully of the prudent line of conduct you pursue in your management of every work undertaken to promote the greater development of your young and illustrious church. I must also aid that the Holy Father has shown himself most truly grateful for the exceedingly cordial welcome extended by you to His Eminence Monsignor Satolli, and for the delicate attention shown him during his entire stay. In conclusion, while thanking your eminence on my own part for the kind expressions towards myself contained in your letter, and assuring you at the same time of the great pleasure it would afford me to render you any service in my power, I beg to remain,

Your most obedient servant,
M. CARDINAL RAMPOLL.

A PECULIAR CASE.

A Convict, Reported Killed in an Attempt to Escape, Arrested at Chattanooga.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., February 3.—Frank Taylor was sent, some two years since, from this city to the penitentiary at Nashville, having been tried and found gailty of forgery. A few months afterwards he made a break for liberty, and was officially reported to have been shot and killed. A sensation was caused here by the arrest of a man, who bore a sharp resemblance to Taylor and who, after being jailed, confessed that he was indeed the convict who is accounted for as killed. The question occurs now as to who fills the grave Taylor is supposed to be in, or were the guards in collusion with him. He would not talk.

POWDERLY'S CASE.

Peter Wise, Jointly Accused with Him of Conspiracy, Bound Over for Trial.

PITTSBURG, PA., February 3.—Peter Wise, the labor leader of Scottsdale, Pa., jointly charged with Powderly, of the K. of L., with conspiracy, by Hon. Edward Callaghan, was given a hearing at Greensburg, Pa., in the afternoon, and was bound over to court in the sum of $300 by Justice Keenan.

J. A. Trimbaith, formerly president of the Miners' and Laborers' Amalgamated Association, testified that Wise, in his presence, told Callaghan that Powderly had issued an order to boycott him, and that he would see that he would not sell any more shoes

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS. CURE Sick Headache and relieve all the troubles incident to a bilious state of the system, such as Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Distress after eating, Pain in the Side, &c. While their most remarkable success has been shown in curing SICK Headache, yet Carter's Little Liver Pills are equally valuable in Constipation, curing and preventing this annoying complaint, while they also correct all disorders of the stomach, stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels. Even if they only cured HEAD ACHE they would be almost priceless to those who suffer from this distressing complaint; but fortunately their goodness does not end here, and those who once try them will find these little pills valuable in so many ways that they will not be willing to do without them. But after all sick head ACHE is the bane of so many lives that here is where we make our great boast. Our pills cure it while others do not.

Carter's Little Liver Pills are very small and very easy to take. One or two pills make a dose. They are strictly vegetable and do not gripe or purge, but by their gentle action please all who use them. In vials at 25 cents; five for $1. Sold by druggists everywhere, or sent by mail.

DR. A. TRASK'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If, but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THOROUGH TILE DRAINAGE.

BY C. P. CLARKSON.

(Concluded from last week.)

Mr. B. was thoroughly aroused, attended drainage conventions, read works on scientific agriculture, and other appropriate literature on the subject, until he become one of the most advanced and progressive farmers in that part of the State. This forty acres, by the most approved principles of farming, and by rotating with fertilizing crops, was brought back to more than its original productiveness, and at the end of fifteen years, made much larger crops of corn than the reclaimed fifteen acre swamp.

The farmer who got the one idea in his head, near Georgetown, concluded he knew enough. Evidently there was no room in his head for anything more. To drain a wet slough or swamp was a grand thing with him, and it was glory enough for one life. And I doubt if he has ever to this day discovered the great and essential difference between an open ditch and a tile drain. And this lack of full investigation of this question is what is cramping and holding back the farming world generally. He had obtained one idea of accidental sight. But this did not awaken him into mental activity enough to study out by close investigation and carefully reading the works of scientific authors, how to retain the fertility of the soil. He never dreamed that the farmer must make himself acquainted with the chemical condition of his land and the nature of the substances his crops are constantly substracting from it, as well as those which supply this loss. Farming is too far advanced for any man to repudiate the essential aid which science gives to guide him to successful management of his farm. But Mr. A. had seen one thing, and that was enough to last him. He wanted no newspapers or books to teach him how to farm. But my experience and observations in a long life have taught me that all such self-wise men always invariably die young—at least financially.

Two years ago last October, I visited these farms. Farmer A. had advanced no more in thirty years. His swamp had been constantly cropped without rotation or fertilizing crops. It was drained barely enough to carry off the surplus water so it could be tilled, but not enough to absorb all of the water which fell upon it. Hence it was nearly deprived of its fertility, as was his old forty acres which he had farmed to death. And he had neglected to preserve the fertility of the balance of his farm generally—using little or no clover, and hooting at the idea of going to the expense of draining land which had a good natural drainage; and most of the soil of his rolling land is now in the Gulf of Mexico, and all of his land was covered with that which will stick—an ample farm mortgage, with at least a half dozen percussion clauses. Farmer B. who had been aroused by his neighbor A. taunting him with having got the better of him in exchange of lands, was in a very prosperous condition. His lands were all thoroughly drained and he had added farm to farm, alternating with clover, grass, and cultivated crops. Noble cattle, horses, hogs and sheep grandly ornamented his farms, and made the landscape blossom with prosperity.

The lesson of these two farms, is, that all land should be tile drained. And it is possible, taking everything into consideration, it is more important to drain rolling land than level, damp land. The first without such improvements, is eventually and inevitably doomed to barrenness and sterility. So long as the surplus water runs off on the surface, whether in grass or cultivated crops, it is annually deprived of its richest soil, and retains little or none of the ammonia or fertilizing gasses of the atmosphere.

There is great earnestness with writers in papers and books for grading up all classes of stock. The farmers, however, as well as their farms, need far more grading up. When this is accomplished, the improvement of stock will follow as naturally as the sunshine and fertilizing rains of spring, bring forth vegetation. One farmer laughs at the idea that the air and clouds pour down nourishment for the growing crops, or that it is his duty to prepare his land to absorb those rich deposits, instead of letting them be carried away on the surface by the water which comes down copiously with every thunder shower. Others have learned, and are availing themselves of the knowledge, that chemistry is their best friend, and that their farms and the air above them, is a chemical laboratory, which always works for their benefit or injury, but which can always be controlled so as to utilize the valuable forces with which nature has surrounded them and their farms. Men must be graded up, and then they will soon grade up their farms. Then men, farms and elements will work together to bring happiness and prosperity to the human family.

All our lands—even our rich and fertile prairies of Iowa—will become worn out and exhausted. The mullein fields and sassafras barrens of the South were once as fertile as those of the North are now. But continued cropping and the wash of annual rains have accomplished the work of destruction. Their soil is washed away, and the fields are cut up with deep and impassible ravines, until they are nearly, if not hopelessly, beyond redemption. Without the drainage or rolling prairies our richer soils will travel the same road, into our creeks, thence to the rivers and to the Gulf of Mexico. Tile drainage alone can save even this country from barreness.

The rains, we are informed, 'whence they cometh, thither they return again.' But not so with the fertile soil of our farms. When once washed to the gulf it will never return again until the heavens are rolled together as a scroll.

COUNTY AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

The Lenawee County Agricultural Society met in annual session last Friday afternoon at Adrian. The President made a short address and Secretary Mills presented a very full report giving the receipts and expenditures in full during the past year.

The report of the Treasurer showed a balance in his hands of $187 91.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—George B. Horton.
Secretary—E. L. Mills.
Treasurer—Wm. B. Thompson.

Mr. Mills declined the nomination for the office of Secretary, but the society appreciating the value of his efficient services and his special adaptation for the work, prevailed upon him to accept the position for another year.

The following were chosen as directors: Wm. H. Wiggins, Adrian; M. H. Cogswell, Blissfield; Marshall Reed, Cambridge; D. Woodard, Clinton; Edward Beal, Dover; E. E. Burham, Deerfield; Rufus Baker, Fairfield; W. S. Osborne, Franklin; Geo. D. Moore, Hudson; Daniel Wiggins, Macon; H. C. Bradish, Madison; A. D. Osborne, Medina; F. Bey, Ogden; S. M. Hamilton, Palmyra; Jacob Rosenstiel, Riga; S. C. Lombard, Rollin; Geo. Holloway, Raisin; H. F. Barnes, Ridgeway; Arthur Manchester, Seneca; Loss Parsons, Woodstock; Calvin Crane, First Ward, Adrian; J. W. Davis, Third Ward, Adrian; J. R. Bennett, Fourth Ward, Adrian.

Rufus Baker moved that inasmuch as the institute that had been held, had been a grand success, that the executive committee be instructed to arrange for one next year, and the same was adopted.

The meeting then adjourned.

FRANKLIN UNION LITERARY AND LYCEUM

The above society met at the residence of Mr. Ezra Simmons Jan. 31st. The large, roomy house was filled to overflowing and everthing passed off pleasantly. After the miscellaneous business of the meeting the following program was well rendered:

Music—Spalding Bros. and H. McCollum.
Rec.—Lulu Hanis.
Song—Rena Allen. Mrs. A. B. Wisner and her two sons, Clarence and Carl.
Rec.—Ruth Taylor.
Dec.—Cecil Billington.
Dialogue—Spalding Bros.
Rec.—Alma Whelan.
Music—S. Simmons and Ed. Spalding.
Dialogue—Clarence and Lena Witherell.
Dec.—Willard Hunt.
Music—S. Simmons, Rena and Leon Allen.
Song—Myrtie Whelan.
Music—Clarence and Carl Wisner.

After recess followed the discussion of the question, "Has the Stage a Moral Tendency?" H. McCollum, aff; Ed. Spalding, neg. It was decided in favor of the negative. The next meeting will be held at Mr. G. W. Allen's Feb. 14th. A good program will be presented. The question for discussion is: Resolved—That the farmers of to-day are more prosperous than they were twenty-five years ago. Leading disputants are Mrs. A. B. Wisner, aff; S. N. Munger, neg.

When I think of the towel, the old-fashioned towel, that used to hang up by the printing-house door, I think that nobody in these days of shoddy can hammer out iron to wear as it were. The tramp who abused it, the devil who used it, the comp. who got at it when these two were gone; the makeup and foreman, the editor, poor man, each rubbed some grime off while they put a heap on. In, over, and under, 'twas blacker than thunder, 'twas harder than poverty, rougher than sin; from the roller suspended, it never was bended, and it flapped on the wall like a banner of tin. It grew thicker and rougher, and harder and tougher, and daily put on a more inkier hue, until one windy morning, without any warning, it fell to the floor and was broken in two.—Bob Burdette.

The grippe hangs on, like a Jersey mosquito in August. It is no respector of race, color or previous condition. Republican, democrat, prohibitionist and greenbacker, alike fall a prey to the pesky little microbe. Protestant and Catholic, evangelist and agnostic, Gentile and Jew all tumble to the racket when the Russian invader knocks at the door. Even newspaper men bend the suppliant knee and reach out for a clean towel, when the summons comes. Like old rye whiskey, it will fetch the best of 'em. If you don't believe it, read these clippings:

It is a very strong minded man who can have a bad cold and not have the influenza.

A dog suffering from the grip attracted a sympathetic crowd on a Lancaster thoroughfare. It sneezed six times in ten minutes.

Mr. Aldrich says la grippe makes one feel as though he were wearing a misfit skull that is too tight across the forehead and that pinches behind the ears.

"What do you mean by la grippe, count, in France? It seems such a strange name for a cold in the head." "Yais, Mees Hartingtonne, eet ees singulaire. I zink ze grippe in America is a sort of—of—vhat you call a handshake—n'est ce pas? And pairhaps zat has something to do vith vhat you call ze malair—ze shakes? C'est la meme chose, pairhaps."

It is not impossible that la grippe originated from the decayed bodies of the almost countless thousands of Chinese who last year perished in the awful floods of the Yellow river. The poison arising from vast areas of putrefaction in any quarter of the globe may from natural causes select a place wherein to focus its force into the birth of an epidemic. Isn't it awful to imagine a Chinese microbe preempting a claim upon one's system?

VISITED BY AN EARTHQUAKE.

Thirty Distinct Shocks Felt at the Residence of Philip S. DePuy.

About eleven o'clock on Tuesday evening, February 4th, Philip S. DePuy was awakened by a terrific noise like the booming of a cannon against the side of his bedroom, which is situated on the west side of the house. The windows jarred, the house shook and so startling was the sensation that Mr. DePuy quickly sprang out of bed and struck a light. Another concussion came which was followed by four more about a minute apart.

Mr. DePuy immediately thought of an earthquake and his first impulse was to arouse the other members of the household, but after the sixth explosion there came a lull, and, thinking it was over, he returned to bed. In about five minutes there came another shock so terrible in force that it woke up Mrs. DePuy, who is hard of hearing.

"Did you let something fall?" she asked of her husband.

"No," he replied, "it is the earthquake."

Mr. and Mrs. DePuy now began to count and very soon two such terrible shocks struck the building as to cause Mrs. DePuy to scream out with fear.

Mr. DePuy lay with his right side toward the west wall of the room and the last shock—the most terrific of all—struck the house with such force that his right ear was instantly deaf. They counted together twenty-four shocks, making, with the six which occurred before Mrs. DePuy awoke, thirty in all. The concussions lasted from eleven o'clock P. M. to two o'clock A. M.

But the strangest part of the story remains to be told.

On the east side of the house, with two large rooms, sitting-room and dining-room between, is situated the room occupied by their daughter, Miss E. Cora DePuy.

The earthquake did not affect this side of the house at all. About eleven o'clock, Miss DePuy thinks, judging from the moon which shone in her east window, she was awakened by a noise which she immediately thought was a cyclone. The house is surrounded by shade trees and a strong wind always causes wild noises in the night.

Her first impulse was to arouse the members of the family and have all escape to the cellar. But there soon came a lull, and, as her mother is an invalid, she thought it not worth while to arouse her unless greater danger was imminent.

Miss DePuy not being as well as usual fell asleep again, and knew nothing of the terrible ordeal through which her parents passed until morning.

The only other occupant of the house was Robert Everett, who slept in a chamber on the west side of the house, but who heard nothing of the wind or the concussions.

Inquiry among the neighbors, up to this writing, elicits that everybody principally was awake and heard what they supposed was a terrible wind, but no earthquake. Every concussion jarred the windows on the west side of Mr. DePuy's house. It was a terrible experience and one which the participants hope never to realize again.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

NOTICE.—Whereas, on the 29th day of January, A.D. 1890, my wife, J. Rose Roberts left my bed and board without just cause or provocation. All persons are hereby notified to neither harbor or trust her on my account, as I shall pay no debts of her contracting from and after said date. H. B. ROBERTS.

WANTED.—A girl to work in a family of four, five miles north of Adrian, near Gurnee school house. Steady place, good home and best of wages given. Call, or address Mrs. King, Box E, Adrian, Mich.

SETTLE UP.—I wish to close up all my accounts for the year 1889, and request all parties knowing themselves indebted to me to settle the same before Feb. 10, 1890.
H. J. WILLIAMS.
Ridgeway, Jan. 29.

ANNUAL MEETING.—The annual meeting of Tecumseh & Macon Telegraph Co., will be held in Grand Army Hall, Tecumseh, on Monday, Feb. 10, 1890, at 1 o'clock p.m., for the election of officers and for the transaction of such other business as may come before the meeting. Let each share holder be present.
S. W. BAUGHMAN.

HICKORY WANTED.—First and second growth hickory timber cut 38 inches long, delivered at the Handle Works in Tecumseh, for which I will pay the highest market price. Cash on delivery.
MARTIN A. ZIMMERMAN.

FOR SALE.—As my health continues poor, I offer my place for sale of 20 acres one and one half miles from Tecumseh on the Saline road. For particulars enquire of Chas. Burridge or address L. A. Chapman, No. 8, 7th ave., Grand Rapids, Mich.

Louis Snyder, of Adrian, was in town over Sunday.

Mrs Jos. Rynd, of Madison, is visiting at Elliott Gray's.

S. G. Aten of Cambridge, was visiting friends in Tecumseh yesterday.

Ben Reynolds will cry at an auction on the 12th, down in the town of Madison.

A portion of our township correspondence is crowded upon the eighth page this week.

Rev. Washington Gardner was the guest of Henry W. Stevens during his stay in Tecumseh.

Our Clinton subscribers can rely upon a good grist of local news from that section every week hereafter.

Joe. Sage, of Macon, heard about the grippe, bought a 5-foot ax helve and hung an 11-pound ax, and when last heard from two men were busy piling up wood after him.

A fair audience witnessed the entertainment given by Mr. and Mrs. Scammell, at the Babtist church, Tuesday evening. The music was very entertaining, but especially so the recitations by Mrs. Scammell, which were received with applause.

The burning of Secretary Tracy's house in Washington, by which his wife and daughter met a terrible death, was one of the most terrible calamities that has ever befallen the capital city. The heart of the whole country will go out in sympathy for a noble man in this awful visitation.

Rev. Washington Gardner delivered his lecture to a good-sized audience last evening. The reverend gentleman is an eloquent orator and his lecture was extremely interesting—especially so to the old soldiers. He gave a vivid description of the battle of Chattanooga; in which he took part, told of the life in camp, and gave a glowing account of the armies in action. He spoke over two hours and held his audience closely throughout. His account of the ludicrous scenes of camp life was laughable, and the horrors described after a battle were extremely touching.

FARMERS' SOCIAL CLUB.

The Farmer's Social Club met at the home of R. B. Gillespie, Friday evening, Jan. 31. Those who sometimes say the interest in farmers' clubs is dying out, that they will soon be numbered with the things of the past would have such ideas scattered had they been present and seen the large crowd gathered, and the interest with which all listened to the interesting program. With one exception every part was filled, and many of Longfellow's best thoughts were presented to an appreciative audience. The question, which is the most profit to the farmer, to sell his cream or make butter and cheese, was discussed by many present. Most of the speakers thought that considering the profit only by dollars and cents, that with the low price of cream, it was most profitable to make butter if a good market could be secured, (which was claimed could always be for a first-class article) but when the extra amount of work which churning makes for the farmer's wife, the wear and tear on the physical system was considered, the profit might be on the side of selling the cream. The discussion branched off on the different modes of separating the cream from the milk, of preparing the butter for packing, both of which elicited questions of interest, and gave much general instruction.

A motion was made that our meeting in March be a character representation of the authors studied through the winter. Motion prevailed and the following committee appointed to make the necessary arrangements: Mrs. Rector, Ida Rector, Geo. Camburn, Etta Coddington, Lue Hendryx, Will Fisher. Meeting adjourned to meet Feb. 28, at I. H. Schreder's, with an interesting program, which will be published later.

Bert Garlinghouse was in the employ of the St. John Plow Co. of Kalamazoo, a few weeks last summer, and the company was so well pleased with his services that they have offered him a permanent position as foreman. He has accepted the offer and will begin work about the first of March. Success to him.

The new band made their appearance in public Saturday evening for the first time. Considering the little time they have had for practice, the boys played exceedingly well, and were properly complimented for their efforts. They are working hard, and we anticipate before the summer arrives, we shall have a first-class band. —Blissfield Advance.

At a county convention of Patrons of Industry, held in Adrian at Lochner's hall, Wednesday, evening, Jan. 29, considerable business of importance was transacted. The election of county officers and the selection of seven delegates to attend the state convention at Flint, Feb. 26, resulted as follows:

Pres.—C. H. Bramble, Tipton.
Vice Pres.—C. A. Crane, Madison.
Sec.—C. A. Chase, Raisin.
Treas.—Chas. Keyner, Adrian twp.
Sentinel—A. Paul.
Ex. Com.—N. H. Moore, George Holloway, Oscar Bliss.
Finance Com.—J. S. Rynd, S. N. Munger, L. C. Chase.

In Morenci a young lady has a "best fellow" whom she adores, and being handy with a needle, presents him with fancy work of her own make. For a Christmas present she gave him several pair of hose with his monogram embroidered on them. A few days ago they were walking along the street, when they noticed two women ahead. As the latter reached the crossing they raised their skirts, and behold, on one plump drum stick was one of the stockings, monogram and all. Instantly there was an angry lady, a grief-stricken young man, and a prospect of a disruption of two fond hearts. But when the gentleman proved that the wearer of the stocking was his washerwoman's daughter, there was a reconciliation, promising he had his laundry work done elsewhere.—Hudson Post.

Geo. Hollister and family were the victims last Friday evening. A goodly company from village and country pounced down upon them at an early hour in the evening, and a few hours were passed right merrily by all those present.

Al. Van Winkle, who clerks for Will Anderson, while paring a chunk of dried beef last Friday, pared off the end of his index finger. He is dealing out coffee and sugar again all right, but his left hand will take a rest for some days.

Mrs. Perley Bills departed this life shortly before eight o'clock last evening. She never regained consciousness after the first attack, and gradually failed until the end came. The funeral services will be held at the family residence to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock.

The National Magazine for February will contain an interesting article by Prof. Schele de Vere of the University of Virginia, entitled "How we Write," giving many curious historical facts. Rev. J. C. Quinn, LL D., will contribute "Biblical Literature." F. W. Harkins Chancellor of the National University, will continue his essays on Shakespeare.

Among the best articles in the February number of the Forum is the one by Leonard W. Bacon on "A Political Paradox." It is an argument showing that, although the Republican party contains a majority of the men of moral ideas, the Democratic party now stands for good morals in politics. It also gives a moral estimate of Harrison's administration.

Cyrus W. Wells, of Minneapolis, in remitting for the HERALD says: "It wont do to get behind on the paper, for it serves to keep the wife good natured and the baby happy.' They all talk in about the same strain. Minneapolis has had the best of sleighing since Dec. 28, and the thermometer now marks from 20 to 25 degrees below zero each day.

The W. C. T. U. will hold their weekly meeting at their temperance room, Friday, Jan. 24, at 3 o'clock. Subject before the meeting, "Equal Suffrage." We shall be glad to see any ladies at our rooms that day, whether they are in sympathy with us or not.—Tecumseh News.

Field had just as soon be surrounded by a dozen ladies as one. Tastes differ. Now let us hear from Stacy.—Adrian Press.

Well, we had just as soon be surrounded by one lady as by a dozen, provided the surrounder is good looking—and a little sooner.

Mrs. Deland's serial, "Sidney," is a great attraction in the February Atlantic. This number gives us the fourth, fifth and sixth chapters. The story steadily develops in interest and the strong scene with which this installment closes is in the author's best manner. Dr. Holmes contributes the third of his papers, "Over the Teacups," and describes the people at his tea table, and tells the curious dream which Number Five relates to her companions.

The Farmers' Institute held at Adrian last week was largely attended, and was one of the most successful gatherings of the kind ever held in the county. Papers were read upon a large variety of topics connected with farming and the discussions were spicy and interesting. In lieu of publishing a brief synopsis of the proceedings which would convey but an imperfect idea of the gathering, we shall publish hereafter in full some of the papers which were presented on the occasion.

At a meeting of the Lenawee Co., Poultry Association, held at Tecumseh, Feb. 5th, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year,
Pres.—C. A. Waldron, Tecumseh.
Vice Pres.—Oscar Doolittle, Adrian.
Sec and Treas.—C. D. Keyes, Clinton. Also one Vice President from each ward in the city and each township in the county.

The W. C. T. U. of Milwaukee, Wis. have received formal notice that the Union can no longer occupy quarters in the Y. M. C. A. building. Having allied themselves with the Prohibition party, women must be treated like any other political organization and are therefore debarred from occupying the aforementioned apartments.

In the death of Fred Eaton, Toledo loses one of her best, brightest and most enterprising business men. He was one of nature's noblemen, and his untimely death will be mourned in hundreds of towns beyond the confines of his native city. Cut down in the prime of life, at the threshold of usefulness and honor, the place he leaves vacant can never be fully filled.

At the annual meeting of the Commercial Telegraph Co. held last Monday, the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year:
Pres.—W. B. Keyser.
Vice Pres.—D. T. Hall.
Sec.—L. G. North.
Treas.—O. P. Bills.
Manager—R. J. W. Bowen.
Directors—W. B Keyser, O. B. Finch, L. G. North, R. J. W. Bowen, E. C. Cook, O. P. Bills, Chas. Fowler, Will Fisher, D. T. Hall.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE for February contains another article in the African series, by Herbert Ward, for five years an officer in the Congo Free State; the first of two articles on John Ericsson, by W. C. Church, his chosen biographer; the account of a visit paid to several leading Spanish novelists, by an American novelist; a short paper on a very ancient image recently found in Idaho; a glimpse of several picturesque Hungarian castles as seen by the author of "Is Life Worth Living?" and interesting illustrated fiction and poems, with the new department, "The Point of View."

Professor W. C. Kitchin, Ph. D., of Cambridge, has written a picturesque and vivid historical novel entitled "The Fall of the Christians," which is running in the New York Ledger. The religious and the historical elements are dominant in the work, and in narrating the overthrow of Christianity in Japan in the seventeenth century, the author has entered a field fresh in English literature. "The Fall of the Christians" is written by a scholar who has made a specialty of Japanese history, and is based on manuscripts which were discovered by the author, while he was occupying a distinguished scholastic position in Japan.

At a meeting of the Southern Michigan Poultry Association, held at Tecumseh, Mich., Feb. 5th, 1890, it was decided to hold the next poultry show at Monroe, Mich., and the following officers elected:
President—D. R. Crampton, Monroe.
Vice Pres.—Frank Hammond, C. E. Kirbutz, S. M. Sacket.
Treasurer—Lyrott Bloodgood.
Secretary—E. O. Grosvenor.

THE ANGELUS.
Costliest Picture in the World.

This masterpiece by the great French painter, Jean Francois Millet, was purchased at auction in Paris last summer by the American Art Association of New York. The cost, $116 000 and duties, amounting in all to about $150,000, was nearly $400 a square inch, as the picture is only 18x21 inches in size. This is the highest price ever paid for a single picture.

A Beautiful Photo Etching, as represented above, the full size of the original, in which the greatest care and artistic ability have been employed to reproduce all the beauties of the painting, has been prepared specially to be sent as a free premium to every annual subscriber of the weekly edition of

THE ST. LOUIS REPUBLIC.

A copy of this etching on fine plate paper, 24x38 inches in size, will be sent free, postage prepaid, to every annual subscriber after November 1, 1889.

Lampson's Plans.

He Will Fight to the Bitter End.

OUTLINE OF THE SUPREME COURT PROCEEDINGS,

Which Will Be Instituted as Soon as the Papers Can Be Prepared—Meeting of the Republican State Executive Committee and Attorneys to Arrange for Future Action—Exciting Scenes Expected.

COLUMBUS, O., February 3.

The last act in the Marquis vs. Lampson contest for the lieutenant governorship, promises to possess features as rich, rare and racy as any displayed in the proceedings which have already been held. Mr. Lampson is determined to fight the battle to the bitter end and he will be warmly sustained by the Republicans of Ohio.

Chairman Conger and several members of the Republican state executive committee, with Messrs. Nash, Patterson and Voris, the attorneys for Mr. Lampson, and the late lieutenant governor himself, will hold a consultation in this city, early in the week, relative to future action in the contest. They will arrange the details of the plan for procedure in the Supreme Court.

Much has been said about taking the case to the supreme court, but the nature of the proceedings to be conducted there is unknown to the public, as a case exactly similar to the one in question has never before existed in this state. An outline of the action to be taken, which is peculiarly interesting at this time, is as follows:

Proceedings in quo warranto will be instituted by Mr. Lampson, requiring Mr. Marquis to show by what authority and right he occupies the chair and exercises the office of lieutenant governor. To this Mr. Marquis will answer. In his answer Mr. Marquis will set up that part of the Senate journal containing the record of the contest proceedings as evidence that he is entitled to the office. Mr. Lampson will then file a reply claiming that the Senate never acquired any jurisdiction to determine the case because it did not hear any evidence. In this connection will be cited the proceedings in several contested election cases which were heard in the senate. The cases to which attention will be called are Pike vs. Hamer, for a judgship in 1884; Cox v. Harmon, for a judgship in 1877, and Weiner vs. Howells for state treasurer, in 1874. In all of these cases the trials were before the entire Senate, and members of that body were sworn as jurors to hear the case. The testimony, both oral and by deposition, was hear by the entire Senate, and not summarized and reported in that form by a committee, as in the Marquis vs. Lampson contest.

It will also be claimed in Mr. Lampson's answer that the Senate is made by law the court to determine contested election cases for State offices, and as such court, is one of special and limited jurisdiction, and, therefore, its records may be impeached. Further proceedings in behalf of Mr. Lampson will then tend toward impeaching that part of the Senate journal relative to the contest. The decision of the Supreme Court will not remand the case for further proceedings as is sometimes done in actions taken up from lower tribunals, but will be final, and either reinstate Mr. Lampson or leave matters as they now stand.

Should Mr. Marquis be ousted by the Supreme Court and refuse to give up the office in accordance with this decision, the court can cause his arrest for contempt. If he should be aided and abetted by members of the Senate, in refusing to vacate in favor of Mr. Lampson, those senators upholding him can also be arrested for contempt of court. This is the law relative to the matter and some breezy scenes may be expected before the curtain is rung down on the contest for the lieutenant governorship.

NO HOPE

ENTERTAINED BY THE PHYSICIANS OF MRS. COPPINGER.

Secretary Blaine's Eldest Daughter Fails Again and Lies in a Stupor, with Death Expected to Occur at Any Moment.

WASHINGTON, February 3.—The physicians attending Mrs. Coppinger, Secretary Blaine's eldest daughter, put out the following bulletin at 10:30 p. m.: "The slight encouragement that was entertained by Mrs. Coppinger's physicians last evening was unfortunately dispelled this morning. Unfavorable symptoms developed and have continued without amelioration all day, so at the present moment serious apprehensions are felt."

SORROW IN THE BLAINE FAMILY.

The Great Statesman's Eldest Daughter Passes Away.

WASHINGTON, February 3.—Mrs. Coppinger, the eldest daughter of Secretary Blaine, who has been lying ill for several days, died about 5 o'clock in the morning.

Mrs. Alice Coppinger, the eldest daughter of Secretary Blaine, who has been seriously ill with brain fever, the result of an attack of the la grippe, died at the Blaine mansion at 3 o'clock a. m. The funeral services will take place from St. Matthew's church on Tuesday morning at half past ten o'clock. The place of interment has not yet been decidedly determined upon, but probably will be Oak Hill cemetery, in this city. Rev. Thomas Sherman will officiate.

Cardinal Gibbons to Officiate at the Funeral.

BALTIMORE, February 3.—Cardinal Gibbons was informed of the death of Mrs. Coppinger, the daughter of the secretary of state, last evening. The Cardinal will assist at the obsequies in Washington on Tuesday morning.

BABY KILLED BY RATS.

The Head and Face Horribly Mutilated by the Rodents, the Brain Being Exposed.

KANSAS CITY, Februory 3.—The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Reeves, living in a basement at the corner of Third and Cherry streets, died from wounds inflicted upon it by rats some time during Saturday night.

About 3 o'clock in the morning Mrs. Reeves was awakened by the infant's cries. She discovered the child's condition and took it to Dr. Hedges, who described the wounds as follows: The nose was eaten entirely off; horrible wounds appeared on both cheek bones; the scalp had been torn away from the top of the head down to the ears, and the skull had been gnawed through in one place so that the brain was exposed. The child lived only a few hours after it received its injuries.

A DOCTRESS IN JAIL.

Charged with Committing an Abortion on a Fifteen-Year-Old Girl.

PERU, IND., February 3.—Mrs. Dr. Clair Kyler, a practicing lady physician, of fair reputation, has been arrested and placed in jail here on a warrant issued by the grand jury now in session, for the crime of abortion, which she committed several months ago upon Laura Cripe, a young girl only fifteen years of age. Miss Cripe is the daughter of a wealthy and prominent Dunkard farmer living just south of town, and is a very bright and intelligent young girl who was by too confident a trust in a faithless lover made a dupe of, and rather than have the disgrace fall upon herself and parents she sought the secret means which were brought about by the prisoner. The high moral standing of the girl's parents and which she formerly occupied, makes a considerable sensation, and much indignation is expressed against the doctress.

A reporter held an interview with the prisoner in the county jail, where she is confined, and on making himself known the woman, without questioning, immediately commenced her version of the case: "Well, I am innocent," she said. "The young lady came to me and asked treatment for her case. I found out her age, and when she said she was only fifteen, I said I wouldn't do anything without written consent of her parents. She said her parents sent her to me. Then a doctor also advised me to treat the girl. I made an examination and found that her offspring was dead, and had been for some time. The girl then acknowledged that she had been taking medicine privately for the same purpose. The next day the child was born, and all I did was to assist and harbor the girl."

The trial occurs this term, and will probably result badly for the prisoner.

MRS. PARNELL'S POVERTY.

The Wretched Home of the Great Irish Patriot's Mother.

WASHINGTON, February 3.—A special dispatch from Trenton, N. J., says that Mrs. Parnell's home in Bordentown is nothing more than a ruin; that the window sills are shaky and the doors are breaking with their own weight, and that the wind whistles through every part of the house and the roof lets in both sunshine and rain. The story continues as follows:

Mr. Parnell was found sitting in a large room, bare of furniture except a few chairs and a table. Her feet were encased in a pair of old rubbers and wrapped in what had once been a dress. The only heat in the room came in from the sun. Fire there was none, nor even a stove. Apologizing to the reporter for the absence of a fire on such a cold day, and requesting him to take the only remaining chair in the room, Mrs. Parnell resumed her seat and the reporter stated the object of his visit. Mrs. Parnell was at first reticent to enter upon the story of her poverty, but the facts being so patent, she finally consented to answer a few questions.

"How is it that you do not have a fire in such a cold day?"

"There is no wood nor coal in the house."

"How long have you been without fire wood?"

"Some six weeks now."

"And you have had no fire in the house in all that time?"

"Only in the kitchen, where I have a small fire for a short time each day to prepare food."

"Of what does your meals consist?"

"Oatmeal and potatoes principally and sometimes I have a little bread."

"Have you any source of income at present?"

"None whatever."

"How do you manage to get along?"

"My wants are very few, indeed," and I can live comfortable on $12.5 a year."

SWINDLED DISTILLERS.

A Bogus Agent of a British Syndicate in Custody at Owensboro, Ky.

OWENSBORO, KY., February 3.—Captain J. C. Brain, late of the Confederate navy, who has swindled any number of the prominent distillers of this state, is in custody here for his fine work in this city. He came here a short time since, and after doing the town for a day or two, approached Mr. R. Monarch, the leading distiller in this city, with a British syndicate scheme to buy his distillery properties, which are immensely valuable.

He closed the negotiation by inducing Mr. Monarch to indorse a draft for $500 on the firm of A. Bosdet & Co., London, England, of which he said he was a member. The draft was not paid and Mr. Monarch lost his money. Brain worked the same game in probably a dozen Kentucky towns, in three or four of which he has been arrested and tried during the past week, escaping each time on a technicality. He has papers showing that he was an officer on the Merrimac, which was whipped by the Monitor in the war between the state.

TAFT FOR GOVERNOR IN '91.

A Sensational Story Printed by a Washington Paper.

WASHINGTON, February 3.—Someone here has launched a gubernatorial boom for William H. Taft, of Cincinnati, the new solicitor general appointed by President Harrison. An afternoon paper prints a story to the effect that Harrison has made the appointment to strengthen himself in Ohio where he has been exceptionally weak, especially among Foraker's friends. The president, so the story goes, is steering a middle course between the Sherman and Foraker wings of the Republican party in Ohio, and has taken up Taft, who has no entangling alliances, with the specific purpose of elevating him to the governor's chair in 1892, thereby giving Taft the power to control the Ohio delegation for Harrison in 1892. The story is laughed at by Ohio Republicans here, who pronounce it absurd, a lie and not an ingenious one.

SUNDAY IN JAIL.

President Claussen and Broker Pell Go to Ludlow.

NEW YORK, February 3.—President Claussen, of the Sixth National bank, failed to procure bail and was obliged to go Ludlow street jail until today.

Broker Pell's wife and sister offered to go on Pell's bond, but the wife's property did not seem adequate and the sister's property is in New Jersey, and therefore not acceptable in a New York court. Mr. Pell was returned to jail, but it was said that his wife would be able before night to procure bail for him. The examiners have not made public any new facts they may have learned in regard to the Sixth National, the Lenox Hill or the Equitable banks.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, R.,

Slowly Dying of Blood Poisoning.

LONDON, February 3.—It is stated that Master Abraham Lincoln, son of United States Minister Lincoln, is slowly dying from blood poisoning, the result of the drastic treatment to which he has been subjected by the French physicians who attended him at Versailles. This assertion is made upon undisputable authority.

THE CHILDHOOD OF JESUS.

LESSON VI, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, FEB. 9.

Text of the Lesson, Luke ii, 40-52—Commit Verses 49-52—Golden Text, Luke ii, 52—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

40. "And the child grew and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom." Having performed all things according to the law, Joseph and Mary returned to their humble home at Nazareth, there to abide. And there grew up this wonderful child of whom the angels sang and the shepherds testified, and whom the wise men came from the east to see and worship; whose advent had troubled the king and all Jerusalem, and for whom many little children had already laid down their lives (Matt. ii, 3, 16). This verse tells all we know of His life after the return to Nazareth until He was twelve years of age. As to His body He grew and waxed strong (the Revised Version leaves out the words "in spirit") as any healthy child would. His body was flesh and blood, just like ours; He took such a body that in it He might die and thus destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil.

"The grace of God was upon Him." The manifest blessing and power of God was upon Him even as a little boy; He was a holy child, and the same grace will be upon every boy and girl today who earnestly desires it, that they may glorify God. Let the scholars read these texts: John i, 14-17; Acts iv, 33; xiii, 43; xx, 32; Rom. iii, 24; II Cor. viii, 9; ix, 8; xii, 9; II Pet. iii, 18.

41. "Now, His parents went to Jerusalem every year at the feast of the passover." It is written in the law of Moses, "Three times thou shalt keep a feast unto me in the year. * * * Three times in the year all thy males shall appear before the Lord God" (Ex. xxiii, 14-17). The passover was kept in the first month of the year, to commemorate the deliverance of Israel from the bondage of Egypt (Ex. xii, 1-7), and not only points backward to that deliverance, but also forward to a greater deliverance from all nations of the earth, when the passover shall be fulfilled in the kingdom of God.

42. "And when he was twelve years old they went up to Jerusalem, after the custom of the feast." This was probably His first visit to Jerusalem since He had been there as an infant in His mother's arms; but often had the events of the first great passover been talked over at home, as well as the more ancient history of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, and the later events under Joshua, the Judges and the Kings. Many must have been the questions asked by this wise boy concerning all things of which Moses and the prophets had written, and wonderful for wisdom His own sayings, even as a child.

43. "And when they had fulfilled the days." The passover was on the fourteenth day of the month at even, and the next day began the feast of unleavened bread, which continued seven days, so that the full time of the feast would be eight days (Lev. xxiii, 5).

44. "They sought Him among their kinsfolk and acquaintance." Here is another strange thing that His parents should think that such a child would prefer the company of kinsfolk or acquaintance to that of His own mother. There is evidently some neglect here on the part of Mary of the precious trust committed to her, which is all the more strange at such a time as this when she is just returning from this holy feast. If we have just been to the Holy Communion, and then on our way home allow other things to occupy our minds and form the subject of our conversation, we shall doubtless lose our fellowship with Jesus, and it may take some time to have it restored.

45. "They turned back again to Jerusalem, seeking Him." Having failed to find Him or obtain tidings of Him among their kinsfolk, they next retrace their steps to Jerusalem, full, no doubt, of anxious thoughts concerning Him. A day's journey they had gone without Him carelessly; a day's journey they retrace their steps sorrowfully. Do we ever go a day without fellowship with Him and wander away from Him, our hearts filled with other things? If so, let us not wonder if it takes more than a day's sorrowful seeking ere we again rejoice in Him. See in the fifth chapter of the Song of Solomon how a little neglect of The Beloved and slowness to respond when He calls causes much anxious and sorrowful seeking. Abiding and ready obedience is the only way.

46. "After three days they found Him in the temple." A day's seeking in the city, and finally they think of the Temple, and there they find Him. Why did they not go right to the temple as soon as they reached the city? It looks as if Mary had forgotten Gabriel's words concerning this child, as if she did not know just who her child really was; as if, though outwardly keeping the feast of the Lord, she was not in fellowship with Him. Her ancestor David had made it the habit of his life to inquire of the Lord about everything, but Mary does not seem to have done so (I Sam. xxiii, 2, 4; xxx, 8; II Sam. ii, 1; v, 19, 23), else she would sooner have found her son, or not have lost Him at all.

"Sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions." The word "doctor" is found only here and in chap. v, 1; Acts v, 34; but the Greek word signifies a teacher, and is thus translated many times; so we see the boy Jesus in the midst of the teachers of the law, listening to them and asking them questions, and, for aught we know, he had spent the three days in this manner, no doubt kindly cared for by some of them.

47. "And all that heard Him were astonished at His understanding and answers." They probably found one better versed in many things in the law than they were themselves, able to answer all their questions and to ask them many questions which puzzled them. He did not waste his time like the young people of today upon story papers and magazines, but, no doubt, confined Himself to the one great book of the Law, the Prophets and the Psalms. Let me say to all who find the Bible a dull book that it was so to me once, but God, by His Spirit, has made it the most interesting of books, and what He has done for me He will do for you; only ask Him (Luke xi, 9).

48. "Son, why hast Thou thus dealt with us? Behold, Thy father and I have sought Thee sorrowing." This was the salutation of Mary when they found Him in the temple. He might have replied: "Why did you go off without me?" But we cannot think of Him ever saying anything impertinent or unduteful. In all His life He did no sin; He knew no sin; He was without sin (I Pet. ii, 22; II Cor. v, 21; Heb. iv, 15). If we ever sin now (excuse we seem to have lost Him), it must be our own fault, for He has said, "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee" (Heb. xiii, 5). Another truth is that all who sorrowfully seek Him are sure to find Him (Jer. xxix, 13; John xx, 11-17).

49. "And He said unto them, How is it that ye sought me? Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" (R. V., "In my Father's house," or "in the things of my Father.") This is the first recorded utterance of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the one solitary recorded utterance of thirty years. "Thirty years, unknown, the God-Galilee's sequestered son, yet He was the Son of God. Daily life, at Joseph's call; daily duties however small, yet He was the Lord of all."

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage, bearing date the 16th day of January, A.D. 1884, made and executed by Jeremiah M. Burleson and Julia E. Burleson, his wife of the first part, to Enoch G. Cook, of Tecumseh, Michigan, of the second part, which mortgage was on the 17th day of January, A. D., 1884, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for the county of Lenawee, Michigan, in Liber 109 of Mortgages, on page 591, and which said mortgage was afterwards on the 27th day of May, A. D. 1885, duly assigned by the said Enoch G. Cook to Moses Bartlett, which deed of assignment was on the 30th day of January, A.D., 1890, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee county aforesaid, in Liber 115 of Mortgages, on page 669; by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative. And whereas there is at this date claimed to be due and unpaid, as principal and interest on the said mortgage, the sum of One Thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty-one and 12-100 Dollars ($1751.12) and no proceedings have been instituted at law or in equity to collect the same. Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale and the statutes of the State of Michigan, in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the money now as aforesaid, due and owing on said mortgage, together with interest to accrue thereon, and the costs and charges of this foreclosure, including an attorney fee of Thirty-five Dollars, as provided by law and stipulated for in said mortgage, I shall on the 21st day of April, A. D. 1890, at the east front door of the court house in the city of Adrian, in said county of Lenawee, (that being the place where the circuit court for said county is holden) sell at public vendue to the highest bidder, all those parcels of land situate in the township of Macon, in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan known and described as follows, to wit: The east half of the northwest quarter of section five (5) town five (5), south, of range five (5) east. Also all that part of the east half of the southwest quarter of said section five (5), town five (5) south, of range five (5) east, bounded as follows: Beginning at the intersection of the Tecumseh and Saline road, so called, with the east line of the southwest quarter of said section five (5); thence running southwesterly in center of said road six (6) rods and twelve (12) links; thence north parallel with east line of said southwest quarter of section five (5) to the north line of said southwest quarter of section five (5); thence east to northeast corner of said southwest quarter of section five (5), thence south to the place of beginning, containing eighty-one acres of land, more or less.

Dated Jan. 23d, 1890.

EXECUTOR'S AUCTION SALE.

AT 10 o'clock in the forenoon on the 8th day of February, A.D., 1890, I will offer for sale to the highest bidder upon the premises herein described, the home farm of the late Francis Coates, deceased, consisting of about One Hundred and Fifty-three acres on the southeast quarter of section four in township of Ridgeway in this county. The farm is divided by the W. St. L. & P. R. R., and will be offered as a whole, and also in two parcels as divided by said railroad, there being about 83 acres on the west and 70 acres on the east side side thereof. This farm lies practically in the rapidly growing village of Britton—a few rods only from the depot of two railroads, postoffice, stores, etc., and is very desirable for farming purposes, about fifty acres of said premises being good timbered land, with good opportunity to divide a considerable portion into valuable village lots. Terms made known on the day of sale. All rights reserved.

JOHN BRITTON, Executor of the last will of Francis Coates, deceased.

ESTATE OF WILLIAM TAYLOR.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 20th day of January in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of William Taylor, an insane person.

On reading and filing the petition of Charles C. Tolles guardian of said insane person, praying for the allowance of his fourth annual account as such guardian; and for such other order and decree, as to this court shall seem proper.

It is Ordered, That Monday, the 17th day of February next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the next-of-kin of said insane person and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted:

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

CLEOPATRA.

Being an Account of the Fall and Vengeance of Harmachis, the Royal Egyptian,

She bowed her head awhile, and then, as I spake not, once more went on:

"Let all my sin be told, Harmachis, and then let justice come. See how this thing happened. Half did Cleopatra learn to love thee, and deep in her heart she bethought her of taking thee to wedded husband. For the sake of this half love of hers she spared the lives of those in the plot whom she had meshed, bethinking her that if she wedded thee she might use them and thee to draw the heart of Egypt, which loves not her nor any Ptolemy. And then, once again she entrapped thee, and in thy folly thou didst betray to her the secret of the hidden wealth of Egypt, that to-day she squanders to delight the luxurious Antony; and, of a truth, at that time she purposed to make good her oath and marry thee. But on the very morn when Dellius came for answer she sent for me, and, telling me all—for my wit, above any, she holds at price—demanded of me my judgment whether she should defy Antony and wed thee, or whether she should put the thought away and come to Antony. And I—now mark thou all my sin!—I, in my bitter jealousy, rather than I would see her thy wedded wife and thou her loving lord, counseled her most strictly that she should come to Antony, well knowing, for I had had speech with Dellius—that if she came, this weak Antony would fall like a ripe fruit at her feet, as indeed, he has fallen. And to-night have I shown thee the issue of the scheme. Antony loves Cleopatra and Cleopatra loves Antony, and thou art robbed, and matters have gone well for me, who of all women on the earth to-night am the wretchedest by far. For when I saw how thy heart broke, but now my heart seemed to break with thine, and no longer could I bear the burden of my evil deeds, but knew that I must tell them and take my punishment.

"And no more have I to say, save that I thank thee for thy courtesy in hearkening, and this one thing I add: Driven by my great love, I have sinned against thee unto death! I have ruined thee, I have ruined Khem, and myself also have I ruined! Let death reward me! Slay thou me, Harmachis! Gladly will I die upon thy sword; ay, and kiss its blade! Slay thou me, and go; for if thou slayest me not, myself will I surely slay!" And she threw herself upon her knees, lifting her fair breast toward me, that I might smite her with my dagger. And, in my bitter fury, minded was I to strike, for above all I thought how, when I was fallen, this woman, who herself was my cause of shame, had scourged me with her scorn. But hard it is to slay a fair woman; and even as I lifted my hand to strike I remembered that now twice had she saved my life.

"Woman! thou shameless woman!" I said, "arise! I slay thee not! Who am I, that I should judge thy crime, that with mine own do overtop all earthly judgment!"

"Slay me, Harmachis!" she moaned; "slay me or I slay myself! My burden is too great for me to bear! Be not so deadly calm! Curse me and slay!"

"What was it that thou didst say to me anon, Charmion—that as I had sown so must I reap! It is not lawful that thou shouldst slay thyself; it is not lawful that I, thine equal in sin, should slay thee, because through thee I sinned. As thou hast sown, Charmion, so must thou also reap. Base woman! whose cruel jealousy hath brought all these woes on me and Egypt, live—live on, and from year to year pluck the bitter fruit of crime! Haunted be thy sleep by visions of thy outraged Gods, whose vengeance awaits thee and me in their dim Amenti! Haunted be thy days by memories of that man whom thy fierce love did bring to ruin, and by the sight of Khem a prey to the insatiate Cleopatra and a slave to Roman Antony."

"Oh, speak not thus, Harmachis! More sharp are thy words than any sword, and more surely, if more slowly, shall they slay! Listen, Harmachis," and she grasped my robe; "when thou wast great and all power lay within thy grasp, thou didst reject me. Wilt reject me now that Cleopatra hath cast thee from her—now that thou art poor and shamed, and with no pillow to thy head? Still am I fair, and still I worship thee! Let me fly with thee, and make atonement by my life-long love. Or, if this be too great a thing to ask, let me be but as thy sister and thy servant—thy very slave, so that I may still look upon thy face and share thy trouble and minister to thee. O Harmachis, let me but come and I will brave all things and endure all things, and naught but Death himself shall spear me from thy side. For I do believe that the love that sank me to so low a depth, dragging thee, can yet lift me to an equal height, and thee with me."

"Wouldst tempt me to fresh sin, woman? And dost thou think, Charmion, that in some hovel where I must hide, I could bear, day by day, to look upon thy fair face, and seeing, remember, that those lips betrayed me? Not thus easily shalt thou atone! This even now I know: Many and heavy shall be thy lonely days of penance! Perchance that hour of vengeance may yet come, and perchance thou shalt live to play thy part in it. In the Court of Cleopatra must thou still abide, and while thou art there, if yet I live, I will from time to time find means to give thee tidings. Perchance a day may dawn when once more I shall need thy service. Now, swear that, in this event, thou wilt not fail me a second time."

"I swear, Harmachis! I swear! May everlasting torments, too hideous to be dreamed—more hideous even, by far, than those that wring me now—be my portion if I fail thee in one jot or tittle; ay, even though I wait a lifetime for thy word!"

"'Tis well; see that thou keep the path—not twice may we betray; I go to work out my fate; abide thou to work out thine. Perchance our divers threads will once more mingle ere the web be spun. Charmion, who unasked didst love me—and who, prompted by that gentle love of thine, didst betray and ruin me—fare thee well!"

Wildly she gazed upon me—she stretched out her arms as though to clasp me; and then, in the agony of her despair, cast herself at length and groveled upon the ground.

I took up the sack of clothing and the staff and gained the door, and, as I passed through, one last glance I cast upon her. There she lay, with arms outstretched—more white than her white robes—her dark hair streaming down her and her fair brows hidden in the dust.

And thus I left her; nor did I again set my eyes upon her till nine long years had come and gone.

CHAPTER XXIV.

ON THE ESCAPE OF HARMACHIS FROM TARSUS; OF HIS BEING CAST FORTH AS AN OFFERING TO THE GODS OF THE SEA; OF HIS SOJOURN IN THE ISLE OF CYPRUS; OF HIS RETURN TO ABOUTHIS; AND OF THE DEATH OF AMENEMHAT.

MADE my way down the stairs in safety, and presently stood in the courtyard of the great house. It was but an hour from dawn, and none were stirring. The last reveler had drunk his fill, the dancing girls had ceased their dancing, and silence lay upon the city. I drew near the gate, and was challenged by an officer on guard wrapped in a heavy cloak. "Who passes?" said the voice of Brennus.

"A merchant, may it please thee, sir, who having brought gifts from Alexandria to a lady of the Queen's household, and, having been entertained of the lady, now departs to his galley," I answered in a feigned voice.

"'Umph!" he growled. "The ladies of the Queen's household keep their guests late. Well; 'tis a time of festival. The password, Sir Shopkeeper! Without the password thou must needs return and crave the lady's further hospitality."

"'Antony,' sir, and a right good word, too. Ah! I've wandered far, and never saw I so goodly a man and so great a General. And, mark you, sir, I've traveled far, and seen many Generals."

"Aye; 'Antony' is the word! And Antony is a good General in his way—when it is a sober way, and when he can not find a skirt to follow. I've served with Antony—and against him, too, and know his points. Well, well; he's got an armful now!"

And all this while that he was holding me in talk, the sentry had been pacing to and fro before the gate. But now he moved a little way, leaving the entrance clear.

"Fare thee well, Harmachis, and begone," whispered Brennus, leaning forward and speaking quickly. "Linger not. But at times bethink thee of Brennus, who risked his neck to save thine. Farewell, lad; I would that we were sailing north together," and he turned his back upon me and begun to hum a tune.

"Farewell, Brennus, thou honest man," I answered, and was gone. And, as long afterward I heard, when on the morrow the hue and cry was raised because the murderers could not find me, though everywhere they sought me to slay me, Brennus did me a service. For he swore that as he kept his watch alone an hour after midnight he saw me come and stand upon the parapet of the roof, that then I stretched out my robes and they became wings whereon I floated up to heaven, leaving him astonished. And all those about the court lent ear unto the history, believing therein, because of the great fame of my magic; and much they wondered what the wonder might portend. The tale also traveled into Egypt, and did much to save my good name among those whom I had betrayed; for the more ignorant among them believed that I acted not of my will, but of the will of the dread Gods, who of their own purpose wafted me to heaven. And thus, even to this day, the saying runs that "When Harmachis comes again Egypt shall be free." Only Cleopatra, though she was much afraid, doubted her of the tale, and sent an armed vessel to search for the Syrian merchant, but not to find him, as shall be told.

When I reached the galley whereof Charmion had spoken, I found her about to sail, and gave the writing to the Captain, who conned it, looking on me curiously, but said naught.

So I went aboard, and immediately we dropped swiftly down the river with the current. And having come to the mouth of the river unchallenged, though we passed many vessels, we put out to sea with a strong favoring wind that ere night freshened to a great gale. Then the sailor men, being much afeared, would fain have put about and run for the mouth of the Cydnus once again, but could not because of the wildness of the sea. All that night it blew furiously, and ere dawn our mast was carried away, and we rolled helplessly in the trough of the great waves. But I sat wrapped in a cloak, little heeding; and because I showed no fear the sailors cried out that I was a wizard, and would have cast me into the sea, but the Captain would not. At dawn the wind slackened, but ere noon it once more blew in terrible fury; and at the fourth hour from noon we came in sight of the rocky coast of that cape in the island of Cyprus which is called Dinaretum, where is a mountain named Olympus, and thitherwards we drifted swiftly. Then when the sailors saw the terrible rocks, and how the great waves that smote thereon spouted up in foam, once more they grew much afraid, and cried out in their fear. For, seeing that I still sat unmoved, they swore that I certainly was a wizard, and came to cast me forth as a sacrifice to the Gods of the sea. And this time the Captain was overruled, and said naught. Therefore, when they came to me I rose and defied them, saying: "Cast me forth, if ye will; but if ye cast me forth ye shall perish."

For in my heart I cared little, having no more any love of life, but rather a desire to die, though greatly I feared to pass into the presence of my holy Mother Isis. But my weariness and sorrow at the bitterness of my lot overcame even this heavy fear, so that when, being mad as brute beasts, they seized me and lifting me, hurled me into the raging waters, I did but utter one prayer to Isis and make me ready for death. But it was fated that I should not die; for, when I rose to the surface of the water I saw floating near to me a spar of wood, whereto I swam and clung. And a great wave came and swept me, riding, as it were, upon the spar, as when a boy I had learned to do in the waters of the Nile, past the bulwarks of the galley where the fierce faced sailors clung to see me drown. And when they saw me come mounted on the wave, cursing them as I came, and saw, too, that the color of my face had changed—for the salt water had washed away the pigment, they shrieked with fear and cast themselves down upon the deck. And within a very little while, as I rode towards the rocky coast, a great wave poured into the vessel, that rode broadside on, and pressed her down into the deep, whence no more she rose.

And so she sank, with all her crew. And in that same storm also sank the galley that Cleopatra had sent to search for the Syrian merchant. Thus were all traces of me lost, and of a surety she believed that I was dead.

But I rode on toward the shore. The wind shrieked and the salt waves lashed my face as, alone with the tempest, I rushed upon my way, while the sea-birds screamed about my head. No fear I felt, but rather a wild uplifting of the heart; and in the stress of my imminent peril the love of life seemed once again to waken. And so I plunged and drifted, now tossed high toward the lowering clouds, now cast into the deep valleys of the sea, till at length the rocky headland loomed before me, and I saw the breakers smite upon the stubborn rocks, and through the screaming of the wind heard the sullen thunder of their fall and the groan of stones sucked seaward from the beach. On! high-throned upon the mane of a mighty billow—fifty cubits beneath me the level of the hissing waters; above me the inky sky! It was done! The spar was torn from me, and, dragged downward by the weight of the bag of gold and the clinging of my garments, struggling furiously, I sank.

Now I was under—the light for a moment streamed green through the waters, and then came darkness, and on the darkness pictures of the past. Picture after picture—all the long scene of life was written here. Then in my ears I heard only the song of the nightingale, the murmur of the summer sea, and the music of Cleopatra's laugh of victory followed me softly and yet more soft as I sank away to sleep.

Once more my life came back, and with it a sense of deadly sickness and of aching pain. I opened my eyes and saw kindly faces bending o'er me, and knew that I was in a room of a builded house.

"How came I hither?" I asked, faintly.

"Of a truth, Poseidon brought thee, Stranger," answered a rough voice in barbarous Greek, "for we found thee cast high upon the beach like a dead dolphin, and brought thee to our house, for we are fisher-folk. And here methinks must thou lie awhile, for thy left leg is broken by the force of the waves."

I strove to move my foot, but could not. It was true, the bone was broken above the knee.

"Who art thou and how art thou named?" asked the rough-bearded sailor.

"I am an Egyptian traveler whose ship hath sunk in the fury of the gale, and Olympus am I named," I answered, for Olympus these people called a mountain that we had sighted, and therefore I took the name at hazard. And as Olympus henceforth was I known.

Here with these rough fisher-folk did I abide for the half of a year, paying them a little out of the sum of gold that had come safely ashore upon me. For long was it before my bones grew together again, and then was I left somewhat of a cripple; for I who had been so tall and straight and strong now limped—one limb being shorter than the other. And after I recovered from my hurt, still I lived there, and toiled with them at the trade of fishing; for whither I should go or what I should do that I knew not, and, for awhile, fain was I to become a peasant fisherman, and so wear my weary life away. And these people entreated me kindly, though, as others, they feared me much, holding me to be a wizard brought hither by the sea. For methinks that my sorrows had stamped so strange an aspect on my face that men gazing thereon grew fearful of what lay beneath its calm.

There then I abode, till at length one night as I lay and strove to sleep, great restlessness came upon me, and a mighty desire once more to see the broad face of Sihor. But whether this desire was of the Gods or born of my own heart, not knowing I can not tell. So strong was it at the last, that before it was dawn I rose from my bed of straw, and clothed myself in my fisher garb, and, because I had no wish to answer questions, thus I took farewell of my humble hosts. First on the well-cleaned table of wood I placed some pieces of gold, and then taking a pot of flour I strewed it in the form of letter-writing—

"This gift from Olympus, the Egyptian, who returns into the sea."

Then I went, and on the third day I came to the great city of Salamis, that is also on the sea. Here I abode in the fisherman's quarter till a vessel was about to sail for Alexandria, and to the captain of this vessel, a man of Paphos, I hired myself as a sailor. We sailed with a favoring wind, and on the fifth day I came to Alexandria, that hateful city, and saw the light glaring on its golden domes.

Here might I not abide. So once again I hired myself out as a sailor, giving my labor in return for passage, and we passed up the Nile. And from the talk of men I learned that Cleopatra had come back to Alexandria, drawing Antony with her, and that, together they lived in royal state in the palace on the Lochias. Indeed, the boatmen already had a song thereon, which they sang as they labored at the oar. Also I heard how the galley that was sent to search for the vessel which carried the Syrian merchant had foundered with all her crew, and the tale that the Queen's astronomer, Harmachis, had flown to Heaven from the roof of the house at Tarsus. And the sailors wondered because I sat and labored, and would not sing their ribald songs of the loves of Cleopatra. For they, too, began to fear me, and mutter concerning me among themselves. Then I knew that I was a man accursed and set apart—a man whom none might love.

On the sixth day we drew nigh to Abouthis, where I left the craft, and right glad were the sailors to see me go. And, with a breaking heart, I walked through the fertile fields, seeing faces that well I knew. But in my rough disguise and limping gait none knew me. At length I came, as the sun sank, near to the great outer pylon of the Temple; and here I crouched down in the ruins of a house, not knowing wherefore I had come or what I was about to do. Like a lost ox I had strayed from far, back to the fields of my birth, and for what? If my father, Amenemhat, still lived, surely he would turn his face from me! I dared not go into the presence of my father. I sat hidden there among the broken rafters and idly watched the pylon gates, to see if perchance a face I knew should issue forth. But none came forth or entered in, though the great gates stood wide; and then I saw that herbs were growing 'twixt the stones, where no herbs had grown for ages. What could this be? Was the Temple deserted? Nay; how could the worship of the eternal Gods have ceased that for thousands of years had, day by day, been offered in the holy place? Was, then, my father dead? It well might be. And yet, why this silence? where were the priests? where the worshipers? No more could I bear the doubt, but as the sun sank red I crept like a hunted jackal through the open gates, and on till I reached the first great Hall of Pillars. Here I paused and gazed around me—not a sight, not a sound in the dim and holy place! On with a beating heart I went to the second great hall of six-and-thirty pillars, where I had been crowned Lord of all the Land; still not a sight or a sound! Thence, half fearful of my own footfall, so terrible did it echo in the silence of the deserted Holies, I passed down the passage of the names of the Pharaohs toward my father's chamber. There still swung the curtain o'er the doorway; but what would there be within?—also emptiness? I lifted it, and noiselessly passed in, and there in his carven chair at the table whereon his long white beard flowed down, sat my father, Amenemhat, clad in his priestly robes. At first I thought that he was dead, so still he sat; but at length he turned his head, and I saw that his orbs were white and sightless. He was blind, and his face was thin as the face of a dead man, and woeful with age and grief.

I stood still and felt the blind eyes wandering over me. I could not speak—I dared not speak to him; I would go and hide myself afresh.

Already had I turned and grasped the curtain, when, in a deep, slow voice, my father spoke:

"Come hither, thou who wast my son and art a traitor. Come hither, thou Harmachis, whereon Khem builded up her hope. Not in vain, then, have I drawn thee from far away! Not in vain have I held my life in me till I heard thy footfall creeping down these empty Holies, like the footfall of a thief!"

"Oh! my father," I gasped, astonished. "Thou art blind; how knowest thou me?"

"How do I know thee! and askest thou that who hast learned of our lore? Enough, I know thee and I brought thee hither. Would, Harmachis, that I knew thee not! would that I had been blasted of the invisible ere I drew thee down from the womb of Nout to be my curse and shame, and the last woe of Khem!"

"Oh, speak thou not thus!" I moaned, "is not my burden already more than I can bear? Am I not myself betrayed and utterly outcast. Be pitiful, my father!"

"Be pitiful! be pitiful to thee who hath shown so great pity! Thy pity 'twas which gave up noble Sepa to die beneath the hands of the tormentors!"

"Oh, not that—not that!" I cried.

"Ay, traitor, that! to die in agony, with his last poor breath proclaiming thee, his murderer, honest and innocent! Be pitiful to thee, who gaveth all the flower of Khem as the price of a wanton's arms!—thinkest thou that, laboring in the darksome desert mines, those noble ones in thought are pitiful to thee, Harmachis? Be pitiful to thee, by whom this holy Temple of Abouthis hath been ravaged, its lands seized, its priests scattered, and I alone, old and withered, left to count out its ruin!—to thee, who hath poured the treasures of Her into thy leman's lap, who hath forsworn thyself, thy country, thy birthright, and thy Gods! Yea, thus am I pitiful:—Accursed be thou, fruit of my loins!—Shame be thy portion, Agony thy end, and Hell receive thee at the last! Where art thou? Yea, I grew blind with weeping when I heard the truth—sure, they strove to hide it from me. Let me find thee that I may spit upon thee, thou Renegade! thou Apostate! thou Outcast!"—and he rose from his seat and staggered like a living wrath toward me, smiting the air with his wand. And as he came with outstretched arms, awful to see, suddenly his end found him, and with a cry he sank down upon the ground, the red blood streaming from his lips. I ran to him and lifted him; and as he died, he babbled:

"He was my son, a bright-eyed, lovely boy, and full of promise as the spring; and now—and now—oh, would that he were dead!"

Then came a pause, and the breath rattled in his throat.

"Harmachis," he gasped, "art there?"

"Yea, father."

"Harmachis, atone!—atone! Vengeance can still be wreaked—forgiveness may still be won. There's gold; I've hidden it—Atoua—she can tell thee—ah, this pain! Farewell!"

And he struggled faintly in my arms, and was dead. Thus, then, did I and my holy father, the Prince Amenemhat, meet together for the last time in the flesh, and for the last time part.

CHAPTER XXV.

THE LAST MISERY OF HARMACHIS; THE CALLING DOWN OF THE HOLY ISIS BY THE WORD OF FEAR; THE PROMISE OF ISIS; THE COMING OF ATOUA, AND THE WORDS OF ATOUA.

CROUCHED upon the floor gazing at the body of my dead father, who had lived to curse me, the utterly accursed, while the darkness crept and gathered round us, till at length the dead and I were alone in the black silence. Oh, how full the misery of that hour!—imagination can not dream it, nor words paint it forth! Once more in my wretchedness I bethought me of death. A knife was at my girdle, wherewith I might cut the thread of sorrow and set my spirit free. Free! ah, free to fly to face the last vengeance of the holy Gods! Alas! and alas! I did not dare to die. Better the earth with all its woes than the quick approach of those unimagined terrors that, hovering in dim Amenti, wait the advent of the fallen.

I groveled on the ground and wept tears of agony for the lost, unchanging past—wept till I could weep no more; but from the silence came no answer, no answer but the echoes of my grief. Not a ray of hope! My soul wandered in a darkness more utter than that which was about me—I was forsaken of the Gods and cast out of men. Terror took hold upon me, crouching in that lonely place hard by the majesty of the awful dead. I rose to fly. How could I fly in this gloom?—how find my path down the passages, and amid the columns? And where should I fly, who had no place of refuge? Once more I crouched down, and the great fear grew on me till the cold sweat ran from my brow and my soul was faint within me. Then, in my last despair, I prayed aloud to Isis, to whom I had not dared to pray for many days.

"O Isis! Holy Mother!" I cried, "put away Thy wrath, and of Thine infinite pity, O Thou all pitiful, hearken to the voice of the anguish of him who was Thy son and servant, but who by sin hath fallen from the vision of Thy love. O throned Glory, who, being in all things, hast of all things understanding and of all griefs knowledge, cast the weight of Thy mercy against the scale of my evil doing, and make the balance equal. Look down upon my woe, and measure it; count up the sum of my repentance, and take Thou note of the flood of sorrow that sweeps my soul away. O Thou Holy, whom it was given to me to look upon face to face, by that dread hour of commune I summon Thee; I summon Thee by the mystic word. Come, then, in mercy to save me; or, in fury, to make an end of that which can no more be borne."

And, rising from my knees, I stretched out my arms and dared to cry aloud the Word of Fear, the which to use unworthily is death.

The Michigan Messenger will be published in two editions. The State edition will be four pages, and the county edition will be an eight-page paper.

G. W. Carter, of Hudson, proprietor of Carter's carriage factory, who recently failed, will commence business again next week, a satisfactory settlement having been made with his creditors.

La Grippe has become a very serious epidemic in Kansas. It is learned that one druggist there sold 200 flasks of whiskey within twenty-four hours to persons who "thought" they had the grippe.

The University Glee Club have been engaged for a concert at Dundee, and the date fixed at Feb. 28th. The Dundee people will never regret securing them for they give a fine entertainment.—Ann Arbor Courier.

Uncle Charley has been at Tecumseh the past week helping the Herald force who were tussling with the grippe, but returned to Addison to help us out while we are enjoying a like experience.—Addison Courier.

J. H. Morrow lectured before the Raisin Valley Seminary students last week on the subject: "The Labor Organizations of the United States." Mr. Morrow is thoroughly posted on this subject and makes an interesting address.

Medical journals state that at no time in the history of our county have the services of the profession been in so great demand as since so-called La Grippe afflicted the people. Many of the local physicians are working night and day with no rest or sleep.

Mr. B. F. Graves delivered a very interesting lecture on "War Reminiscences and the G. A. R" to a large audience of students and residents of the neighborhood, at Raisin Valley Seminary, Thursday evening. The talk was an instructive and interesting one.

The Observer's suggestion that the management of Morenci's fair be placed in the hands of young business men meets with general favor, and we trust that satisfactory arrangements can be made to carry out this plan of action. Let there be a strong pull for the perpetuity of our fair.—Morenci Observer.

T. S. Applegate, of the Adrian Times, is bound to cut down the big Democratic majority in the first ward of his town. He swapped houses with a widow in that ward who has four Democratic sons living with her—a net Republican gain of five, since the widow by the trade gets out of the ward.—Evening News

A sparrow hunter shot off a gun in broad daylight in Adrian, at a time when there were actually two teams on the street, each of which was hitched to a load of wood. The teams ran away, the wood flew in all directions, and the inhabitants flocked to the doors and windows to see what could have caused such an unusual disturbance.—Hudson Post.

Wednesday afternoon A. C. Hodges, of this village, took a dose of laudanum with suicidal intent. Dr. Coffin was summoned, who with his little pump extracted the laudanum, and the patient was relieved. We understand that Mr. Hodges declared he was tired of living, and has since expressed an intention of making a second attempt.—Hudson Post.

After four years of public service, Postmaster H. S. Wyman will soon retire from official life and take up again the regular practice of medicine. An unquestioned Democrat, he has proved himself worthy of the honor which his party bestowed upon him; for it is the universal opinion that as a servant of the people he has been closely attentive, accurate and efficient—a good record, indeed.—Morenci Observer.

It will be a source of universal satisfaction that Hudson is not to lose the skill and industry of such capable carriage manufacturers as G. W. Carter and his son Arthur. We learn that they expect to start in again on a small scale and develop the business as their patronage warrants. If such is the case the Gazette bespeaks in advance a proper appreciation of the enterprise. Better than bonuses and braggadocio, is the decent support and encouragement of citizens who, by long residence and faithful dealing, are entitled to consideration at the hands of their fellow-citizens.—Hudson Gazette.

The blood is the source of health. Keep it pure by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which is peculiar in its curative power.

SPRINGVILLE SIFTINGS.

A. J. Monaghan has returned from a short stay in Iowa.

Great numbers of dead fish line the shores of Sand Lake.

Miss Clara Daniels has reproduced, in a very successful manner, an oil study after Julian Rix.

The cutting of trees along our highways is greatly regretted by lovers of a beautiful landscape.

If persistent application avails, Springville may some day boast the champion player at checkers.

A granite monument, in memory of the late Wm. Queal, has recently been erected in the Junction cemetery.

The lately organized literary society gives promise of success. An attractive program has been arranged for Saturday evening.

MACON MUSIC.

Gip Arner, of Ridgeway, called on—well, he called last Sunday.

La Grippe is the order of the day. Almost every family has a tussle with it.

There was a good attendance at the quarterly meeting last Sunday, many strangers being present. A series of meetings will follow.

Another pioneer gone. Michael Hendershot, who has been in poor health all winter, passed away last Sunday morning

Miss Addie Avery tied her horse in the church sheds last Thursday. On going for her horse she untied it, when it jerked away from her and made a bee-line for Wm. Langan's fence, jumping five fences, taking the cart with him, and was trying to jump the sixth when caught. The horse was not hurt, but the cart was a total wreck.

MACON CENTER CHIPS.

Mud! Mud! Mud! and there is no end to it.

Mrs. Mayo, who was expected to install the officers of the Grange last Monday eve. was detained on account of sickness. M. J. Martin acted as installing officer and Mrs. W. R. Wilson as assistant and the work was properly done.

At the regular meeting of Macon Grange, Friday evening, Jan. 31st, four candidates were initiated in the first and second degrees. Friday evening, Feb. 6th, there will be work in the third and fourth degrees. Let there be a good attendance of the members. On Saturday eve, the 8th, the first Contest will be presented to the members of the Grange. After two Contests have been held there will be a public entertainment given. Then look out for a big time. Further notice will be given.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the new Telegraph Co. at the Grange Hall, Monday evening, Feb. 3rd, the following officers were elected:

Pres.—J. W. Osborn.
Sec.—F. J. Gilmore.
Treas.—J. W. Baker.
Directors—Frank Aten, A. Harrington, Geo. J. Kempf, F. J. Gilmore, J. W. Baker.

It was resolved "that the Association should be known by the name of Macon Center Telegraph Association. It was reported that there were eight miles of telegraph poles already set. The wire will be put on next week.

DEVILS LAKE DOINGS.

Dust in chunks one day and in liquid form the next.

Mr. Frank Finney has "broke" his mustang that he bought a short time ago.

We are glad to learn that Mrs. Shales is recovering from a very severe attack of la grippe.

Going—going—almost gone, and we sincerely hope he'll never visit us again. La grippe, we mean.

The apron and necktie social that was to be held at Mr. F. Wood's Saturday evening, Feb. 1st, has been postponed until Feb. 8th, on account of sickness.

One of our popular merchants was taken very sick suddenly, a few days ago. A doctor was called in great haste, but too late to do any good; he had got well. Cause of sickness, onions.

Who says Devil's Lake isn't booming right along in winter as well as summer? We have got two live grocery stores here, a postoffice, a feed mill and picket machine, an ax handle factory, a big ice house, a blacksmith shop, a large hotel where drummers find refuge in winter as well as in summer, two doctors, two justices, and last, but not least, a big grain elevator and building where all kinds of farm products are bought and sold and where farming tools of all descriptions are sold, from a hoe to a harvester.

"Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam be it ever so humble" there's no specific for pain like Salvation Oil. Price 25 cents a bottle.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

James Allen's baby is very sick and little hope is entertained of her recovery.

Frank Lambkin has been obliged, through ill health, to give up his school. Mr. Sloan will finish the term beginning on Monday, Feb. 3d.

Died in his home in Franklin, on Feb. 2d. Daniel P. Allen in the ninety second year of his age. The deceased had been suffering for a short time with influenza; he grew weaker day by day until he passed gently and peacefully away. The funeral services were conducted at the house on Monday, by the Rev. Mr. Stocker, of Clinton, and the remains deposited in the beautiful cemetery in Tecumseh.

THE FARMERS' UNION.

The Union met at Berl VanNess', Friday evening, Jan. 31, with a crowded house of interested farmers and their families. In the discussion of the question both sides produced excellent arguments; the judges however, decided in favor of the affirmative.

The next meeting will be held at Alonzo Biddle's Friday evening, Feb. 14. Program:

Music—Union.
Reading—Mrs. J. Van Vleet.
Inst. Music—Hettie Cadmus.
Dec.—John Cadmus.
Rec.—Fern DePuy.
Charade—Mrs. Blood and others.
Question—Has legislation for the past 25 years been for the interest of the farmers?

Led by B. F. DePuy, followed by Alex. Richards, W. F. Raymond and others.

By an arrangement just completed with "The Voice" newspaper, we can furnish the HERALD and the Voice one year for $2.00, and the magnificent premium picture "The Angelus" will come with the Voice without extra charge. All who wish to take a prohibition paper should accept this offer at once. This picture is in 14 oil colors, and is one of the finest reproductions ever issued.

"Look here," said the managing editor to the serf whose business it is to do contortion tricks with the English language, "you haven't made any jokes on the grip that amount to anything." "No." "What's the reason?" "Well, I thought I might just as well wait till I got over it myself before I tried to be funny about it."

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O, contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

☞ Sold by Druggists, Price 75. per bottle.

"Ten Acres Enough," may be all right, but the Ohio Republicans have discovered that Foraker(s) are too many.

If, "a numerous household is the safety of the Republic,' it might as well be proclaimed at once, that the remedy upon which such household should be reared is Dr. Bull's Baby Syrup.

A good cathartic is worth its weight in gold, yet Laxador, the infallible regulator of the human system, is sold for only 25 cents a package.

"MARK TWAIN'S new book, "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," is creating a stir in literary circles and adds greatly to the reputation of the great humorist. It is a keen and powerful satire on English nobility and royalty and will be greatly relished by every American. It is replete with rich humor and ludicrous situations enforced by 300 characteristic drawings by Dan Beard. The book is sold only by subscription, and agents are wanted by the publishers, R. S. PEALE & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Restored Her Health.

For twenty-five years I suffered from boils, erysipelas and other blood affections, taking during that time great quantities of different medicines without giving me any perceptible relief. Friends induced me to try S. S. S. It improved me from the start, and after taking several bottles, restored my health as far as I could hope for at my age, which is now seventy-five years. Mrs. S. M. Lucas, Bowling-Green, Ky.

Cured After Twenty-five Years of Suffering.

"I have used Swift's Specific (S.S.S.) for blood diseases and in every instance with the best results. About twenty-five years ago I had my leg hurt in an accident, and the wound never entirely healed. I tried various remedies without success. I was finally induced to try S.S.S. That medicine healed it up—healed it after twenty five years of suffering had been endured and much money had been thrown away in the purchase of worthless medicines."

Report of the Auditing Committee of the Irish National Land League

DETROIT, February 1.—O'Reilly, of the Irish National League auditing committee, completed checking the treasurer's accounts at ten o'clock last night. The report shows a balance on hand at the Chicago convention in August, 1886, of $21,885.78. Receipts from date to January 1, 1890, were $257,922.79, making a total of $279,808.57. Expenditures were: Remittances to Ireland $237,473.08, current expenses $22,225.27; balance on hand $30,335.25.

The expense account includes $3,000 salary paid to president Fitzgerald and at once returned to the treasurer as a donation, Mayor Cushing, of Omaha, chairman of the committee and one of the most expert accountants in the country, said: "It is the most perfect and best kept set of books I have ever seen. Not a clerical error or mistake of any kind occurs in the three years' work."

Bad for Indianapolis.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—An afternoon paper says that at least five of the Indianapolis base ball nine will play with the New York league team this season. Jack Glasscock and Jerry Denny, it is stated, are among the quintet. With the five western men as a nucleus the New York League management calculates on getting together a presentable nine to take the place of the giants of last season. The new men will join the New Yorks on their southern trip, according to the story. President Brush, of the Indianapolis nine, denies the truth of the statement.

THE HERALD FOR 1890.

On the 25th day of May last the HERALD entered upon the fortieth year of its publication. The 15th day of November last completed fifteen years under its present management, and we can truthfully say that the paper never had more friends or truer ones in Northern Lenawee than it has today. But, like Cæsar, we are ambitious. We aim for a larger list and a wider field to swing in, and our terms for 1890 have been adjusted with that purpose in view.

OFFER NO. ONE.

We have made arrangements with that wide awake illustrated farm magazine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct to the address of any of our subscribers who will pay up all arrearages and a year in advance. The subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. It costs you nothing. The two papers at our full rate of $1.50 per year.

OFFER NO. TWO.

The modern magazine may be taken as embodying the best literature of the world, as the magazine editor pays the highest prices to novelists, scientists, statesmen, soldiers and even kings and princes for the best they can furnish in the literary line. You can obtain the Cosmopolitan, which gives you in a year nearly fourteen hundred pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including six hundred pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point of interest and execution at its regular price, only $2 50, and the HERALD free.

OFFER NO. THREE.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Little Alvira Allen is still a very sick child, but it is thought she may recover.

Ernest Wisner expects to return to Nebraska about the first of March, and his sisters, Grace and Minnie, intend to accompany him.

A little daughter has come to stay with Bert and Lottie Billington "way down in Tennessee." Mother and child doing well when last heard from.

Mr. Heman Mills, the father referred to in the above, was well known to many in Franklin. About the year 1850 he taught school in the old log school house in Dis. No. 3. where now stands the stone school house. He was richly endowed intellectually and possessed great energy and perseverance, and it is not strange that he gained a high measure of success in life.

The Ann Arbor Argus of Jan. 31st., contains the following; Warren Mills, of San Francisco, a student in the law department, well known in this city, was called home by a telegram announcing the sudden death of his father from pneumonia, following an attack of la grippe. The father has been especially anxious about the son, and last week twice telegraphed him to be careful about the grippe. Warren Mills is now the only remaining member of the family.

MACON CENTER CHIPS.

Quite a large number in our community at this date seem be holding close communion with La grippe.

R. R. Remington, who has been on the sick list for some time, we are glad to state is improving finely and will soon be out again.

Those boys that were hunting rabbits west of the Center the other day, when they come again had better leave that small box containing a small animal, at home, or——, well, that's all, do you hear?

At the regular meeting of Macon Grange, last Friday night, in connection with other work, five young men were instructed in the 4th and 5th degrees, after which the usual festival was enjoyed.

On Saturday evening following, the first of a series of contests was held under the direction of Miss Louise Rogers. Although several upon her side for various reasons were absent, the program was well rendered and of fair length. The other side under the direction of Miss Susie M. Osgood will give their first entertainment on Saturday, Feb. 15th, at 2 o'clock P. M. All members are earnestly invited to be present and enjoy a good time.

TIPTON TOPICS.

Mrs. J. Q. Osborn is reported as being very sick.

Although there is hardly enough snow for sleighing, it makes one think of winter.

A new telegraph instrument has been placed in the depot, and Miss Burns now has something more to look after.

Patron meeting Tuesday evening. The question for debate is, Resolved, That trusts have done more toward injuring the country than the saloons.

Mr. Miller, a person interested in Sunday school work, will deliver a lecture on that subject, at the Congregational church, next Friday eve.

The play that has been in progress for some time to obtain money for sidewalks, will take place at the M. E. Church, Thursday and Friday evenings, Feb. 27 and 28.

The funeral services of Mrs. Andrew Hunter, formerly a resident of this place, but for some time past a resident of Adrian, were held at the Congregational church, on Tuesday, at 1 o'clock.

The twentieth anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Luce, Feb. 4th, 1890 was an event long to be remembered by their friends and relatives. About one hundred guests assembled in their roomy and spacious parlors, and the evening was passed in a social way. Music was provided for the pleasure of the company, and the piece representing Mr. Luce as a millionaire, caused much sport. Many beautiful and appropriate presents were received and all were useful as well as ornamental. Rev. Palmer appropriately presented the presents after which came the supper, which did the hostess much credit, and to which all present paid their best repects. Guests were present from Jackson, Adrian and Tecumseh. At a late hour the party broke up and each went to their respective home, wishing the host and hostess many more happy years of married life.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Rev. Belden left Thursday for Iowa on a two weeks' visit.

Mrs. Stephen Palmer has been quite sick, but is better at present writing.

John Rainey shipped a car of oats on Monday, and on Tuesday Fred Kopke sent off a car of hogs and sheep.

Mr. Wolverton of Blissfield, sent away the second car of potatoes on Tuesday.

Quite a number from this place have been attending the meetings at Raisin Center for the past two weeks.

Hoag & Luther shipped a car load of hogs from here Saturday, and J. M. Green a car load of iron from the old mill house property.

The Ladies' social held on Thursday at the Presbyterian parsonage, was well attended and everybody reports a very pleasant time.

The West Family will give another entertainment at the hall on Friday evening of this week. Come everybody and enjoy a pleasant evening.

There was a large crowd out on Thursday evening to hear the lecture on Dakota and other Western States. It was very interesting and any one who can work and not be discontented can soon make a home for himself in the west.

The Young People's valentine social held at the house of Mr. Geo. Kishpaugh, was a success in numbers as well as financially. The temporary Post office and two post masters, were kept busy during the evening distributing mysterious and extraordinary missives with St. Valentine's sanction.

RAISIN RACKET.

Chas. Stockwell spent Sunday with Chauncey Graves.

A good many of the people smiled when the snow began to fall, and I guess they would have almost giggled if we could get a little more.

Prof. Kellum, who was obliged to resign his position as teacher last term on account of the continued illness of his father, has been back on a visit.

Will Osgood of Britton, and G. V. Osgood of Lake Ridge, spent Monday afternoon hunting rabbits in this vicinity. They secured 13 of the bunnies.

Hugh Barney of Elkhart, Ind., a former student at the Seminary, but at present attending a military school in North Carolina, spent Sunday at the Seminary.

The meetings at Raisin Center closed Monday evening, Lida Romach having been engaged to carry on a series of meetings at Reading, Hillsdale county.

Lt. Salsbury of Adrian, will give a lecture this week Friday night, on the Battle of Gettysburg, and it will no doubt be very interesting as he was wounded in that engagement.

The lecture last Friday evening, given by Prof. Hayden of Hudson high school, on the Mound Builders, was one of the most interesting so far this season. He had quite a number of relics with him that were taken from the mounds.

DEVILS LAKE DOINGS.

Mrs. Shales is worse and there is but small chance of her recovery.

Fruit tree agents around here are equally as good at playing "snap and catch 'em," as selling trees.

La grippe is visiting some here the second time, and the attack is much more severe than the first.

Another Republican voter in Woodstock, or he will vote that ticket twenty-one years hence, if Mr. and Mrs Lewis Pearson bring him up right.

The apron and necktie social at F. Wood's, Saturday night, was a decided success as far as having a good time was concerned. It was proven there beyond a doubt, that not a man around the lake, young or old, can make a success as a bachelor, as not one of them could thread a needle to hem their aprons with.

MACON MUSIC.

Postmaster Travis was not able to be in the office last week—La grippe.

The revival meetings at the Baptist church are to be continued this week.

Geo. Frost is the last victim of la grippe.

Miss Sadie Jackson, who has been visiting her sister at Ithica, returned home last Saturday.

Miss Leila Sutton visited relatives in Tecumseh from Saturday to Monday.

Last Friday seemed like an olden time winter day, as the snow came from the north east.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gove of North Adrian, spent Sunday and Monday at the home of his brother, Chas. Gove.

James Harrison, who caught cold and was very sick last week with pneumonia, is slowly recovering under Dr. D. W. Loree's faithful attendance.

Chas. and A. B. Clark of Elkhart, Ind. and Prof. and Mrs. Romine Miller of Dowagiac, Mich., were called home the first of the week on account of their fathers death.

S. P. Smith and family enjoyed a pleasant afternoon at the home of Mrs. Smith's brother Chas. Kniffin at Britton, Saturday. The occasion was a surprise on Mr. Kniffin in their new house.

G. W. Clark, who has been a great sufferer for the past three years from repeated shocks of apoplexy, quietly passed away Tuesday morning about 7 o'clock. Time will not permit us to give a biography of his life for this week, but will endeavor to furnish one for next week.

LENAWEE COUNTY GRANGE.

The Lenawee Co. Grange, No. 15, was held with Fairfield Grange at Jasper, on Thursday, Feb. 6th, 1890, at 10 o'clock A. M. The day being fine at the appointed time the members began to assemble and before 11 o'clock an unusually large number were present. The meeting was called to order promptly at the last named hour and regular work in the 5th degree was rapidly accomplished. At 11:50 the meeting adjourned for dinner, in which about two hundred participated.

At 1:50 P. M. the meeting (together with Gov. Luce, who was present,) marched in a body to the new public hall. It had been announced that the afternoon session would be public, consequently a large number of citizens from the surrounding county availed themselves of the chance to see and hear the Gov. who had been advertised to give the public address. On arriving at the hall this large gathering was found in waiting. As soon as the Grange could march in and be seated, the meeting was called to order, and after an opening song finely rendered by Ogden Grange, the Gov. was introduced and spoke for over one hour and a half. At the close of his address, he installed the following list of officers for the year, Geo. B. Horton acting as his assistant:

Master—E. R. Poucher.
Overseer—M. J. Martin.
Lecturer—Mary C. Allis.

The man arrested on suspicion of burglarizing J. White's tailor shop will have a hearing before Squire Brown Monday.

A tramp entered the residence of Joseph Dillingham last Saturday night while the family was away and stole some jewelry and a small amount of money. He was captured the next day by Dillingham who administered a good threshing and let him go.

A business men's carnival is being arranged by the Congregational society for the near future. Each business firm will be represented by a young lady dressed in accordance with the style of the house she represents. These have been successful in neighboring towns and Clinton is never behind; so be prepared.

The party who burglarized J. J. White's tailor shop some time ago and for whom a diligent search was made is at last known; at least it looks so. A man named Gregory, living in Jackson and known to be unable to buy such clothes as he displayed, was arrested on suspicion by a Jackson officer. It in some way became known to White who, upon going to Jackson, immediately identified the goods and sent for H. W. Stevens of Tecumseh. Officer Stevens arrived Tuesday morning with Gregory in charge. He was wearing the overcoat which was said to have been taken. He plead not guilty and was taken to Adrian to await trial.

The most disgraceful scene enacted here for a long time occured last Monday evening. Geo Morton, at other times a peaceable citizen, when under the influence of whiskey, at once becomes a destroyer of his own furniture, a wife beater and indeed a very disturbing element in the village. On this occasion he began early in the evening to advertise his performance and attract a crowd. At the very opening his wife hastened to the justices office and made complaint. Marshall Bennett was summoned and took Morton from his home to the lock-up, but he strongly objected to being furnished with such luxurious lodging and for an hour or more indulged in the most ungentlemanly conduct and talk, walking up and down Chicago street defying law and officers. His triumphal march was ended when two disgusted spectators obtained permission from our venerable city marshall and landed him safely for the night. Tuesday noon he was taken before Justice Brown who gave him a talk, and after promising to keep the peace in the future, he was released.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, FEB. 13

The house should adopt a code of rules to govern itself before it attempts to pass laws to govern the people.

Of course we ought to have a big navy to protect our merchant marine But where is our merchant marine?

If speaker Reed and his party persist in sowing the wind in Congress, they must expect to reap the whirlwind when next fall's elections come.

The Republicans have a fair majority of their own in Congress. Then why should'nt they come to the scratch and furnish their own quorum?

The political bosses in New York are trying to run the World's Fair enterprise and it looks now as though New York would lose the fair in consequence.

"Protection makes everything cheaper" say the high tariff organs. Yes, it has been cheapening American farms with a vengeance for the past ten years.

Speaker Reed may be master of the House but he is not master of the country. The Democracy will appeal to the country and the appeal will be sustained.

This was to be a "business session" at Washington. But two months have elapsed and the House has not even adopted a code of rules for its own government.

The tariff is a tax, and yet it is not a tax. A tax aims to be uniform, bearing upon all for the benefit of all. A tariff plunders the many for the sole benefit of a few.

Shall the house run itself according to law and precedent and parliamentary rules, or shall the speaker run it according to his own whims and wishes? That is the issue.

The example set by New Jersey is contagious. Massachusetts has passed a law raising the salary of her governor to $10,000 a year. It ought to be worth that much to govern the hub of the universe.

The three special elections lately held in Ohio to fill vacancies in the legislature all resulted in Democratic victories by increased majorities. The political revolution in Ohio has evidently come to stay.

The news comes that 150 saloons have been closed up in Bangor. This report is mystifying. One hundred and fifty saloons in Bangor! There must be some mistake about this. We supposed that prohibition prohibited down in Maine.

What doth it profit a farmer to read in his newspaper of the beauties of protection and be told therein that a mortgage is a benefit, an evidence of prosperity and then go home to his fire made of corn which is cheaper for him than protected coal? Isn't one practical demonstration worth volumes of theory? If he has to move out of his cabin because of his creditors' foreclosure and see his fields turned into cattle ranches, he will still be met on the way and congratulated on his prosperity.

There is a good deal more truth than humor in Representative Houck's little joke. He said to Mr. Culbertson, of Texas, the other day: "We Republicans have the ideal speaker. He's the best speaker who ever presided over this House. He won't recognize a Democrat to make a motion to adjourn: he won't recognize the demand of a Democrat for tellers, and"—leaning over confidentially—"he is considering a proposition to require the indorsement of two Republicans for a Democrat to introduce a bill. I'll indorse you, Culbertson, if you can get anyone for a second."

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7th.—Advices from Paris say that the new protective treaty which the Committee on French Customs propose to substitute for the various existing treaties, is aimed especially at the United States. It fixes a tariff absolutely prohibitory on all commodities in which French manufacturers and tradesmen need protection, but discriminates in favor of those countries which give France commercial advantages.

This little telegram was tucked away in a corner among the daily news in the papers of last Saturday. What a text for an eloquent sermon upon the evil effects of the war tariff. So long as we erect a Chinese wall against other nations, we must expect them to retaliate.

SPEAKER REED'S RULINGS.

As the smoke lifts from the parliamentary battle lately waged in Congress and the contending parties settle down to a calm investigation of the issues raised by the unprecedented rulings of Speaker Reed, men can take their bearings and arrive at a just conclusion upon the merits of the controversy.

It is a fact that cannot be denied that the Speaker's action was without precedent. The history of Congress can be searched in vain to find a similar ruling by a Speaker of the House. The chair, that has been honored by a Clay, a Colfax, a Blaine and a Carlisle, was never used before as a machine to throttle the rights of the minority, or to convert a minority into a majority by the mere dictum of the Speaker. As Mr. Carlisle said during the debate, and his words passed unchallenged: "No Speaker ever sat in that chair and undertook to hold that less than a quorum can pass any bill or vote in this House, until this morning. All have held, from the beginning of Congress down to this day, that a majority must not only be present to constitute a quorum, but that a quorum must participate in the legislation."

Expressed as tersely as possibe, the Speaker's position is this: He claims the right, when the record shows less than a quorum present, to enter on the journal the names of several minority representatives as present and thus manufacture a quorum by his own dictum. The present House contains 330 members when all are present. The death of Judge Kelly reduces the actual number to 329, of which the Democrats have 161 and the Republicans 168, the latter having a clear majority of seven. It requires 166 to make a quorum or a majority of the entire House. Now, note the effect of the Speaker's ruling. If the Republicans have only 163 members present, they lack a quorum. The Speaker adds three names to the record from the Democratic side to manufacture a quorum and the vote on bill then pending is passed by a vote of 163 to nothing. By this process an actual minority could pass a bill. Such a doctrine is monstrous and revolutionary. See to what extremes it might lead. If the Speaker can record the presence of one member against his will, he could record fifty. The principle is the same. Suppose there are 100 Republicans in their seats and 90 Democrats. An important measure is pending in which the Speaker has a personal interest. The Democrats owe it to themselves and their constituents to defeat the measure if possible. They refrain from voting and break a quorum. The Speaker then quietly orders the clerk to place the names of 66 Democrats on the journal as present, and the Republicans then pass the bill by an affirmative vote of 100. By this process less than one-third of the membership of the House could pass an important bill. By the same process a resolution to over-ride an executive veto, which requires a two-thirds vote, could be passed by an actual minority.

The more the question is turned over and examined the more obnoxious and arbitrary the Speaker's position appears. The Republicans have a majority of their own. Why shouldn't they use it? Why should the minority be forced, against their will, to aid in enacting legislation to which they are opposed? The majority should rule, they tell us. Most certainly it should. But it should rule, not as the despot rules, but according to the forms of law and precedent. Again, under this system the majority does not rule. By counting opposition members to make a quorum, a bill can be passed by an actual numerical minority. And if a minority of three less than a quorum can pass a bill, a minority of fifty less than a quorum possesses the same legal right. Again, the Speaker, himself the chairman of the committee on rules, had persistently neglected for two months to report a code of rules for the government of the House. He was running the House, like a country lyceum, without any rules whatever. Not even his own party majority had conferred any such arbitrary authority upon him. He set himself up as the autocrat of the House, trampling upon the rights of the minority and binding the majority in a straight jacket.

This question is not a new one. It has been raised several times by previous Congresses, when adopting rules for the government of the House, and although a few hot heads have advocated the adoption of such a rule, no party has hitherto conferred such a power upon its Speaker. Eminent parliamentarians like Garfield, Blaine, Randall and Carlisle, in both parties, have vigorously opposed it. Even Speaker Reed himself is on record against it in the session of 1880, when he was a member of the minority. It is a power that should not be entrusted to the most upright judge. In the hands of a headstrong or corrupt Speaker it would open the door to such a carnival of corruption and debauchery as this country has never known. As one Congressman expressed it: "It would gag the watchman, chain the watch dog, and open the doors of the treasury to the looters."

DEMAND FOR FREE WOOL.

MR. BENNETT'S PETITION A HARD NUT FOR PROTECTIONISTS.

There Were 530 Signers and They Were Among the Most Prominent Manufacturers in the Country—Some Extracts from His Speech—What the Duties Do.

The hardest nut the high tariff party have yet had to crack was the recent appearance of Mr. Frank P. Bennett, of The American Wool Reporter, before the committee of ways and means with a petition for free wool, signed by 530 prominent woolen goods manufacturers. Mr. Bennett in presenting this petition said, in part:

"Among the 530 signers of the petition for free wool are Mr. Moses T. Stevens, of North Andover, Mass., the largest individual woolen manufacturer in the United States; Mr. G. Z. Silsbee, treasurer of the famous Middlesex Woolen company, of Lowell, Mass.; Mr. Arthur T. Lyman, treasurer of the great carpet mills at Lowell; Mr. Galen C. Moses, treasurer of the Worumbo Manufacturing company, the largest woolen manufacturing establishment in the state of Maine; Mr. Jesse Metcalf, one of the largest woolen manufacturers and most influential citizens of Rhode Island; Mr. James Kitchenman, a large manufacturer of the city of Philadelphia.

"The astonishing feature of this unexpected list of names in favor of free wool lies not only in the character, but in the number of the signers. It has been hitherto asserted, on very high authority that the only manufacturers in favor of free wool are a few officers of large corporations, the number of whom does not exceed ten. But this list of signatures shows that the rank and file of smaller manufacturers are as willing to express their opinions in regard to wool duties as are the great leaders of the trade. No effort has been made to ascertain the politics of the signers of these petitions. Among the manufacturers who petition for free wool in New Hampshire Mr. Charles J. Amidon, of Hinsdale, is a very influential Republican; Mr. A. W. Sulloway, of Franklin Falls, is an influential Democrat of national reputation."

"In the state of Rhode Island," continued Mr. Bennett, "the total number of looms in woolen and worsted mills is 7,461, and of these, manufacturers representing 4,085 looms, or considerably more than half the whole number in the state, have signed this petition for free wool. But besides these mills which represent the 4,085 looms, several spinning mills containing no looms, but which have in the aggregate 41 sets of cards, 15 combs and 54 knitting machines, have signed the petition for free wool. Among other signers whom I have not mentioned in Rhode Island are the celebrated Weybosset mills, of Olneyville, the [illegible] well known Lippett Woolen company, of Woonsocket, the Peacedale Manufacturing company, of which Mr. Rowland Hazard is treasurer, and the great Atlantic mills, of Olneyville, by Owen Bros., agents.

"These Atlantic mills make ladies' dress goods, such as are also made by the Arlington mills, of which Mr. Whitman is treasurer, and the Owen Bros. actually own a considerable share of the mills which they manage. There can be no doubt that this growing demand for a revision of the tariff in the direction of reduced duties has had much to do with taking Rhode Island out of the list of sure Republican states and putting it into the ranks of the doubtful, and I will confess right here that, as a Republican, one of my reasons for engaging in the distribution of these petitions has been the hope that this growing demand for a revision of the tariff in the direction of reduced rather than of increased duties might be complied with and satisfied under Republican auspices.

"The signatures to these two petitions, the one in favor of free wool and the other in favor of ad valorem duties, are from nearly every state and territory in which woolen manufactories are situated. A few wool growers have signed the petitions, but they were men who found them in neighboring woolen mills, and signed them without solicitation. I have no hesitation in saying that a petition for reduced duties upon wool for the benefit of our manufacturers who furnish our domestic wool growers the sole market for their fleeces, would secure a great many signers among that portion of our agricultural population concerned in the raising of wool. The signers of these petitions do not believe that free wool means free goods. One of the most prosperous periods the woolen manufacturing industry has ever enjoyed in the United States was from 1862 to 1867, and this prosperity was not due alone to the war, but to the fact that the duty on raw wool was low, and the duty on manufactured goods was high enough to afford our mills abundant protection and to bestow upon our wool growers the blessings of an abundant home market.

"During that period American sheep husbandry expanded enormously, and in 1867 the number of sheep in Ohio reached a total of 7,555,507 head. Then came the increased tax upon wool in 1867, which continued unchanged until 1883, and, with the exception of the single year, 1868, the number of sheep in Ohio grew steadily smaller and beautifully less after that date. In 1875 the number of sheep in Ohio had fallen to 4,100,288 head under the highest duties upon wool ever known, and now, when a little coterie of Ohio politicians stands in the light of wool growers and woolen manufacturers alike, and to such proofs of the destructive influence of the high tax upon wool as we have just presented replies merely with threats, we are certainly very sorry that they cannot take more reasonable ground. And, as one of the largest manufacturers and strongest protectionists in Philadelphia recently remarked, 'I would rather have four years of free wool, even with the risk of free goods at the end of that time than to endure another four years such as we have just been through.'"

THAT COPPER MINE SWINDLE.

The Electrical Companies Want Free Copper.

The electric companies in the United States want copper ingots, bars, plates, rods and wires placed on the free list. At the last public hearing of the committee of ways and means on tariff questions Mr. George M. Phelps, of New York, representing the New York National Electrical Lighting association, urged that the copper mines of the United States are the largest and finest in the world; that copper can be produced more cheaply here than anywhere else, and that prices are artificially maintained within the boundaries of the country by a combination of the mine owners, which nobody can deny.

The duty on copper in any of the forms above mentioned is four cents a pound. It is a curious thing that while we export copper in large quantities to Europe, the price is always higher in this country. The Calumet and Hecla mine in Michigan has paid its shareholders over $30,000,000 dividends on a capital of $2,500,000 since 1879. Therefore, these cannot require any protection.

The existence of a trust is almost self evident. Copper can be raised and refined at the Lake Superior mines at a cost not exceeding four cents.

It can be landed in New York city free at 6 cents. Yet the quotation for it in the New York Metal Exchange on Jan. 16, 1890, was 14¼ cents a pound. On the same day the price of copper in London was £50 per ton, or approximately 11 cents a pound. So that, after paying costs of freight and insurance to London, the mine owners of this country were still able to sell it there 3¼ cents a pound cheaper than in New York. It only needs to be pointed out that this 4 cents differential or thereabouts has prevailed against this country since 1879, and that 4 cents a pound is the amount of the duty to see that the American consumer has to pay the mine owner this amount more than the foreigner. No wonder the foreigner can undersell us in outside markets!

Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon.

The labors of Mr. Spurgeon have doubtless been greater in the peculiar field he has chosen than those of any other modern evangelical preacher. For a number of years he has conducted a Pastors' college, where young men are equipped for the ministry. Several hundred of his pupils have been sent out to other fields, some in city pulpits, some to city missions and others to the foreign field. The average attendance at his college is about 300. Another institution founded and supported by his energies is the system of orphanages, where several hundred boys and girls are grouped in little families and trained to some useful business. The orphans are taken in without regard to creed. As a writer the great English Baptist has become known to the many millions who could not hear him preach. His "Treasury of David" and "John Plough's Talk" are among the best known of his productions. The former work is a commentary on the Psalms and has a permanent value. His lectures and sermons have been published and widely circulated, and in 1865 he began the editorship of a monthly religious magazine called The Sword and Trowel, still (in 1890) conducted by him.

The great enemy of Mr. Spurgeon's peace for some years has been the gout. The ailment, however, is hereditary, and for a long time he has suffered the tortures of neuralgic and sciatic pains, and has been compelled to adopt a rigid diet.

In politics Spurgeon has been a pronounced Radical, and has taken deep interest in the affairs of his time. Practically, and outside of his church labors, he has been a substantial friend of the poor, aiding them himself and inspiring deeds of philanthropy in those about him.

Outside of his own denomination Mr. Spurgeon's strongest impression upon his time has been that created by his sermon of about twenty years ago on "Infant Baptism." His language then had the vigor of manhood in the prime—he was born in 1834—and his production shook the whole theological structure of England. Its echoes may still be heard whenever the vexed question is discussed.

An American authority, The Baptist Quarterly, recently summed up the great English preacher in the following language: "No man in this generation has done more to uphold the truths of God's Word in Great Britain; no man has preached the Gospel with greater fearlessness, sincerity and power; no man has had a heartier God-speed for every good work; no man has shown more abundant love and charity for his fellows; no man more deserves the confidence and sympathy of Baptists the world over."—G. L. K.

The Tariff on Silk.

The Dry Goods Chronicle has interviewed a number of silk merchants and manufacturers on the subject of the proposed duty on raw silk, intended to enable the American silk worm to compete with the pauper silk worms of Italy and China. Mr. Stocker, of the firm of Stocker & Gwalter, says that the whole production of raw silk in this country does not exceed 900 pounds. One hundred and fifty pounds is produced by the state board for silk culture in California. "To kill our present flourishing silk industry for the sake of being able to raise a quantity of raw material ten years hence," says Mr. Stocker, "is a policy that will never succeed in this country."

This means, we suppose, that the bill will not pass, because it has been found in other parallel cases that killing one industry by means of a duty on raw materials in order to promote another industry has succeeded very well. Efforts to accomplish similar results are making now in Washington city, and the question whether they will succeed or not depends on the number of votes obtainable, and this depends largely on the lobby influences at work. We are inclined to agree with Mr. Stocker that the silk worm is not strong enough in the lobby as yet to secure the recognition which his humble labors merit.—New York Evening Post.

Effects of Modern Life.

Eminent authorities unanimously agree that the high pressure methods of modern life are rapidly making us a race of helpless invalids—subject to all manner of nervous affections, headaches, insanity, dizziness, neuralgia, backache, hysteria, nervous troubles of the heart, stomach, kidneys, brain, etc. Ladies and gentlemen who are thus afflicted, or who are compelled to keep late hours, do much mental or physical work, who worry or fret about business or domestic troubles, should remember that no other remedy in the world will so spedily cure these diseases, remove worry and the blues, induce tranquil sleep, relieve pain, or build up the brain and nervous systems, as Dr. Miles' great discovery, the Restorative Nervine. It contains no opium or morphine. Trial bottles free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

HANDKERCHIEF, ENTERS THE HOME OF AN AGED COUPLE

And in Cold Blood Shoots Down the Wife as She Sits Reading the Family Bible—The Husband is Also Assaulted and Recovers Consciousness Only to Find His Wife a Corpse.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., February 10.—Further details of the burglary and murder at Westport, as told to a United Press correspondent by a prominent resident of Westport, who arrived here from the scene of the tragedy, are as follows: Ransom Floyd, a respected and wealthy farmer, aged seventy-three years, who resided with his wife, aged sixty-six years, two miles north of Westport, had prepared to retire at about eight-thirty last evening. Mrs. Floyd sat reading the family Bible with her husband, at the side of the kitchen stove. Mr. Floyd was suddenly startled by the furious barking of the watch-dog which was chained to the barn. Before he had time to see what the trouble was, or to guard himself, he saw a man with a bandana handkerchief fastened over the lower part of his face enter the kitchen door. The burglar demanded all the money that was in the house, and threatened to shoot the aged couple unless the demand was complied with. Mr. Floyed refused to give up his money, and was struck with a club on the back of the head. The burglar also fired two shots at him. He became unconscious from the effects of the blow, and remembers no more of what occurred. On regaining consciousness he found his wife lying dead on the floor in a pool of blood. There were several gashes on her head, and she had been shot once in the body. The Bible from which she had been reading was still clasped in her hands. It was evident that she had not had time to protect herself from the murderer. The house had been ransacked, but nothing had been taken. The burglar had probably become terrified by his awful deed, and had hurried away without making a thorough search for bounty. There were two certified checks amounting to $3,275, and $375 in cash, left untouched in a bureau drawer, Mr. Floyd had received the money yesterday morning for farm produce and wood, and it is thought the burglar and murderer knew of this and expected to obtain a large amount of money. There is not the slightest clew to the murderer. Floyd will probably recover, although his wounds are considered very dangerous on account of his advanced age.

BAD FOR LECONEY.

HIS HIRED HAND GIVES DAMAGING TESTIMONY TO HIM.

He Was Seen to be About the House at the Time the Girl Was Killed and His Actions Were Such as to Indicate that He is the Murderer.

PHILADELPHIA, February 10.—Two unimportant witnesses were examined in the Chalkley Leconey case in Camden, after which Garrett Murray was placed on the stand. After detailing what occurred at the breakfast table, the morning of the murder he said, "After breakfast I went out and worked about the farm. While working about the horses in the wagon shed, I heard a noise in the house as if somebody was choking. I looked and saw nothing, and then all was quiet. Then I saw Chalkley coming out of the house. He went to the pump and washed his hands. Then he went towards the creek. He came back in about twenty minutes and went in the house again. He came out in about ten minutes. In the meantime he had put on a clean white shirt, white pants, a jumber and rubber boots." Witness then told where they went and what occurred up to the time of being notified of the murder. Witness said Chalkley told him they would not want him at the coroner's inquest. He identified the pair of trousers found in the basket as the ones Chalkley wore on the morning of the murder. Witness was warned by Chalkley not to have anything to say to the people when they came to the house the day of the murder, and next day told him to keep his mouth shut and afterwards said if I did not keep my mouth shut he would kill me; that if he were to tell on Chalkley he (Chalkley) would be hanged. Witness was still on the stand when court adjourned until Monday morning.

THE CONDUCTORS.

Their Trouble With the C., N. O. & T. Company Settled.

CINCINNATI, February 10.—J. D. Hearne, H. C. Urner and Rev. Father Mackey, the arbitrators appointed to settle the differences between the Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific Railroad company and the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors, arising from the discharge of sixteen men has concluded its work. The railway company shall have the alternative to reinstate the men in their respective positions on the division on which they were formerly employed, or any other division operated by the company, or the company shall pay a sum equal to four months' wages for each man at the rate of $90 per month.

A SOLID VERDICT.

Disabled Engineer Gets $21,0000 From the L. E. & W. R. R.

MANSFIELD, OHIO, February 10.—The jury, in the case of Boyd W. Miller vs. the New York, Lake Erie & Western railroad company, for $30,000 damages, has brought in a verdict. It gives Miller $21,000 damages for injuries he sustained at Akron about two years ago, when he was running a road engine which collided with a switching engine in the Akron yards. Miller was engineer and received injury he jumped from his engine when he saw that a collision was inevitable. His injuries were such as to totally disable him from work. The case has been tried twice. The first verdict was $50,000. It was claimed that the yard engine was out of the yard limits upon his time when the accident happened.

The Eighth Victim.

WILKESBARRE, PA., January 10.—James Dunston, aged 45, the fire boss, whose naked lamp caused the explosion in the Nottingham shaft last Saturday, has died from the injuries he received at that time. Dunston is the eighth victim of the explosion. His two brothers met their death in a similar manner.

POSTAL CLERK'S ASSOCIATION.

A Glance at Their Late Convention—What Will the Harvest Be?

WASHINGTON, February 10.—The convention of the Postoffice Clerks' Association held here last week attracted much attention. The delegates represented every important office in America. The convention was for the purpose of petitioning congress to better classify the clerks in regard to pay, the enactment of an eight hour law, and an annual leave of absence of fifteen days. Postmaster General Wanamaker and First Assistant Clarkson pledged their support to the delegates, and said they would do everything in their power to advance their interests. City Postmaster Ross and Captain Sherwood, the assistant postmaster, are members of Washington council, and are heart and soul in the movement. The convention adjourned on Friday. The delegates from other cities were well pleased with the treatment given them by the local clerks.

The Washington clerks are not over pleased the work accomplished, for they hoped the convention would frame a bill for presention to congress calculated to effect the purposes sought. Instead, they simply passed a resolution indorsing any bills that might be introduced having for for their object the reforms desired by the the clerks. The men hold that any bill jeopardize their standing, for if congress should go to work and classify below the present standard, they would have to submit because of the peculiar wording of the resolutions of endorsement. The idea of the Washington end of the convention was to have a bill introduced embodying the intent and meaning of the clerks. There is considerable grumbling and Washington Association may repudiate the action.

Decree for Separation of Church and State.

THE MOB URGES FONSECA FOR THE DICTATORSHIP.

The Demonstration Distasteful to the President—The Latter Seriously Ill—The Two Vice Presidents in Control of Affairs—Pending Election.

RIO DE JANEIRO, February 10.—The following is the text of the decree for the separation of church and state:

Marshal Manoel Dedore Da Fonseca, chief of the provisional government, constituted by the army and the navy in the name of the nation, hereby decrees:

Article 1. Both the federal and the state authorities are prohibited from making laws or regulations, or performing administrative acts for the establishment or prohibition of any religion, and for making distinctions, on account of religious or philosophical beliefs and opinions, between inhabitants of this country, or in the services whose cost is defrayed by the public treasury.

Article 2. All religious denominations have equally the right to liberty of worship and that of governing themselves in accordance with their respective creeds, without being disturbed in the private acts pertaining to the exercise of their right.

Article 3. The liberty hereby instituted embraces not only individuals in their individual acts, but also churches, associations and institutions in which they are united, to all of which belongs the right to organize and maintain their corporate existence, without interference of the government, in conformity with the respective creeds and discipline.

Article 4. Patronage, with all of its institutions and prerogatives, is hereby abolished.

Article 5. The legal capacity of churches and religious denominations to acquire and hold property is hereby recognized within the limits of the laws relating to mortmain, and they shall be maintained in the possession of their present property, including their places of worship.

Article 6. The federal government will maintain the salaries now paid to the priests and other functionaries of the Catholic church, and for one year will continue to give state aid to the religious seminaries; and each state is at liberty to maintain clergymen of this and other churches in any manner not conflicting with the provisions of any of the preceeding articles.

Article 7. All provisions to the contrary are hereby repealed.

DEMONSTRATION IN FAVOR OF A DICTATORSHIP.

A mob made a demonstration yesterday before the residence of General da Fonseca, president of the provisional government, in favor of a dictatorship. They urged Fonseca to assume the position of dictator for a period of five years. General da Fonseca did not put in an appearance, but caused the mob to be dispersed by the police. Among the mob were many soldiers. The president, in a subsequent interview, said he was opposed to a dictatorship, and that the demonstration was distasteful to him.

Fonseca Said to Have Retired.

LONDON, February 10.—Advices from Rio de Janeiro have been received at Lisbon stating that General da Fonseca is again seriously ill, and has definitely retired from the head of the provisional government. Pending the election of his successor, Seniors Barbasa and Constant, respectively first and second vice presidents, have assumed the direction of affairs.

The Debt Octopus.

BALTIMORE, February 10.—Thornton Rollins, a coffee importer, has received a copy of the Rio News, of January 6, which contains a statement of Ruy Barbosa, minister of finance of Brazil. He says: "The national debt left us as an inheritance by the monarchy is more than 1,000,000 contos de reis. This enormous total will equal the receipts of the state for nearly seven years, estimating at $150,000,000 our annual revenue."

HIS REPUTATION DESTROYED.

A Pickaway County Man Asks $10,000 Damages For It.

CIRCLEVILLE, O., February 10.—Chauncey Ater, a farmer of more or less prominence, of Atlanta, this county, has brought action in Common Pleas Court to recover from William Ater, a distant relative, $10,000 damages for alleged defamation of character. The plaintiff charges that the defendant had stated, as a fact, certain occurrences which, if true, would imply that he (the plaintiff) had committed the crime of sodomy.

A HOROSCOPE

Of Congressional Work for This Week.

THE EXPECTED DEBATE ON THE EDUCATIONAL BILL.

The Oklahoma Territorial Measure—The Committee Will Report Today on Idaho's Admission Into the Union—The House to Wrangle on the New Code of Rules.

WASHINGTON, February 10.—The Senate will try to dispose of the Blair educational bill during the coming week. Mr. Blair, who occupied the afternoons of Wednesday and Thursday last, will resume his remarks today, and probably will conclude them before the Senate adjourns. A number of senators have signified their intention of speaking on this measure before a vote is taken, among them Senators, Hoar, Evarts, Plumb, Stanford, Pugh and George. Senator Edmunds and Senator Reagan are also expected to speak. The enemies of the Blair bill in the Senate have been proselyting among the new Senators, and they claim that the bill will be rejected. It has always passed the Senate heretofore.

Senator Platt will urge the Oklahoma bill during the morning hours, and it will doubtless be passed and sent to the House in a few days. The urgent need of this legislation has been impressed on the members of the House, and at the earliest opportunity the bill will be taken up and passed upon there.

The Senate committee on territories will likely order a favorable report today on the bill to admit Idaho into the union. The decision in the Supreme Court of the United States last Monday in the test oath case sustained the validity of the Idaho constitution, and the protests of the Mormons alone stadd in the way of a favorable report on the bill. In the secret session the nominations of Indian Commissioner Morgan and Superintendent of Indian Schools Dorchester are pending, and only await the return of Senator Morgan to be taken up and disposed of.

A discussion of the new code of rules will occupy most, if not the whole of the time, of the House during the week. Pamphlets containing the old and the new rules, arranged in parallel columns, will be furnished the members, so that there will be no difficulty in seeing at once what changes have been made. This will make the discussion ion much simpler to the new members. It is possible that some objection may be made to beginning the discussion today, on the ground that the members have been given no opportunity to study the changes; but should this objection be sustained a temporary delay only will be caused and it is certain that this discussion will begin not later than Tuesday.

On Tuesday the elections committee will meet to consider the Atkinson-Pendleton contested election case, and it is believed that two reports, made on strict party lines, will be submitted to the House. An effort will be made to limit the discussion on the rules, so that the elections committee will have a chance to call up this case for consideration before the end of the week. In the event this is done, a repetition of the scenes enacted in the House during the endeavor of the Republicans to call up the Smith Jackson case will, in a lesser degree, it is believed, occupy the time of the House. It is a question whether a vote on the rules will be had during the week.

RISING RIVER.

The Mississippi Scare to Planters in the South.

MEMPHIS, TENN., February 10.—Much alarm is felt by the planters and residents of the low lands adjacent to Memphis at the rising river. They fear that the water coming from the Ohio, Tennessee, Cumberland and their tributaries will cause a disastrous overflow, and are moving their stock to places of safety. Pecan Grove levee, in East Carroll parish, Louisiana, gave way Saturday morning and much property was destroyed. Men and material have been dispatched to the scens of the break. Much excitement prevails here and at Vicksburg. The river is falling here, but rising rapidly at points above and below.

Ivy City Race Today.

WASHINGTON, February 10.—There will be a unique race at Ivy City today. It is a match for a considerable sum of money between Mr. Percy Drayton and Mr. Robert Neville at five and a half miles on the flat. The horses will carry 200 pounds each and will be ridden by their owners. It is doubtful if such a race as this has ever been decided in America, though in years gone by they were quite common in England and Ireland.

Grand Pacific Hotel.

CHICAGO, February 10.—It is reported that a deal has been quietly concluded on the part of Mr. Leiter, formerly of the firm of Field, Leiter & company, whereby for the sum of $400,000 he has secured possession of the Grand Pacific hotel. The deal, it is understood, only includes the building and the lease hele, as Mr. Leiter already owns the ground on which the building stands. Mr. Leiter will have the hotel torn down and erect an immense office building.

An Historic Hotel.

ST. LOUIS, February 10.—The Planters' House, the oldest and most famous hotel in the city, has been closed by the sheriff. The Merchants' Hotel, another old land mark, was closed in the same way last week. The Planters' House was built in 1846. It was favorably mentioned in Dickens' American Notes, and has housed many of the most distinguished men in America.

Daily Signs With Cleveland.

CLEVELAND, O., February 10.—The Cleveland League Club signed Vincent Daily, a young outfielder of the California League. He is a good man at batting and a fair outfielder. This man completes the League team for 1880.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refun the purchase price, it satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. For sale by

D. A. FRASER'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT. The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders. It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application. The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES. All sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healthy influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years. This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

STRANGE CASE OF ROBBERY.

Ingenuity Displayed by an English Crook—Peculiar Contents of a Coffin.

The well known detective, J. M. Fuller of New York, was asked to relate the details of the strangest case he had ever investigated. After a moment's thought, Mr. Fuller said:

"One evening about five years ago, my telephone rang out furiously, and stepping to the instrument I was informed that I was wanted uptown to investigate a robbery which had just been discovered. Taking an assistant with me I proceeded to the point indicated, and found everything in wild confusion. A wedding had taken place there during the early part of the evening, which had been interrupted by a fire breaking out on the next street, which could be plainly seen from the rear windows of the house where the ceremony had been held. Everybody, including the servants, had crowded to the rear part of the house to witness the progress of the fire, which lasted about a half hour. When the happy couple and their guests had returned to the parlors, they made an astonishing discovery. All the saleable presents, including a thousand dollar seal skin coat had mysteriously disappeared. The doors and windows were intact, none of the guests had departed, and all the servants were in their places. The bridegroom was a young lawyer for whom I had transacted some business, and he had sent for me. He could suspect no one. After looking the ground over carefully I came to the conclusion that someone in the house, either guest or servant, had robbed the premises with the aid of an outside confederate. I questioned all the servants closely, but no one had seen or heard anything suspicious. One of the guests, an Englishman, kept right at my elbow and offered many suggestions. When I finished with the servants, our English friend drew me one side and assured me that the butler, in his judgment, was the guilty man. I asked him for his reasons for suspecting him, and his replies were given in a rambling way. He was so anxious to fasten the crime on somebody, that I sought an interview with my client for the purpose of finding out something about him.

My client said that he had met the Englishman on an ocean steamer, coming to this country, about three months previously; he had seemed well provided with means, and informed my client that he represented some English capitalists in the purchase of some western property. He was well educated, polite and polished in his manners, and my client took a strong fancy to him. He had been invited to the client's house where he had remained for a week, then left for the west and had returned two days before the wedding, to which he had been invited. This was all I could get from the client concerning him.

I was not favorably impressed with him, but said nothing to my client. I then sought the Englishman again, and while talking with him, the front door bell rang and a message was handed to him, which he nervously opened, and scarcely glancing at it, passed it to me. It read, "Your little nephew has just died; come over at once, Ethel." He expressed his regrets for being compelled to leave so early, and said that Ethel was his sister, and that she was a delicate woman and would need his presence in this, her hour of trouble.

He accordingly took his leave, with one of my shadows at his heels. I returned to my office and immediately prepared circulars describing the property taken, which were struck off early the next morning, and at once sent them to the pawnbrokers of this and adjoining cities, and the heads of the different police departments in the entire country. About 7 o'clock that morning I received a dispatch from the shadow who was looking after the Englishman, to send him a relief at a certain place in Jersey City. The relief was sent, and about two hours after, shadow No. 1 reported. He had followed his man to Jersey City and located him in a house, which, upon inquiry did not bear a first-class reputation. I determined to go there and investigate for myself. When I reached the spot I found the house bore signs of mourning. This rather disconcerted me, for I had the suspicion that the message received by my suspect the night before, was a bogus one. However I made up my mind to see it out. Shadow No. 2 had not yet seen his man. Taking a position which shielded me from observation I awaited developments.

About 2 o'clock in the afternoon, a coach drove up, and our Englishman and a lady got in and a tiny coffin was placed on the inside seat. The driver then started off at a lively pace. I pressed an Express wagon into service and followed. The coach was driven to a railroad station where its passengers alighted with its precious burden. Our man went into the waiting room with his bereaved sister and having purchased their tickets, took seats and awaited the time for the departure of their train. Wishing to see if there was address or other mark on the box which might be of service to me, I went to the baggage-room and made an examination, but found nothing. I asked the man in charge for the burial permit, and he informed me that he had not yet received it from the mother. I found that I had just five minutes in which to act, and accordingly hunted up the detective detailed at the station and imparted my suspicions to him. I had lifted one end of the box and had found it exceedingly light. Too light for the body of a child two years old. The railroad detective and myself then stepped into the waiting room and asked the Englishman for his permit for the removal of the body. The moment he saw me he wilted.

Of course he had no permit, for there was no need of one as we soon learned. We opened the coffin, and behold, the property of my client, including the seal skin coat was disclosed to our astonished gaze. Diamond broaches, solid silver knives and forks, silver cake basket, and other articles, in all valued at three thousand dollars. We found three tickets for Philadelphia in the Englishman's pockets, where he intended to dispose of his booty. My client would not prosecute, and so ended the strangest case I have ever investigated. The Englishman sought new pastures for I have never seen him since.

"MY STORY OF THE WAR."

Mrs. Mary A. Livermore's Famous Book.

We regard this splendid book as a wholly unique work, for it presents the womanly, or what may very appropriately be termed the heavenly side of the war, and this has never hitherto been written.

But the illustrations! An able critic recently said: "This is the most richly embellished work ever published in America." We endorse this opinion. There are splendid steel-plate portraits of famous nurses of Union soldiers, and many plates illustrating hospital scenes and thrilling incidents in a woman's army life. No newspaper description can do these costly plates justice. They must be seen to be appreciated. There are also splendid fac simile plates of famous old battle flags, from photograps and paintings made from the original flags, printed in sixteen colors from one hundred and twenty-eight engraved stones. The story of each flag is told, with pathetic incidents attending the death of color-bearers who died under their folds.

TRUE WORDS BRAVELY SPOKEN.

Stop, ye people, in your blind search for wealth and happiness. Ye are sleeping on a volcano. There is burning all around you a fire that shall consume the very palaces in which you have planned such pleasures. Stop and listen to the voice of reason. It is not possible that these tears shall be shed for naught and ye go free laden with wealth coined from heart throbs and virgin souls. "Ye shall not kill the poor for aye, and rob them of life's honey." These be God's children. His tender care is over them, and their every sigh is marked in the account against this nation. I care not for the discussion of laws and theories. I want no statistics to prove the better condition of the slaves in this country over that of their fellows in other lands. I scorn the statecraft that measures a nation's wealth by its palaces built of broken hearts and ruined womanhood. There is no prosperity in a nation where young girls die of hunger lest they live as beasts. There is no honor to the land in which millions are starving for the sight of nature's beauties while a bejeweled aristocracy are dancing for charity in fumes of the wine cup. There is a cancer eating into the nation's life. It may be cured by honest endeavor. It will eat itself free without.

Rheumatism

Is undoubtedly caused by the lactic acid in the blood. This acid attacks the fibrous tissues, and causes the pains and aches in the back, shoulders, knees ankles, hips, and wrists. Thousands of people have found in Hood's Sarsaparilla a positive cure for rheumatism. This medicine, by its purifying action, neutralizes the acidity of the blood, and also builds up and strengthens the whole body.

CRUSHED STONE FOR ROADS.

The wretched condition of the highways in this section during the present winter should arouse the farmers to the adoption of some better plan than the one now in vogue for improving the roads. The following clipping from the Ann Arbor Argus is commended to the attention of those who are interested in this matter.

EDITOR ARGUS: Allow me to present to you the following article from the Michigan Farmer, on crushed stones, and to submit this important matter to the city fathers and highway commissioners of the townships, and to the good people in general. We have plenty of small stones about Ann Arbor that could be crushed. I have addressed Hon. Wm. L. Webber, of East Saginaw, in regard to the expense of a crusher, and the expense and result of stone roads in Saginaw and Bay counties, for which he furnishes the crushed stones from the Bay Port quarry. In Germany all roads are made of crushed stones. Better roads in and about Ann Arbor are more in demand than any other improvement I know of.

Respectfully, EMIL BAUR.

Ann Arbor, Jan. 28, 1890.

The clipping referred to is as follows:

The town of Sweden, Monroe Co., N. Y, owns a stone crusher and hires men by the day to run it. Last spring the town appropriated $2,000 to crush stone, and to make a rough guess, I think the $2,000 crushed stone enough to make about five miles of perfect road. They set the crusher near stone, which is donated; the town pays for hauling stone to the crusher, and pays for crushing it; the road districts go and get the crushed stone and lay it. Each road district and individual is greedy to get the stone, and I think that money thus expended goes ten times as far as any other in making highways. In the last three years the town of Sweden has made about twenty miles of road, so good that a team can haul as good a load in this open, muddy winter as in summer. The land is clay, and the roads not laid with stone or gravel are simply fearful. It would pay a person to go a long distance to see what has been done to the roads in Sweden. When the roads are all made with crushed stone and the fences removed from the bleak places where the snow drifts, the millenium will not be far away.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

VILLAGE OF TECUMSEH, Mich.
Council Room, Feb, 3, 1890.

Regular Session.

Present: President Heesen, Messrs. Ames, Elliott, Heck, James, Kennedy, Smith and the recorder.

The minutes of last meeting were read and approved.

REPORTS OF OFFICERS

The sexton reported three adult interments for the month of January, and submitted treasurer's receipt for $12 00 interment fees. Report accepted and ordered filed.

PETITIONS AND APPLICATIONS.

A petition was received from Birdsell, Glenn & Co. for permission to set up and operate a small steam engine in their meat market. Similar requests were also made by W. W. Marsh and C. F. Field. On motion all the above petitions were granted.

A request was received from St. Peter's church, asking that the village supply oil and pay for lighting a street lamp in front of the Episcopal church, the lamp post to be furnished by the church. Referred to the street committee.

A request was received that a street lamp to be set up on west Brown street, near the residence of Mrs. Hand. Referred to street committee.

NEW BUSINESS.

The following bills were presented and on motion referred to the Finance Committee: C. A. Slayton, $14 35; A. James, for supplies, $9.28; T. R Kyle, Marshal, $4 00; C. F. Field, printing, $5.00

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

The finance committee reported favorably on the above bills, and on motion orders were directed drawn for the several amounts.

The President appointed Councilmen Ames, Heck and the recorder, members of the board of registration to set March 1, 1890, and Councilmen James, Smith and the recorder members of the board of election, to be held March 3, 1890.

On motion the cemetery committee was directed to examine the cemetery records and make such corrections as might be required to have them complete and accurate.

Council then adjourned.

CHAS. F. FIELD, Recorder.

A Very Live Old Man

John G. Whittier, who is now eighty-two years old, is about the livest man of his generation. He is vigorous both in body and mind, and can do as good work as ever. His last poem, "The Captain's Well," which he wrote for the New York Ledger, in his eighty-second year, is one of the strongest, most beautiful, and most finished productions that ever came from his pen. Mr. Whittier, in sending "The Captain's Well" to the Ledger, wrote to the publishers of that paper that it would probably be the last poem he would ever write; but we hope that in this he was mistaken. The venerable poet did not fix any price upon "The Captain's Well," but left the remuneration to Messrs. Robert Bonner's Sons, and they sent him a check for a thousand dollars. Such unusual liberality touched the old man deeply; especially because (as he characteristically wrote) it enabled him to give more than he had hoped to be able to bestow upon certain charitable enterprises that were near to his heart.

ANOTHER PIONEER GONE.

Father Time, with his sickle, is rapidly gathering to their final home the old pioneers of this section who began life in the wilderness, fifty years ago.

Michael Hendershot, the subject of this sketch, was born on the banks of the Susquehanna River, Columbia Co., Pa., June 8, 1805. He was the fourth child of a large family, and lived at home with his parents until eighteen years of age. He then went to Livingston Co., New York and began life for himself as laborer on a farm. In the year 1830 he came to the territory of Michigan and located in Tecumseh. His first employment was that of a stage driver, on the route between Saline and Tecumseh which position he held for five years at a salary of $13.00 a month. By rigid economy and frugality he saved something each year from his earnings, and in 1835 he bought eighty acres of land, for which he paid $200. In a few months thereafter he sold the same land for $500, and this lucky speculation gave him a start in life far above the average young man in that early day. He began buying land in large quantities, every few years adding to his purchases, until he finally acquired 600 acres in the town of Macon, all of which he cultivated for a number of years, and thus laid the foundations for an ample fortune. His personal wants were few and his surplus income each year was prudently invested. Thus his property was constantly growing, until at his death, he was accounted one of the wealthiest men in this section of the state. During the last few years his farm was parcelled out and rented to different parties, as his personal infirmities rendered it impossible for him to conduct so large an estate himself. In July 1834, he married Miss Rosina Coller, who came to Macon a few years previously with her parents from Livingston Co., New York. His wife died in 1867 and since that time some of his children have lived with him in the old homestead in Macon. Nine children blessed his married life, eight of whom attained their majority and seven are living. Louisa, the wife of Cassius M. Mills, who owns a large farm in Macon, passed the river only a few months ago. Wm. H. is married and lives in Leslie, Ingham county. John also lives on a farm in this township, on the Clinton road. Jesse is now living at Livingston, Montana. Catharine is the wife of Martin Hendershot who resides in Macon township. George is married and lives on a farm in Macon. Eva is married and lives at Dunkirk, Ohio. Michael owns a farm in the State of Washington. Elmer E. is married and is a practising physician at Britton in this county.

The deceased was a man of vigorous physical health nearly all his life, but during the past few months the infirmities of age have been rapidly undermining his health, and he finally gave up the contest on Sunday the 2d of February. The funeral services were held at the family residence on Tuesday, February 4th, which were largely attended by the residents of that section. Rev. Mr. Borden of Britton preached an eloquent discourse, and the remains were laid to rest in the Aten cemetery, in the township of Clinton.

The life of Michael Hendershot demonstrated in a marked degree what a man of industry, frugality and economy can accomplish in a new country. He began his career in 1830, when he first hired out as a stage driver, without a dollar of capital, cleared up a large farm and reared a very large family of children, and accumulated an ample fortune by his own unaided efforts. He was not a man to squander much on the mere luxuries of life, but his family were well provided with all the comforts, and his own declining years were passed in easy affluence, surrounded by his children. He has seen the wilderness transformed into beautiful farms and prosperous villages, and he had the satisfaction of knowing that his own life's work contributed in no small degree to the general prosperity with which he was surrounded.

NOTES FROM THE NORMAL.

YPSILANTI, Feb. 10th, 1890.

The battle is won; the smoke has blown away, we have all taken a course in LaGrippe and passed EX on examination.

One week of the last term has passed and we are again settled down to business.

Miss King, preceptress, is again able to assume her duties.

The library owned by the Normal Lyceum has been bought by the State Board and has been donated by them to the Normal Library.

Robt. Burdette of the "Burlington Hawkeye" is booked for the Normal Lecture course, Feb. 10th. Great cause for laughter is expected.

The last lecture was by Mary A. Livermore; Subject—Fifty years on the Public Platform. Her eloquent speech held the attention of an overcrowded hall for an hour and a half.

The young ladies of the Normal are making rapid progress in the art of club swinging. A large number of them make it a daily exercise and many of them are experts at it.

Many of the students will attend the entertainment given by the Adelphic Society of the University, in which a few members of the Normal Lyceum take part, Feb. 15th.

Friday evening, Feb. 7th, the old officers of the societies in the Lyceum stepped down from their positions and out from under their load of responsibilities, and the newly elected officers took up their duties.

Card of Thanks.

Our sincere thanks are hereby extended to the many kind friends who gave us their aid and sympathy in our recent bereavment.

The Forum

A MONTHLY REVIEW OF LIVING SUBJECTS

By the Foremost Writers in the World.

THE FORUM has won the highest place reached by any periodical; for it publishes articles by more authoritative writers and by more workers along instructive lines of activity than any other publication. It contains eleven studies of great subjects every month. It is impartial, giving hearings alike to each side. It is financially independent, and it belongs to no party or "interest." It is never sectional, but it aims always to be instructive.

The FORUM is of great value to that part of my college work which deals with practical political current questions. Two sets are hardly enough for daily use by students.—Prof. ALFRED BUSHNELL HART, of Harvard.

I consider THE FORUM as furnishing the most intelligent and sympathetic audience that a thoughtful writer can find to address in any land.—Prof. ALEXANDER WINCHELL, of the University of Michigan.

THE FORUM continues to hold its place as the foremost of our magazines, for the variety, value, and the weight of its contributions.—THE NEW YORK TIMES.

There has come forward no problem of grave importance since THE FORUM was established that has not been discussed in its pages by masters of the subject. Announcements of forthcoming articles can seldom be made long in advance, for THE FORUM'S discussions are always of problems of present concern. Every such problem that the year 1890 will bring forward will be discussed, whether in politics, or religion, or social science, or practical affairs. The January number will contain a reply by ex-Speaker J. G. CARLISLE to Senator Cullom's recent article on "How the Silver Bill Affects the Farmer."

THE OLD FOLKS' PARTY.

Last Friday, the day fixed for the old folks' party, proved to be the stormiest of the season. An old-fashioned down-easter snow storm set in early in the forenoon, and at three o'clock in the afternoon the prospects for the party looked rather dubious. Whether the clerk of the weather had a spite against the old folks is difficult to say, but at all events his sudden inclination to indulge in wintry snow and storm manifested itself on exactly the right day to disarrange the old folks' program very seriously. At four o'clock, however, the storm broke, and the dancers in the village turned out in goodly numbers, so that the committee were very agreeably disappointed in the attendance. About forty dance tickets were sold and a fair number of gallery tickets, but the storm lessened the attendance of spectators very much. But in every respect except numbers the party was an unqualified success. Wolff's orchestra never made better music we venture to say, and for downright, solid enjoyment, a more entertaining party was never held in the Opera House. The old folks present were all young again, and the young folks were as old as the old folks. In fact the company reminded one of the old time parties of fifty years ago, when both young and old, representing all classes in society, assembled together with no other thought than to have a jolly good time. They didn't go to show their finery, or to snub their neighbors or to act as wall flowers, but to have a good, enjoyable dance, and that is exactly what they had. The refreshment end of the party was properly taken care of by VanAntwerp, as every one knew it would be. Taken all in all the committee in charge have reason to congratulate themselves that the affair turned out so happily for all who attended. Had the weather proved propitious the country, as well as the village, would have been well represented, which would have undoubtedly doubled the total attendance. The third annual can be set down as "an extra good party under the circumstances."

A TECUMSEH GIRL MISSING.

The following appeared in the Detroit papers of last Tuesday:

Fannie Morrison, a pretty young country girl, 17 years old, has mysteriously disappeared.

She came to this city from Tecumseh, Mich., last Tuesday on a visit to her sister, whose married name is also Morrison, at 578 Farnsworth street. Thursday afternoon she went down town to visit friends and has not been seen since. The case was reported to the police Saturday, and the detectives will institute a search for her.

It is feared that she got lost, and, being an innocent country girl, fell into the hands of some designing person who may be now detaining her.

She was unacquainted with the city. When last seen she wore a green dress trimmed with red silk, and a long blue and gray ulster.

Yesterday's Detroit papers report that she is with friends at Ypsilanti.

TECUMSEH AND FRANKLIN FARMERS' CLUB

As previously announced this Society met at Mr. Geo. Swartz's Wednesday evening, Feb. 5th. A very good program was presented, after which the gentlemen discussed the "Apple Orchard" pretty thoroughly and decided that such orchards paid well the past year. The next meeting will be at the home of Mr. Langton, Feb. 19, when the following program will be presented in connection with a box social:

Music.
Rec.—Lena VanValkenburg.
Dec.—Harry Hoag.
Essay—Adah Waldron.
Song—Mr. VanValkenburg and daughter Adah
Reading—Emma Drake.
Dialogue—Roy Langton and Clarence Hurry.
Rec.—Ella Munger.
Music—Mr. and Mrs. Poucher.
Charade—Mrs. Hoag.
Dec.—Austin Swartz.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Will you be my valentine?

To-morrow is St. Valentine's Day.

It looks now like a January thaw.

Mrs. N. M. Sutton is on the sick list.

A. W. Slayton of Detroit was in town last week.

Robt. Cairns was on the sick list a part of last week.

The postoffice will have plenty of business to-morrow.

Mrs. W. J. Arnold visited friends in Manchester last week.

Several cutters and sleighs were on the streets last Saturday.

Chas. C. Tefft was on the sick list last week, but is out again now.

Mrs. Albert Vedder is quite seriously ill with an attack of pneumonia.

Miss Etta Potter, of Monroe, was the guest of Maggie Beamish last week.

Miss Loana Stacy spent last Sunday and Monday with friends in Adrian.

Chas. Paugborn has obtained a job in the Kalamazoo buggy works factory.

Will Spaulding has moved into the Raymond house, near the C. J. & M. crossing.

Barrett Robison, of Manchester, has accepted a position in Spade's clothing store.

Miss Mary Peters, who is attending Oberlin College, is visiting her father, John Peters.

Dr. R. B. House, of Springfield, Ohio, was in town on a flying visit last week.

Two obituary notices, which were prepared for this issue, are unavoidably laid over until next week.

M. P. Brown has a copy of the Angelus framed and hung in his rooms. It is a beauty and no mistake.

Tax collections are slow all over the County. Many treasurers have had their time extended to the first of March.

Jeff Kennedy was in town over Sunday. He has lately bought a hardware store at Hanover and is now engaged in that business. Success to him.

The Adrian Times, of Monday, says: Walter C. Burridge, of Tecumseh, accompanied by a fine crop of English side whiskers, is smiling on Adrian friends to-day.

Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Hobart of Jackson, also C. H. Barker and wife of Adrian, were in town last Monday to attend the funeral of Mrs. Hobart's mother.

The Tecumseh W. C. T. U. give an entertainment at the residence of Dr. H. L. Stewart Feb. 22. Refreshments served from 5 to 10 at ten cents. Oysters extra. By order of Com.

Miss Mabel Hayden has returned from Detroit, where she has been taking an advanced course of instruction on the violin. She is now prepared to give lessons on the same instrument.

How Uncle Sam makes his paper money will be described and explained by Franklin P. Smith in an illustrated Supplement on "The Bureau of Engraving and Printing," which will appear in the number of Harper's Weekly for February 12.

"A great number of the most widely circulated magazine in the world," is the Boston Herald's description of Harper's Magazine for February. "Perhaps never before in a single issue," continues the Herald, "has so much thoroughly good work been brought out."

Rev. Joslyn gave his congregation a little food for serious thought, at the close of his sermon last Sunday morning at the M. E. Church. He said: "We have in our town say 3000 inhabitants On an average there are not over 500 who attend the five churches. Where are the other 2500 people? More especially the young boys and girls?

E. J. Hollister returned from his southern trip last week. His route lay through Kansas, Indian Territory and Texas. He found Texas forging ahead at a lively gait, having improved very much during the past year. While in Kansas City he had a pleasant visit with Lynn Comfort and Lelma Stewart, both of whom are doing well.

The fears, which the family of Mrs. N. J. Bryan felt last week that her injuries might terminate fatally, were well founded. Death relieved her from her sufferings last Saturday. The funeral, held at the family home on Monday, was well attended, there being fifty-one teams in the procession. A formal tribute to her memory will appear in a future issue.

At the annual meeting of the Tecumseh and Macon Telegraph Co., held Monday, Feb. 10, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Pres.—J. T. Boyce.
Vice Pres.—Vincent Wood
Sec.—Sam Boyce.
Treas.—L. G. North.
Manager—C. W. Benedict
Directors—J. T. Boyce, L. G. North, C. W. Benedict, E. L. Russell, Vincent Wood, S. W. Boyce.

Mrs. D. L. Whitenack visited Adrian friends the first of the week.

Mrs. Sizer, of Adrian, has been visiting Tecumseh friends the past week.

Mrs. Sam James, of Detroit, is spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. O. B. DeWolf.

Rev. W. Q. Burnett, who has been quite seriously ill with the grippe, is now on the gain.

A bouncing baby boy made its appearance at the home of Fred Rosecrans last Sunday. Shake.

Em. Doke's wife has returned from her visit of several days at Chicago, which she enjoyed very much.

Jas. W. Patterson, of Elkhart, was in town a few days last week. He was kept busy shaking hands during his stay here.

We want cash. All persons who are indebted to us, please call and settle by Feb. 1st, and oblige,
Anderson & Co.

District Telephone Manager K. S. Baker, of Adrian, was in town last Thursday, and gave the HERALD a friendly call.

One of the best family residences in Tecumseh will be sold for two-thirds of its cost if taken soon. For particulars enquire at this office.

Mr. J. W. Seelye, of Eaton Rapids, is spending several days with his brother, Geo. H. Seelye, our popular boot and shoe merchant.

Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Brown entertained a party of young people Monday evening. A very pleasant time was enjoyed by all present.

Seelye's shoe store was quite a rendezvous for old clothes last week, a large amount having been collected there for shipment to the Dakota sufferers.

In publishing a list of officers of the County Agricultural society last week the name of Minor Davidson as director from Tecumseh was inadvertently omitted.

Will Spalding intends opening a tin shop over Albaugh's pump factory. Will is an experienced workman in his line and will no doubt make the venture pay.

A. R Pardington of Brooklyn, New York, was in town over Sunday. He had been to Chicago and stopped over a day or two at Tecumseh on his return home.

Our new baker, Mrs L. P. Brown, is working up a good trade. He is evidently an adept at the business for his goods give excellent satisfaction, among those who have patronized him.

The Ladies' Aid society of the M.E. church will hold their regular monthly tea meeting in the church parlors, Wednesday, Feb. 19. Business meeting at 4 p.m. Supper served from 5:30 to 6:30 by Mrs. Wm. Heck's committee.

The Michigan clothing company have purchased the stock of goods of the White Star firm. Mr. C. W. Thompson of Milan is the manager of the new firm and will conduct the slaughter sale just opened at that store.

The West family that were billed for the 11th at the opera house failed to appear. They must have concluded that their performance was better suited to a school house on some country cross-roads than the Tecumseh opera house.

The official list of awards given at the January Poultry Show at Adrian has been issued. The illness of the Secretary C D. Keyes delayed the preparation of the list but all who were entitled to premiums have received official notice ere this.

The Adrian Commandery Knight Templars will give a grand party tomorrow, Friday evening. Blue Lodge members are also invited and a brilliant party is expected. A special train will leave Tecumseh at 6:15 P. M. car time, to convey the Tecumseh delegation, returning about one A. M Saturday morning. A large number of the masonic fraternity expect to attend from here.

The death of Mrs. Perley Bills was briefly announced in our last week's issue. The funeral services were conducted at the family residence on Friday afternoon last in the midst of the worst snow storm of the winter. Notwithstanding the inclement weather the house was filled with sympathizing neighbors and friends to witness the last sad rites. An obituary notice is in preparation by a friend of the family which will appear in due season.

H. W. Stevens started for Bay City and the Saginaws last Monday but, when he arrived at Jackson, he ran across a man that was wanted in Clinton. He proved to be John Gregory, the man who burglarized John J. White's tailor shop in our sister village early in the winter. It seems Gregory was held in Jackson on another charge, and on searching his home, a quantity of cloths and clothing was found which he failed to satisfactorily account for, but which proved to belong to White. Officer Stevens postponed his northern visit, and lodged his prisoner in the Adrian jail to wait examination.

Rev. F. Adkins spent Monday and Tuesday at Detroit.

Mrs. Ed. Baird is visiting her mother in this village.

Mrs. L. P. Tribou visited Jackson friends the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Hall will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary next Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Rappleye, of Farmer Village, N. Y., spent Sunday at A. P. Coddington's.

Rev. Granger W. Smith, of Sandusky, O., will occupy the Baptist pulpit next Sunday morning and evening.

A rare chance to buy a Carpet, Lace Curtains, Cloaks, and Blankets.
Anderson & Co.

Dull times cannot phase Wm. McCowen, nor dull the edge of his business grit, nor stop his selling furniture. He is laying in a larger stock than ever this winter. Read his new card and be convinced.

Word has been received of the death of Myron M. Hyde, youngest son of our townsman, Morris Hyde, at his home in Carson City, Nevada. We have not yet learned the full particulars.

Mrs. Amanda Ives, the aged mother of Mrs. L. L. Bates, died last Saturday, after a brief illness, at the advanced age of eighty years and five months. The funeral was held from the house of Mr. Bates last Monday afternoon and the remains taken to Syracuse, N. Y.

Alva Raymond suffered a severe stroke of paralysis last Tuesday night, which may result seriously for him. He was at the house of his daughter, Mrs. Mize, in Raisin. Dr. Woodward was called to attend him. His left side was paralyzed and his speech somewhat impaired.

The sketch which appears elsewhere, giving some personal experience of J. M. Fuller the New York detective, will repay perusal. And when you read it, bear in mind that Mr. Fuller is an old Tecumseh boy, and that he is now manager of one of the best private detective establishments in Gotham.

The pastor of the Universalist church is giving on Sunday mornings a series of sermons based upon the interview of Jesus and the woman of Samaria. Feb 2nd.; Text: John IV: 6-7. Subj.—"Religious Opportunity." Next Sunday, Feb. 16, at 10:30; Text: John IV: 9-10. Subj.—"God's Gifts." In the evening, at 7 o'clock, a sermon upon "The Grandeur of Human Effort." Text: I Corinthians, III:9.

Do you want your daughters to learn how to cook? Then start them in with the Cooking Class commenced in the March number of Demorest's Family Magazine. The articles carry the "Cooking Class" right into your own kitchen, for the editor tells us that these lessons are identical with the instruction given to her class by the head instructor of one of the large cooking classes in New York City.

From the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Eagle: Mrs. Margaret Custer Calhoun made a great success as an elocutionist Thursday night, at her debut in Brooklyn, in the Simpson M. E. church. This lady is the sister of General Custer and widow of Lieut. James Calhoun, heroes in the battle of the Little Big Horn. She has much of the dash, enthusiasm and elan of her distinguished brother. She completely captured her audience and held them in triumph to the close. Many of those who attended were overheard to say that Mrs. Calhoun was the finest elocutionist they had ever heard. Her selections were new and were splendidly rendered. She has ease, grace, power and magnetism.

HUMAN NATURE.

If you are interested in the study of HUMAN NATURE and Character, and the improvement of yourself and others in any way, we would like to call your attention to the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL AND SCIENCE OF HEALTH, a well-known magazine which has been published for fifty years, and is devoted to all that will improve men Mentally, Morally, or Physically. It is the only magazine of its kind published in this country, and in every way the most important.

The specialty of PORTRAITS of distinguished, or notorious persons, with studies of their character and sketches of their lives, which has always been a marked and attractive feature of the JOURNAL, will still lead the host of good things prepared for the reader.

No one can study themselves or others and not be greatly benefited by the results, and therefore no one can afford NOT to read the JOURNAL. A knowledge of HUMAN NATURE would enable us to understand ourselves and others and to avoid many of the disappointments in life.

TERMS.—Monthly at $2 a year, or 20 cents a Number. To each new subscriber is given either the PHRENOLOGICAL BUST or NEW PHRENOLOGICAL CHART Premium. When the premiums are sent, 15 cents extra must be received with each subscription to pay postage on the JOURNAL and the expense of boxing and packing the Bust, which will be sent by express, or No. 2, a smaller size, or the Chart Premium, will be sent by mail, postpaid. Send 10 cents for specimen Numbers, Premium List, Posters, Catalogue of books, etc. Address

WILHELM'S IMPROVED CREAMERY CAN.

Unequalled for private Dairies of from one cow to full size Creamery. $5.00 will buy FOUR 3-GAL. CANS making a capacity of 12 gallons of milk, and will PRODUCE ALL THE CREAM FROM 4 TO 8 HOURS, in a vat, tub, or any receptacle the farmer may choose, holding water from 10 to 14 inches in depth, and at a temperature from 40 to 60 degrees cold. IT MAKES A PERFECT CREAM and combines the advantage of deep setting, rapid cooling, protecting the milk from all impurities of the atmosphere which so quickly taints cream. Also preventing souring by thunder storms, from flies, insects, dust, and all bad odors, thus preserving both cream and milk, clean and sweet. Over 200,000 in actual use in the U. S. One setting of milk is all that is needed to prove the merit of the can. Usual size of can, 3 gal., price $1.25. A liberal discount on orders of one dozen Cans and upwards. Write for descriptive circular and testimonials. I also make a specialty of building Creameries and furnishing all the best improved machinery and apparatus. JOHN WILHELM, Wooster, Wayne Co. O.

C. L. Osgood, Samaria, Mich. says—The Milk Cans I bought of you give perfect satisfaction. We can make just as good and just as much butter in the most unfavorable season of the year by the use of your Cans as at any other time of the year. I have 4 Cans. Have used them 3 years and would not be without them.

MAKING HIM UNCOMFORTABLE.

How Southerners Tried to Get Rid of an Objectionable Official.

WASHINGTON, February 10.—A peculiar case of interference with a postmaster has recently been brought to the notice of the postoffice department. Postmaster General Wanamaker has received several telegrams from Edward L. Duckworth, recently appointed postmaster at Sharan, Taliaferro county, Georgia, asking him to pay no attention to letters which he would receive containing his resignation. It appears, from Duckworth's statements, that some of the citizens down there are opposed to his holding the office. Duckworth is an independent Republican, and on account of his political career has fallen into disfavor. Mobs, so he reports, collect about his home and he has been prevented from taking charge of the office. Several times he has been compelled by threats to sign letters of resignation as postmaster; but in each case has sent a telegram asking the department to pay no attention to them, as they were not voluntarily on his part. He has, however, come to the conclusion that he could no longer stand out against the opposition, and a letter has been received from him at the department tendering his resignation on the ground that he was prevented by violence and threats from performing his duty. Postmaster General Wanamaker at once telegraphed him to hold on; that by direction of the president, a United States marshall had been ordered to the town, and that the postoffice inspectors would also be there to investigate the case.

It is said that Duckworth has never assumed his duties as postmaster and that the man he replaced—a Democrat—and his friends determined that he never should do so. On one occasion a coffin bearing the inscription "Radicals Must Die" was placed upon the porch of Duckworth's house.

The statements of Duckworth are corroborated by letters received from prominent citizens at the department. It is stated that the violence reported will be resisted if the circumstances justify such action. This course was determined upon by Mr. Wanamaker after consultation with the president and First Assistant Postmaster General Clarkson.

FAMILY MURDERED.

TERRIBLE FIND OF A PARTY OF COWBOYS IN THE PLAINS.

Father, Mother and Two Children Brutally Slaughtered by Unknown Desperadoes—The Authorities Investigate.

WICHITA, KAN., February 10.—Four bodies were found thirty miles south-east of Purcell, by two cowboys, John Horner and Thomas Hemps. Near by was a mover's wagon and harness, the horses having been taken away. The corpses were those of a man apparently fifty years old with four bullet holes; a woman apparently about the same age, with two bullet holes; a young woman, apparently twenty years old, shot through the head and a boy of fifteen shot in the forehead. The find was made last evening and reported to Purcell today, when a deputy marshal started to investigate. The cowboys report that the killing probably occurred ten days ago.

THE SAD STORY

Of the Burning of his Daughter is Told to Secretary Tracy.

WASHINGTON, February 10.—In response to a request from Secretary Tracy, Chief of Fire Department Parris, Policeman Cattell and Fireman Wright went to the white house and had a talk with him about the circumstances connected with the burning of his house and the death of his wife and daughter last Monday. The secretary feelingly thanked them for their invaluable assistance to him and their courage and heroism in entering the burning building at the risk of their lives. He then inquired with great particularity into the details of the fire, and when the part of the narrative relating to the discovery of Miss Tracy's body was reached, the secretary became very much affected.

Secretary Tracy is rapidly gaining in health, and will probably go on a trip down the Potomac on the Dispatch some day next week, to be absent several days. He expects to be at his desk in the navy department Monday morning.

THE DUKE MUST GO.

The Hearing of the Returned Duke of Orleans Postponed.

PARIS, February 10.—The duke of Orleans, arrested Friday for violation of decrees of exile, was arraigned before a tribunal of the Seine charged with a flagrant violation of the law banishing pretenders to the throne, from France. He asserted in reply that he came to France to fulfill his military duties and on his request for an adjournment of the case [illegible] a conference with his counsel the hearing was adjourned till Wednesday. The monarchist member of the chamber of deputies will interpollate the government as to its reasons for the arrest. Orders have been given to M. Constans, minister of the interior that the prisoner be treated with distinction, and the Duchess DeChatress, his aunt and Princess Marguerite his cousin, and their friends have been permitted to visit him at Conciergerie. The cabinet decided to enforce strictly the expulsion law against the duke.

THREE SCORE AND TEN.

The Martial and Gallant General Sherman's Birthday.

NEW YORK, February 10.—General W. T. Sherman had a large number of callers Saturday, and was warmly congratulated on his attainment to the age of seventy years. Many telegrams and letters, appropriate to the occasion, were also received, and he was deluged with flowers. The general gave a private dinner at his house tonight to a few of his most intimate friends, including Senator Sherman, Generals Schofield, Howard and Slocum, Tom Ewing, Mayors Grant and Chapin, C. M. Depew, Wager Swayne, Augustin Daly, J. J. Knox and J. H. Choate. The veteran commander was in good spirits, and chatted most entertainingly on all sorts of subjects, giving many interesting reminiscences of the stirring events through which he has passed.

COLLISION.

Smash-up in Cincinnati, But No One is Hurt.

CINCINNATI, O., February 10.—The Richmond accommodation on the Pathhandle railroad, running at the rate of twenty miles an hour, collided with an out-going freight between Lewis street and Torrence road. Heavy damage was done to both trains. No one was injured.

Wanted in Knox County, O.

SOUTH BRIDGE, MASS., February 10.—Geo. Fleming, alias "Will Morris," alias "The Pin," wanted for burglary and other crimes committed in Monroe county, Mich., and Knox county, O., has been arrested here. Fleming is a cigar-maker, and came here from Canada in December, and has remained here since working at his trade.

PANIC AT A BALL.

Fire at Paterson, N. J., Destroying $150,000.

PATERSON, N. J., February 10.—While a ball was in progress at Washington hall and the floor was thronged with dancers, smoke forced itself through the doors and windows and the appearance of a man who came running in shouting "fire" precipitated a panic. The whole crowd rushed madly for the doors. Luckily all escaped in safety though many women fainted and were carried out unconscious. The family of Janitor Smith, who occupied rooms over the hall were rescued with difficulty, Mrs. Smith having been overcome by smoke. Fire spread rapidly from hall to board of trade rooms, Burke Brothers, photograph gallery, Hills' confectionery store, Boyle Brothers, factory and Suttle's barn, in which was his fast mare, Lady Lonsdale, with a record of 2:30, and which was rescued in safety. All these buildings were damaged before the fire was gotten under control. Two military companies had armories in the hall building and a remarkable feature of the fire was a fusillade of exploding cartridges, ten thousand being stored in the armory. The loss by burning of Washington hall is put at a hundred and fifty thousand dollars, and of the other damaged buildings at a hundred thousand dollars more. Most of the latter were only partially insured.

GAS EXPLOSION.

ST. PAUL'S COAL GAS WORKS SUDDENLY LET GO

Without Any Apparent Reason—Two Men Are Instantly Killed, and Several Others Seriously and Probably Fatally Hurt.

ST. PAUL, February 10.—There was an explosion in the condenser room of the St. Paul gas works at about 6:30 p. m. There are two branches of the plant, one for the manufacture of coal gas, and the other for water gas. The accident occurred in the coal gas department. Joseph McMahon was instantly killed. Sam Desmond died after being removed. Martin Curran and Mike McMahon were wounded about the head and will probably die. Chris Kennedy, an old man of about sixty years, is badly wounded, and may not recover from the shock. James Simons was badly hurt. The damage is estimated at $40,000, with no insurance. No cause can be assigned for the accident.

A GREAT MISFORTUNE.

The Los Angeles River Changes Its Course, Causing Immense Loss.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., February 10.—Great damage has been done by the Los Angeles River. It has changed its course at almost a right angle, just south of the city limits, and after crossing the country for six miles empties into the San Gabriel river. The inundation covers a large area. A large number of orange, lemon, walnut and other orchards are almost ruined. Growing crops in its course are completely destroyed. The total damage in this locality is estimated at $75,000.

Water Receding at Portland.

PORTLAND, ORE., February 10.—The water is receding rapidly. The heaviest losses by the flood are W. W. Weidler, logs, $25,000; Smith Brothers & Company, mill, $20,000; Peneyer, mill, $25,000; Morrison street bridge, $10,000; Oregon county's stone bridge, $10,000; Oregon City woolen mills, $10,000; Electric Light Company, $10,000; J. F. Powers, $15,000; United States government boat, $7,000; Southern Pacific railroad, $15,000; Oregon City Lumber Company, $10,000.

No Further Damage in Pennsylvania Reported.

PITTSBURG, February 10. — No further damage from the storm has been reported. It is slightly colder and the rain has again given place to snow. Telegraphic service service is in bad shape, many wires being down, and business considerably delayed. The storm has not interfered so far with traffic on the railroads. All trains are on time, and no serious trouble is now anticipated.

Furious Storm and a Savage Sea.

NEW YORK, February 10.—There is a storm along the Jersey coast, and a thundering sea is biting out big chunks of the Long Branch bluff.

SCALDED TO DEATH.

Horrible Accident to an Imbecile Child at a State Institution.

COLUMBUS, February 10.—Friday Jennie Whitehead, of Hamilton, aged 17, an inmate of the state institution for feeble-minded youth, was given a bath and the water was so hot that she was scalded all over her person, and died from the injuries Saturday morning, lingering all the while in untold agony. The bath was given her by one of the larger and more intelligent inmates who assists in the institution, but given in violation of the rules which prohibits any inmate from drawing water or bathing inmates.

KIDNAPPING A SENATOR.

A Montana Sheriff Arrested on This Charge.

HELENA, MONT., February 10.—Sheriff Parker, while on his way to Helena with Senator Becker, was arrested at Bozeman on the charge of kidnapping the senator. He waived examination and was placed under bonds. Senator Becker is still at Bozeman with the sheriff, and unless a special train is secured cannot reach Helena until tomorrow.

MURDEROUS BURGLARS.

The House of Ransom Floyd Robbed and He and His Wife Shot.

WESTPORT, N. Y., February 10.—The house of Ransom Floyd was entered Friday night by burglars. Mr. and Mrs. Floyd were aroused and confronted by the intruders who shot Mrs. Floyd dead and mortally wounded her husband. They then escaped with three thousand dollars which Mr. Floyd had received in payment for a farm.

RUBE BURROWS LOCATED.

The Notorious Desperado Working on a Farm in Florida.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., February 10.—Rube Burrows, the noten Alabama outlaw, murderer and express robber, ons been positively located near Milton, Fla., where he has been working as a farm hand. Burrows recently became alarmed and fled to the woods, were he is now being pursued.

Sudden Death of a Prominent Citizen.

COLUMBUS, O., February 10.—George C. Mather, book-keeper for the Central Press Association, got up in the morning in perfect health. Half an hour afterward he was a corpse. Appoplexy was the cause. Mr. Mather was one of the best expert bookkeepers in the state, and leaves a wife but no children.

Randall's Acquittal.

GREENFIELD, MASS., February 10.—The jury in the case of Lincoln J. Randall, charged with having shot and killed his father, rendered a verdict of acquittal.

THE MINISTRY OF JOHN.

LESSON VII, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, FEB. 16.

Text of the Lesson, Luke iii, 7-22. Commit Verses 16, 17—Golden Text, Matt. iii, 2—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

John is supposed to have been now about 30 years of age. Verse 23 of this chapter informs us that Jesus was about that age when He began His public ministry. John was about six months older than Jesus, and probably preceded Him in His ministry about that time. The Levites were not to begin to serve about the tabernacle until they were 30 years old; this is stated just seven times in Num. iv, and may have been the reason why John and Jesus began their ministry at that age. All we know of the history of John's thirty years is summed up in two sentences: "He shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb," and "The child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, and was in the deserts till the day of his shewing unto Israel" (Luke i, 15-80).

7. "Then said He to the multitude that came forth to be baptized of Him." He had not come forth from the wilderness of His own accord, He did not run without being sent, for the word of God came unto Him in the wilderness (verse 2) and He came forth at His command.

"O generation of vipers! (R. V., ye offspring of vipers) who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?" Matt. iii, 7, says that he addressed these words to the many Pharisees and Sadducees who came to his baptism. They were the religious people of the day, fully described by Jesus in His eight woes in Matt. xxiii, and by the Spirit in Acts xxiii, 8. The religion of the former was all outward, to be seen of men, while their hearts were full of hypocrisy and iniquity (Matt. xxiii, 28); the latter denied the resurrection and that there were angels or spirits. Jesus called them by the same name as John, and told them they were on their way to hell (Matt. xxiii, 33). On another occasion He told them that they were children of the devil, the father of lies (John viii, 44).

8. "Bring forth, therefore, fruits worthy of repentance." They trusted in the fact that they were descendants of Abraham, and therefore the promises to him were sure to them; they did not see that in order to be true children of Abraham they must believe as he believed and live as he lived. They were like those in our day who think that, because they have been baptized in infancy and in due time confirmed, therefore they are Christians and sure of heaven, no matter how they live. To all such the word is, "If you have truly repented and turned to God, prove it by your works. Faith without works is dead" (Jas. ii, 20, 26).

9. "Every tree, therefore, which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire." Jesus used the very same words in His sermon on the mount (Matt. vii, 19), and taught the same truth in His parable of the barren fig tree (Luke xiii, 6-9).

10, 11. "The people (R. V., the multitudes) asked him, saying: What shall we do, then?" Having heard His words to the religious leaders, the common people ask what message He has for them. They made no boast of their goodness, did not display their religion, perhaps felt that they had none to speak of; they were the working people, and it required all their efforts to earn enough to keep body and soul together; but they had heard the cry to repent, for the kingdom was at hand; they had come to be baptized, and now how can they show their sincerity? The answer is, By doing good with just what they have. "He that hath, he that hath," let him do what he can with that to help those who have nothing, and thus prove the sincerity of his repentance. James says just the same thing in chap. ii, 15, 16; and John asks how the love of God can dwell in any one who has this world's goods and seeth his brother have need, yet shutteth up his bowels of compassion from him (I John iii, 17).

12, 13. "Then came also publicans to be baptized, and said unto him, Master, what shall we do?" These were the tax collectors, whose temptation, and perhaps custom, was to collect more than the regular tax, so that their own pockets might be well lined.

14. "And the soldiers likewise demanded of Him, saying, And what shall we do?" His answer to them is nearly in the words of Micah vi, 8: "Do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with thy God," and reminds us of Paul's words to Timothy: "Godliness with contentment is great gain; * * * having food and raiment let us be therewith content" (I Tim. vi, 6, 8). So they all got it just as they needed, and we can fancy the looks of each party as they swallowed their own medicine and then watched the others taking theirs.

15. "All men mused in their hearts of John, whether he were the Christ or not." Not since the days of Malachi had preaching like this been heard. Those who had read the prophets might truly say, He talks like Elijah and Micah. Some, knowing from Daniel that about this time the Messiah should appear, wondered in their hearts if this was the long promised Messiah.

16. "One mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose." He clearly gives them to understand that he is not the Christ. He said it in so many words: "I am not the Christ." He also said he was not Elijah, but simply a voice crying in the wilderness, "Make straight the way of the Lord" (John i, 19-23). He rejoiced to be heard and not seen, if only he might point them to the mightier than he.

17. "Whose fan is in His hand, and He will thoroughly purge His floor, and will gather His wheat into His garner; but the chaff He will burn with fire unquenchable." Had Israel received John as the herald of Christ, and received Christ as their Messiah, the kingdom then at hand would have come to the daughter of Zion, and all this been accomplished; but in Matt. xii, 30, 39-43, Jesus declares that this harvest will not be now till the end of this age; and the reason is found in Matt. xii, 14, where it is said that the Pharisees had determined to kill Him.

21. "Jesus also being baptized, and praying, the Heaven was opened." We step back now in the record to the great event in all John's baptizing. According to Matthew and Mark, it came to pass in those days that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee to Jordan unto John to be baptized of him. John at first refused, feeling unworthy to baptize such an one, but Jesus persuaded and John consented; then, as Jesus came up out of the water, the heavens were opened. Luke is the only one who records His praying at this time, and this is one of seven different occasions on which He is spoken of as praying. The others are in Luke vi, 12; ix, 28; xxiii, 34; Mark i, 35; Matt. xiv, 23; xxvi, 39. Just seven times, also in Scripture, are the heavens said to be opened; and it is always in reference to Christ or His church, either in humiliation or glory. The other places are Ezek. i, 1; John i, 51; Acts vii, 56; x, 11; Rev. iv, 1; xix, 11.

22. "And the Holy Ghost descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon Him." He is the true ark in whom alone the Spirit finds a perfect resting place, reminding us of Noah's dove returning to the ark, while the raven, unclean bird, could find a resting place on any dead carcass. He is the only refuge from coming judgment.

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage, bearing date the 16th day of January, A. D. 1884, made and executed by Jeremiah M. Burleson and Julia E. Burleson, his wife, of the first part, to Enoch G. Cook, of Tecumseh, Michigan, of the second part, which mortgage was on the 17th day of January, A. D., 1884, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for the county of Lenawee, Michigan, in Liber 109 of Mortgages, on page 591, and which said mortgage was afterwards on the 27th day of May, A. D. 1885, duly assigned by the said Enoch G. Cook to Moses Bartlett, which deed of assignment was on the 20th day of January, A. D., 1890, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee county aforesaid, in Liber 118 of Mortgages, on page 689; by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative. And whereas there is at this date claimed to be due and unpaid, as principal and interest on the said mortgage, the sum of One Thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty-one and 12-100 Dollars ($1751.12) and no proceedings have been instituted at law or in equity to collect the same. Notice is therefore hereby given that by virtue of said power of sale, and the statutes of the State of Michigan, in such case made and provided, for the purpose of realizing the money now, as aforesaid, due and owing on said mortgage, together with interest to accrue thereon, and the costs and charges of this foreclosure including an attorney fee of Fifty-five Dollars, as provided by law and stipulated for in said mortgage, I shall on the 21st day of April, A. D. 1890, at the east front door of the court house in the city of Adrian, in said county of Lenawee, (that being the place where the circuit court for said county is holden) sell at public vendue to the highest bidder, all those parcels of land situate in the township of Macon, in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan known and described as follows, to wit: The east half of the northwest quarter of section five (5) town five (5), south, of range five (5) east. Also all that part of the east half of the southwest quarter of said section five (5), town five (5) south, of range five (5) east, bounded as follows: Beginning at the intersection of the Tecumseh and Saline road, so called, with the east line of the southwest quarter of said section five (5); thence running southwesterly in center of said road six (6) rods and twelve (12) links; thence north parallel with east line of said southwest quarter of section five (5) to the north line of said southwest quarter of section five (5); thence east to northeast corner of said southwest quarter of section five (5), thence south to the place of beginning, containing eighty-one acres of land, more or less.

Dated Jan. 23d, 1890.

Tecumseh Herald

CLEOPATRA.

Being an Account of the Fall and Vengeance of Harmachis, the Royal Egyptian,

Swiftly the answer came. For in the silence I heard the sound of the shaken sistra heralding the coming of the Glory. Then at the far end of the chamber grew the semblance of the horned moon, gleaming faintly in the darkness, and 'twixt the golden horns rested the small dark cloud, is and out whereof the fiery serpent climbed.

And my knees waxed loose in the presence of the Glory, and I sank down before it.

Then spake the small, sweet voice within the cloud:

"Harmachis, who was my servant and my son, I have heard thy prayers and the summons that thou hast dared to utter, which on the lips of one with whom I have communed, hath power to draw me from the Uttermost. No more, Harmachis, may we be one in the bond of love divine, for me hast thou put away of thine own act. Therefore, after this long silence I come, Harmachis, clothed in terrors, and perchance, ready for vengeance; for not lightly can Isis be drawn from the halls of her Divinity."

"Smite, Goddess!" I answered. "Smite, and give me over to those who wreak Thy vengeance; for no longer can I bear the burden of my woe!"

"And if thou canst not bear thy burden here, upon this earth," came the soft reply, "how then shalt thou bear the greater burden that shall be laid upon thee there, coming defiled and yet unpurified into my divn realm of death, that is Life and Change unending? Nay, Harmachis, I smite not, for not all am I wroth that thou hast dared to utter the awful word which calls me down to thee. Hearken, Harmachis; I praise not, I reproach not, for I am the Minister of reward and punishment and the Executor of Decrees; and if I give, I give in silence; any if I smite, in silence do I smite. Therefore, naught will I add to thy burden by the weight of heavy words, though through thee it has come to pass that soon shall Isis, the Mystery, be but a memory in Egypt. Thou hast sinned, and heavy shall be thy punishment, as I did warn thee, both in the flesh and in my kingdom of Amenti. But I told thee that there is a road of repentance, and surely thy feet are set thereon, and therein must thou walk with a humble heart, eating of the bread of bitterness, till such time as thy doom be measured."

"Have I, then, no hope, O Holy One?"

"That which is done, Harmachis, is done, nor can its issues be altered. Khem shall no more be free till all its temples are as the desert dust; strange people shall, from age to age, hold her hostage and in bonds; new religions shall arise and wither within the shadows of her pyramids, for to every world, race and age the countenances of the Gods are changed. This is the tree that shall spring from thy seed of sin, Harmachis, and from the sin of those who tempted thee!"

"Alas! I am undone!" I cried.

"Yea, thou art undone; and yet shall this be given to thee: thy destroyer shalt thou destroy, for so, in the purpose of my justice, is it ordained. When the sign comes to thee, arise, go to Cleopatra, and in such manner as I shall put into thy heart do Heaven's vengeance on her! And now for thyself one word, for thou hast put Me from thee, Harmachis; and no more shall I come face to face with thee till, cycles hence, the last fruit of thy sin hath ceased to be upon this earth! Yet, through the vastness of the unnumbered years, remember thou this: that love Divine is love eternal, which can not be extinguished, though everlastingly it be estranged. Repent, my servant; repent and do well while there is yet time, that at the dim end of ages once more thou mayest be gathered unto Me. Still, Harmachis, though thou seest Me not; still, when the very name by which thou knowest Me has become a meaningless mystery to those who shall be after thee; still, I, whose hours are eternal—I, who have watched Universes wither, wane, and, 'neath the breath of Time, melt into nothingness; again, to gather, and, reborn, thread the vast maze of space—still, I say, shall I companion thee. Wherever thou goest, in whatever form of life thou livest, there shall I be! Art thou wafted to the farthest star, art thou buried in Amenti's lowest deep, in lives, in deaths, in sleeps, in wakings, in remembrances, in oblivions, in all the fevers of the outer Life, in all the changes of the Spirit—still, if thou wilt atone and forget Me no more, I shall be with thee, waiting thine hour of redemption. For this is the nature of the love Divine, wherewith It loves that which doth partake of its divinity and hath once by the holy tie been bound to it. Judge then, Harmachis; was it well to put this from thee to win the prize of earthly woman? And, now, dare not again to utter the Word of Power till these things be done! Harmachis, for this season, fare thee well."

As the last note of the sweet voice died away, the fiery snake climbed into the heart of the cloud. Now the cloud rolled from the horns of light, and was gathering into the blackness. The vision of the crescent moon grew dim and vanished. Then as the Goddess passed, once more came the faint and dreadful music of the shaken sistra, and all was still.

I hid my face in my robe and, even then, though my outstretched hand could touch the chill corpse of that father who had died cursing me, I felt hope come back into my heart, knowing that I was not altogether lost nor utterly rejected of Her whom I had forsaken, but whom yet I loved. And then weariness overpowered me, and I slept.

I woke, the faint lights of dawn were creeping from the opening in the roof. Ghastly they lay upon the shadowy sculptured walls and ghastly upon the dead face and long white beard of my father, the gathered to Osiris. I started up, remembering all things, and wondering in my heart what I should do, and as I rose I heard a faint footfall creeping down the passage of the names of the Pharaohs.

"La! la! la!" mumbled a voice that I knew for the voice of the old wife, Atoua. "Why, 'tis dark as the House of the Dead! The holy ones who built this Temple loved not the blessed sun, however much they worshiped him. Now, where's the curtain?"

Presently it was drawn, and Atoua entered, a stick in one hand and in the other a basket. Her face was somewhat more wrinkled and her scanty locks were somewhat more white than aforetime, but for the rest she was as she had ever been. She stood and peered around with her sharp black eyes, for because of the shadows as yet naught could she see.

"Now where is he?" she muttered. "Osiris—glory to his name—send that he has not wandered in the night, and he blind! Alack! that I could not return before the dark. Alack! and alack! what times have we fallen on when the Holy High Priest and the Governor, by descent of Abouthis, is left with one aged crone to minister to his infirmity! O Harmachis, my poor boy, thou hast laid trouble at our doors! Why, what's this? Surely he sleeps not, there upon the ground!—'twill be his death! Prince! Holy Father! Amenemhat! awake, arise!" and she hobbled towards the corpse. "Why, how is it? By Him who sleeps he's dead! untended and alone—dead! dead!" and she sent her long wail of grief ringing up the sculptured walls.

"Hush! woman; be still!" I said, gliding from the shadows.

"Oh, what art thou!" she cried, casting down her basket. "Wicked man, hast thou murdered this holy One, the only holy One in Egypt? Surely the curse will fall on thee, for though the Gods do seem to have forsaken us now in our hour of trial, yet is their arm long, and certainly they will be avenged on him who hath slain their anointed!"

"Look on me, Atoua," I cried.

"Look! ay, I look—thou wicked wanderer who hast dared this cruel deed! Harmachis is a traitor and lost far away, and Amenemhat, his holy father, is murdered, and now I'm all alone without kith or kin." I gave them for him. I gave them for Harmachis, the traitor! Come, slay me also, thou wicked one."

I took a step toward her, and she, thinking that I was about to smite her, cried out in fear:

"Nay, good Sir, spare me! Eighty and six, by the holy Ones, eighty and six, come next flood of Nile, and yet would I not die, though Osiris is merciful to the old who served him! Come no nearer—help! help! help!"

"Thou fool, be silent," I said; "knowest thou me not!"

"Know thee!—can I know every wandering boatman to whom Sebek grants to earn a livelihood till Typhon claims his own! And yet—why, 'tis strange—that changed countenance!—that scar!—that stumbling gait! 'Tis thou, Harmachis!—'tis thou, oh, my boy! Art come back to glad mine old eyes! I hoped thee dead! Let me kiss thee!—nay, I forgot. Harmachis is a traitor, ay, and a murderer! Here lies the holy Amenemhat, murdered by the traitor, Harmachis! Get thee gone! I'll have none of traitors and of parricides! Get thee to thy wanton!—'tis not thou whom I did nurse."

"Peace, woman! peace! I slew not my father—he died, alas! even in my arms!"

"Ay, surely, and cursing thee, Harmachis! Thou hast given death to him who gave thee life! La! la! I am old, and I've seen many a trouble; but this is the heaviest! I never like the looks of mummies; but I would I were one this hour! Get thee gone, I pray thee!"

"Old nurse, reproach me not!—have I not enough to bear!"

"Ah, true, true! I did forget! Well; and what is thy sin? A woman was thy bane, as women have been to those before thee, and shall be to those after thee. And what a woman! La! la! I saw her, a beauty such as never was—an arrow pointed by the evil Gods for destruction! And thou, a young man bred as a priest—an ill training—a very ill training! 'Twas no fair match. Who can wonder that she mastered thee? Come, Harmachis; let me kiss thee! It is not for a woman to be hard upon a man because he loved our sex too much. Why, that is but nature; and Nature knows her business, else had she made us otherwise. But this is an evil case. Knowest thou that this Macedonian Queen of thine hath seized the Temple lands and revenues, and driven away the Priests—all, save the holy Amenemhat, who lies here, and whom she left, I know not why; ay, and caused the worship of the Gods to cease within these walls. Well, he's gone!—he's gone! and indeed he is better with Osiris, for his life was a sore burden to him. And hark thou, Harmachis: he hath not left thee empty handed; for as the plot failed, he gathered all his wealth, and it is large, and hid it—where, I can show thee—and thine it is by right of descent."

"Talk not to me of wealth, Atoua. Where shall I go and how shall I hide my shame?"

"Ah! true, true; here mayst thou not abide, for if they found thee, surely they would put thee to the dreadful death—ay, even to the death by the waxen cloth. Nay, I will hide thee, and, when the funeral rites of the holy Amenemhat have been performed, we will fly hence, and cover us from the eyes of men till these sorrows are forgotten. Lal lal it is a sad world, and full of trouble as the Nile mud is of beetles. Come, Harmachis, come."

CHAPTER XXVI.

ON THE LIFE OF HIM WHO WAS NAMED THE LEARNED OLYMPUS, IN THE TOMB OF THE HARPERS THAT IS BY TAPE; OF HIS COUNSEL TO CLEOPATRA; OF THE MESSAGE OF CHARMION; AND OF THE PASSING OF OLYMPUS DOWN TO ALEXANDRIA.

THESE things then came to pass. For eighty days was I hidden of the old wife, Atoua, while the body of the Prince, my father, was made ready for burial by those skilled in the arts of embalming. And when at last all things were done in order, I crept from my hiding place and made offerings to the spirit of my father, and placing lotus flowers on his breast, went thence sorrowing. And on the following day, from where I lay hid I saw the priests of the Temple of Osiris and of the holy Shrine of Isis come forth, and in slow procession bear his painted coffin to the sacred lake and lay it 'neath the funeral tent in the consecrated boat. I saw them celebrate the symbol of the trial of the dead and name him above all men just, and then bear him thence to lay him by his wife, my mother, in the deep and splendid tomb that he had builded near to the resting place of the most holy Osiris, where, notwithstanding my sins, I, too, hope to sleep ere long. And when all these things were done and the deep tomb sealed, the wealth of my father having been removed from the hidden treasury and placed in safety, with the old wife, Atoua, I fled, disguised, up the Nile till we came to Tape (Thebes), and here in this great city I lay awhile, till a place could be found where I should hide myself.

And such a place I found. For to the north of the great city are hills brown and rugged, and desert valleys blasted of the sun, and in this place of desolation the Divine Pharaohs, my forefathers, hollowed out their tombs in the solid rock, whereof the most part are lost to this day, so cunningly have they been hidden. But some are open, for the accursed Persians and other thieves broke into them in search of treasure. And one night—for by night only did I leave my hiding place—just as the dawn was breaking on the mountain tops, I wandered alone in this sad Valley of Death, like to which there is no other, and presently came to the mouth of a tomb hidden amid great rocks, which hereafter I knew for the place of the burying of the Divine Rameses, the third of that name, now long gathered to Osiris. And by the faint light of the dawn creeping through the entrance I saw that it was spacious, and that within were chambers. On the following night, therefore, I returned, bearing lights, with Atoua, my nurse, who ever ministered faithfully to me as when I was little and without discretion. And we searched the mighty tomb and came to the great hall of the sarcophagus of granite, wherein sleeps the divine Rameses, and saw the mystic paintings on the walls—the symbol of the Snake unending, the symbol of Ra (the sun), resting upon the Scarabæus, the symbol of Ra resting upon Nout, the symbol of the Headless Men, and many others whereof, being initiated, well I read the mysteries. And opening from the long descending passage I found chambers whereon were paintings beautiful to beheld, and of all manner of things. For beneath each chamber is entombed the master of the craft whereof the paintings tell, he who was the chief of the servants of the craft in the house of the divine Rameses. And on the walls of the last chamber—on the left-hand side, looking toward the hall of the sarcophagus—are paintings exceeding beautiful, and two blind Harpers playing upon their bent harps even before the God Mou; and beneath the floor these Harpers, who harp no more, are soft at sleep. Here, then, in this gloomy place, even in the tomb of the Harpers and the company of the dead, I took up my abode; and here for eight long years did I work out my penance and make atonement for my sin. But Atoua, because she loved to be near the light, abode in the chamber of the Boats—that is, the first chamber on the right-hand side of the gallery looking toward the hall of the Sarcophagus.

And this was the manner of my life. On every second day the old wife, Atoua, went forth and brought from the city water and such food as is necessary to keep the life from failing, and also tapers made from fat. And one hour at the time of sunrise and one hour at the time of sunset did I go forth also to wander in the valley for my health's sake and to save my sight from failing in the great darkness of the tomb. But the other hours of the day and night, save when I climbed the mountain to watch the course of the stars, I spent in prayer and meditation and sleep, till the cloud of sin lifted from my heart and once more I drew near to the Gods, though with Isis, my heavenly Mother, I might speak no more. And exceeding wise I grew also, pondering on all the mysteries whereto I held the key. For abstinence and prayer and sorrowful solitude wore away the grossness of my flesh, and with the eyes of the Spirit I learned to look deep into the heart of things till the joy of Wisdom fell like dew upon my soul.

Soon was the rumor wafted about the city that a certain holy man named Olympus abode in solitude in the tombs of the awful Valley of the Dead; and hither came people bearing sick that I might cure them. And I gave my mind to the study of simples, wherein Atoua instructed me; and by lore and the weight of thought I gained great skill in medicine and healed many sick. And thus ever, as time went on, my fame was noised abroad; and it was said that I was also a magician, and that in the tombs I had commune with the spirits of the dead. And this, indeed, I did—though it is not lawful for me to speak of these matters. Thus, then, it came to pass that no more need Atoua go forth to seek food and water, for the people brought it—more than was needed, for no fee would I receive. Now, at first, fearing lest some might in the hermit Olympus know the lost Harmachis, I would only meet those who came in the darkness of the tomb. But afterward, when I learned how through all the land 'twas held that Harmachis was certainly no more, I came forth and sat in the mouth of the tomb and ministered to the sick, and at times calculated nativities for the great. And thus my fame grew continually, till at length folk journeyed even from Memfi and Alexandria to visit me; and from them I learned how Antony had left Cleopatra for awhile, and, Fulvia being dead, had married Octavia, the sister of Cæsar. Many other things I learned also.

And in the second year this I did: I dispatched the old wife, Atoua, disguised as a seller of simples, to Alexandria, bidding her seek out Charmion, and, if yet she found her faithful, reveal to her the secret of my way of life. So she went, and in the fifth month from her sailing returned, bearing Charmion's greetings and a token. And she told me that she had found means to see Charmion, and, in talk, had let fall the name of Harmachis, speaking of me as one dead; whereat Charmion, unable to control her grief, wept aloud. Then, reading her heart—for the old wife was very clever, and held the key of knowledge—she told her that Harmachis yet lived, and sent her greetings. Thereupon Charmion wept yet more with joy, and kissed the old wife, and made her gifts, bidding her tell me that ever she kept her vow, and waited for my coming and the hour of vengeance. So, having learned many secrets, Atoua returned again to Tape.

And in the following year came messengers to me from Cleopatra, bearing a sealed roll and great gifts. I opened the roll and read therein:

"Cleopatra to Olympus, the learned Egyptian who dwelleth in the Valley of Death by Tape!

"The fame of thy renown, O learned Olympus, hath reached our ears. Tell thou, then, this to us, and if thou tellest aright greater honor and wealth shalt thou have than any in Egypt. How shall we win back the love of noble Antony, who is bewitched of cunning Octavia and tarries long from us?"

And herein I saw the hand of Charmion, who had made known my renown to Cleopatra.

All that night I took counsel with my wisdom, and on the morrow wrote my answer as it was put into my heart to the destruction of Cleopatra and of Antony. And thus I wrote:

"Olympus the Egyptian to Cleopatra, the Queen!

"Go forth into Syria with one who shall be sent to lead thee; thus shalt thou win Antony to thy arms again, and with him gifts more great than thou canst dream."

And with this letter I dismissed the messengers, bidding them share the presents sent by Cleopatra among their company.

So they went wondering.

But Cleopatra, seizing on the advice to which her passion prompted her, departed straightway with Fonteius Capito into Syria; and there the thing came about as I had foretold, for Antony was subdued of her and gave her the greater part of Cilicia, the ocean shore of Arabia Nabathæa, the balm-bearing provinces of Judæa, the provinces of Phœnicia, the province of Cœlo-Syria, the rich Isle of Cyprus, and all the library of Pergamus. And to the twin children that, with the son of Ptolemy, Cleopatra had borne to Antony, did he impiously give the names of "Kings, the Children of Kings"—of Alexander Helios, as the Greeks name Ra (the sun), and of Cleopatra Selene, the long-winged (the moon).

These things, then, came to pass.

Now, on her return to Alexandria Cleopatra sent me great gifts, of which I would have none, and prayed me, the learned Olympus, to come to her at Alexandria; but it was not yet time, and I would not. But thereafter did she and Antony send many times to me for counsel, and ever I counseled them to their ruin, nor did my prophecies fail.

Thus the long years rolled away, and I, the Hermit Olympus, the dweller in a tomb, the eater of bread and the drinker of water, became by strength of the wisdom that was given me of the avenging Power, once more great in Khem. For ever I grew wiser as I trampled the desires of the flesh beneath my feet and turned my eyes to Heaven.

At length eight full years were accomplished. The war with the Parthians had come and gone, and Artavasdes, King of Armenia, had been led in triumph through the streets of Alexandria. Cleopatra had visited Samos and Athens; and, by her counseling, the noble Octavia had been driven, like some discarded concubine, from the house of Antony at Rome. And now, at the last, was the measure of the folly of Antony full even to the brim. For this master of the world had no longer the good gift of reason—in Cleopatra was he lost, even as I had been lost. And therefore, in the event, did Octavianus declare war against him.

And as I slept at night in the chamber of the Harpers, in the tomb of Pharaoh that is by Tape, there came to me a vision of my father, the aged Amenemhat, and he stood over me, leaning on his staff, and spoke, saying:

"Arise, my son!—the hour of vengeance is at hand! Thy plots have not failed; thy prayers have been heard. By the bidding of the Gods, as she sat in her galley at the fight of Actium, I filled the heart of Cleopatra with fears, so that she fled with all her fleet. Now is the strength of Antony broken on the sea. Go forth, and even as shall be thy mind, so do thou."

In the morning I awoke, wondering, and went to the mouth of the tomb; and there, coming up the valley, I saw the messengers of Cleopatra, and with them a Roman guard.

"What will ye with me now?" I asked sternly.

"This is the message of the Queen and of great Antony," answered the Captain, bowing low before me, for I was much feared of all men. "The Queen doth command thy presence at Alexandria. Many times hath she sent, and thou wouldst not come; now doth she bid thee to come, and that swiftly, for she hath need of thy counsel."

"And if I say Nay, soldier, what then?"

"These are my orders, most holy Olympus: that by force I bring thee."

I laughed aloud. "By force, thou fool! Use not such talk, lest I smite thee where thou art. Know, then, I can kill as well as cure!"

"Pardon, I beseech!" he answered, shrinking. "I say but those things that I am bid."

"Well, I know it, Captain. Fear not, I come."

So on that very day I departed, together with the aged Atoua. Ay, I went as secretly as I had come; and the tomb of the divine Rameses knew me no more. And with me I took all the treasure of my father, Amenemhat, for I was not minded to go to Alexandria empty-handed, and as a suppliant; but rather as a man of much wealth and condition. Now, as I went, I learned that Antony, following Cleopatra, had, indeed, fled from Actium, and knew that the end drew nigh. For this and many other things had I foreseen in the darkness at Tape, and planned to bring about.

Thus, then, I came to Alexandria, and entered into a house which had been made ready for me at the palace gates.

And that very night came Charmion unto me—Charmion, whom for nine long years I had not seen.

CHAPTER XXVII.

MEETING OF CHARMION WITH THE LEARNED OLYMPUS; HER SPEECH WITH HIM; COMING OF OLYMPUS INTO THE PREESENCE OF CLEOPATRA; THE COMMANDS OF CLEOPATRA.

LAD in my plain dark robe, I sat in the guest chamber of the house that had been made ready for me. In a carven, lion-footed chair I sat, and looked upon the swinging lamps of scented oil, the pictured tapestries, the rich Syrian rugs—and, amid all this luxury, bethought me of the tomb of the Harpers that is at Tape, and of the nine long years of dark loneliness and preparation. I sat, and crouched upon a rug, nigh to the door, lay the aged Atoua. White was her hair as snow, and shriveled with age the wrinkled countenance of the woman who, when all deserted me, had yet clung to me, in her great love forgetting my great sins. Nine years! nine long years! and now, once again, I set my foot in Alexandria! Once again in the appointed circle of things I came forth from the solitude of preparation to be a fate to Cleopatra; and this second time I came not forth to fail. And yet how changed the circumstance! I was out of the story; my part now was but the part of the sword in the hand of Justice; no more might I hope to make Egypt free and great and sit upon my lawful throne. Khem was lost, and lost was I, Harmachis. In the rush and turmoil of events the great plot, whereof I had been the pivot, was covered up and forgotten; scarce did a memory of it remain. The curtain of dark night was closing in upon the history of my ancient race; its very Gods were tottering to their fall; already could I, in the spirit, hear the shriek of the Roman eagles as they flapped their wings above the furthest banks of the Sihor. Presently I roused myself and bade Atoua go search a mirror and bring it to me, that I might look therein.

And this I saw: a face shrunken and pallid whereon no smile came; great eyes grown wan with gazing into darkness looking out, beneath the shaven head, emptily as the hollow eye-pits of the skull; a wizened, halting form wasted by abstinence, sorrow and prayer; a long, white beard of iron gray; thin, blue-veined hands that ever trembled like a leaf; bowed shoulders and feebled limbs. Time and grief had done their work, indeed; scarce could I think myself the same as when, the Royal Harmachis—in all the splendor of my strength and youthful beauty—I first had looked upon the woman's loveliness that did destroy me. And yet within me burned the same fire as of yore; yet I was not changed, for time and grief had no power to alter the immortal spirit of man. Seasons may come and go; Hope, like a bird, may fly away; Passion may break its wings against the iron bars of Fate; illusions may crumble as the cloudy towers of sunset fame; Faith, as running water, may slip from 'neath our feet; Solitude may stretch itself around us like the measureless desert sand; Old Age may creep as the gathering night over our bowed heads grown hoary in their shame; yea, bound to Fortune's wheel, we may taste of every turn of chance—now rule as Kings, now serve as slaves; now love, now hate; now prosper and now perish. But still, through all, we are the same; for this is the marvel of Identity.

And as I sat and thought these things in bitterness, there came a knocking at the door.

"Open, Atoua!" I said.

She rose and did my bidding; and a woman entered, clad in the Grecian robes. It was Charmion, still beautiful as of old, but sad-faced now and very sweet to see, with a patient fire slumbering in her dove-cast eye.

She entered unattended; and, speaking no word, the old wife pointed to where I sat, and went.

"Old man," she said, addressing me, "lead me to the learned Olympus. I come upon the Queen's business."

I rose, and, lifting my head, looked upon her. She gazed, and gave a little cry.

"Surely," she whispered, glancing round, "surely thou art not that—" And she paused.

AROUND THE COUNTY.

A nice little war is blossoming forth over the Hillsdale postoffice.

Gen. Humphrey's commission as postmaster of Adrian was issued Jan. 30th.

Hudson expects to have several new first-class residences before the year 1891 arrives.

The Farmers' Institute at Brooklyn last week was well attended and a fine program was presented.

The Cambridge dancing club will give a Washington's birthday party on Friday evening, Feb. 21st.

Twenty-five physicians outside of Hillsdale attended the funeral of the late Dr. Whelan of that city.

Hon. M. T. Cole of Palmyra, it is said, has his weather eye on the nomination for State Senator in this County next fall.

Miss E. Cora DePuy has an entertaining little sketch in "Santa Claus," the new magazine for boys and girls, of Jan. 18th.

A man lives in Seneca township who has shaved himself sixty-one years, once each week, excepting three times. For fifty-six years he has never shaved on Sunday.

The Union School building at Dundee narrowly escaped destruction last week. A can of phosporus burst in the chemical room, which started a lively conflagration. Damage about fifty dollars.

County Treasurer Moran says township treasurers are rather delinquent in settling taxes with him this year. Only six or seven thus far have done so, when in former years nearly all taxes were paid at this time.

The Blissfield Advance says: If the Republican members of Congress know what they are about, they will get to work without any further loss of time. If they expect to win next fall, the outlook to-day must be changed materially.

Supt. of Public Instruction Estabrook has designated the persons whom he wishes to act as official visitors to the various Michigan colleges during the present year; among them is Jas. Schermerhorn, of Hudson, to the Michigan Military Academy.

The Free Press report of the Farmers' institute was so good that the Morenci Observer stole it, and printed it verbatim. Enterprise is a great feature of journalism. Did the Observer know that Stearns wrote that report?—Adrian Press.

E. W. Freese and wife returned home Saturday last, having visited in Montana, Washington Territory, British Columbia, California, Colorado, Nevada, Utah and Illinois, and traveled 1400 miles on the Pacific coast, the whole route amounting to about 9,500 miles.—Clinton Local.

Miss Potter's physiological class made a post mortem examination of a cat, in the high school, Wednesday forenoon. It was found that the feline had died of a severe attack of the class, superinduced by scientific investigation, and eventually "carried off" by a small boy.—Hudson Gazette.

Evangelist Sutherland is still laboring at the Congregational church. His forceful style of speaking and his power to quote Scripture are so attractive that the church is crowded at each meeting. Many have risen for prayers under the spell of his earnest exhortations.—Morenci Observer.

Twenty-six arc electric lights have been subscribed for at Tecumseh, and a number of citizens who prefer the incandescent have each agreed to take as many of the latter as an arc light would cost. The county seat cannot much longer point the finger of scorn at the big north village.—Adrian Press.

A count vote for beauty was taken at the Tecumseh M. E. social last week, at which Miss Ella Jackson was found to be the fairest lady; and Bill Ross the loveliest thing in pants, thereby incurring the mortal enmity of Scove Stacy. Still, Bill couldn't help his looks.—Adrian Press.

The vehicles dispósed of at the Carter sale, Monday, brought very fair figures for an assignee's sale. Bobs were knocked down at $21 and $22, a canopy-top surrey sold for $85, the covered single carriages brought as high as $70. The receipts of the sale were not far from $500.—Hudson Gazette.

The suit of the People vs. Wm. Montgomery is to be tried in the Lenawee circuit court next Tuesday. It grows out of a complaint made by Myron Hyslop, the charge being keeping open on Sunday. Unusual interest is centered in the trial, as there has been considerable talk about the case, and the better part of the community would like to see a conviction.—Hudson Post.

A. C. Hodges wishes to state that our item last week regarding an attempt at suicide was entirely untrue. He had for a long time been in the habit of taking laudanum, for neuralgia, and on the day in question took not to exceed fifteen drops, an ordinary dose. He had the grippe and the drug quieted the pain. The next he knew Dr. Coffin had been called in, and gave him an emetic. There was no attempt at suicide to begin with, and certainly no second attempt.—Hudson Post.

Gov. Luce delivered an address Tuesday at the Court House in Caro in behalf of the Patrons of Industry and the farmers of Tuscola County. His whole address was simply a claim that the farmers are in the condition that they are in to-day simply because they have not any representative farmers in Congress. He admitted frankly that trusts and corporations and syndicates are some of the prime causes of the depression of business, and admitted the closeness and hardness of the times among the farmers of this country, but he did not enlighten the farmers, or give them any idea how the people can relieve themselves of the depression in business at all, but simply advised them to organize and fight the trusts, monopolies and corporations.

Is the Blissfield Advance going back on the governor whom it helped to elect? The above extract from the Advance looks that way.

Brainard's Musical World.

The February number of this ever welcome monthly has arrived, and is as usual very attractive, containing besides an immense amount of valuable reading matter, portraits of noted musicians, etc., the following elegant new music: "The Dimple in Her Cheek," an attractive song by Wilson G. Smith; "In the Chimney Corner," by F. H. Cowen; "Forest Ramble," one of R. E. Heminges' charming piano pieces; "Persian Princess Waltz," by Geo. Schleiffarth, which is sure to delight young players, and "Mosaics," by Wilson G. Smith. The Musical World and a copy of "The Musicians' Guide" (a volume of 200 papes), containing a vast amount of musical information and choice new music, will both be mailed free to any address upon receipt of eight two-cent stamps to pay postage.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly deriye from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

By an arrangement just completed with "The Voice" newspaper, we can furnish the HERALD and the Voice one year for $2.00, and the magnificent premium picture "The Angelus" will come with the Voice without extra charge. All who wish to take a prohibition paper should accept this offer at once. This picture is in 14 oil colors, and is one of the finest reproductions ever issued.

"MARK TWAIN'S new book, "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," is creating a stir in literary circles and adds greatly to the reputation of the great humorist. It is a keen and powerful satire on English nobility and royalty and will be greatly relished by every American. It is replete with rich humor and ludicrous situations enforced by 300 characteristic drawings by Dan Beard. The book is sold only by subscription, and agents are wanted by the publishers. R. S. PEALE & Co., Chicago, Ill.

THE HERALD FOR 1890.

On the 25th day of May last the HERALD entered upon the fortieth year of its publication. The 15th day of November last completed fifteen years under its present management, and we can truthfully say that the paper never had more friends or truer ones in Northern Lenawee than it has today. But, like Cæsar, we are ambitious. We aim for a larger list and a wider field to swing in, and our terms for 1890 have been adjusted with that purpose in view.

OFFER NO. ONE.

We have made arrangements with that wide awake illustrated farm magazine, the American Farmer, published at Fort Wayne, Ind., and read by nearly 200,000 farmers, by which that great publication will be mailed direct to the address of any of our subscribers who will pay up all arrearages and a year in advance. The subscription price of the American Farmer is $1.00 per year. It costs you nothing. The two papers at our full rate of $1.50 per year.

OFFER NO. TWO.

The modern magazine may be taken as embodying the best literature of the world, as the magazine editor pays the highest prices to novelists, scientists, statesmen, soldiers and even kings and princes for the best they can furnish in the literary line.

You can obtain the Cosmopolitan, which gives you in a year nearly fourteen hundred pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including six hundred pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point of interest and execution at its regular price, only $2 50, and the HERALD free.

OFFER NO. THREE.

Ropp's Commercial Calculator is a practical arithmetic for practical purposes. It contains a large variety of useful, accurate and convenient tables, together with simple, short and practical methods for rapid calculations. Any subscriber paying arrearages and one year in advance, or any new subscriber paying one year in advance at full rates, $1.50 per year, will receive a copy of this book free.

OFFER NO. FOUR.

The tendency of the times is to lower prices. We offer a liberal reduction in rates for the coming year. We have adopted both a cash and a credit rate. You can pay your money and take your choice. We will furnish the HERALD alone

WITHIN LENAWEE COUNTY
One year, cash in advance, for	$1.10
If paid after thirty days,	1.25
If paid after three months,	1.50
BEYOND LENAWEE COUNTY
One year, cash in advance,	$1.25
If paid after thirty days,	1.50

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE, with its varied and excellent contents, is a library in itself.

It was indeed a happy thought to print an entire novel in each number.

Not a short novelette, but a long story such as you would have to get in book form and pay from one dollar to one dollar and a half for.

Not only that, but with each number you get an abundance of other contributions, which gives you a good magazine besides the novel.

The ringing blows which have been struck on the gateway of popular favor, have resounded throughout the entire land, and to-day Lippincott's Magazine stands in the front rank of monthly publications, and is the most widely-read-and-talked-of publication of its kind in the world. For full descriptive circulars, address

ESTATE OF NATHAN MORSE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court, for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Tuesday, the 11th day of February, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

Present Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Nathan Morse, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Frederick B. Wood and James W. Patterson, executors of the last will and testament and upon the estate of said deceased, alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased and the expenses of administration thus far incurred have been fully paid, and that they are now ready to render their first administration account, and praying that said account may be allowed, and that the funds of said estate so far as collected be by an order of this court distributed to the parties entitled thereto under the terms of said will, and for such other order and decree as to this court shall seem proper.

It is ordered, That Monday, the 10th day of March next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said Petitioners should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioners give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee for three successive weeks, previous to said day of hearing.

Frank Rose, who has been working for some railroad out of Toledo for a few weeks, has returned to Britton.

John Bechtold, better known as John the Shoemaker, is suffering from an attack of rheumatism and is not able to work.

Mrs. E. W. Osgood is having the la grippe at this late day. She says she thought she would take what was left, but there's too much even now.

Master Burt Gillen is wrestling with the croup and having quite a tussle, but at present is getting the best of it and we hope will soon be well again.

Joseph Exelby is under the weather and can't work. What's the matter with making him mayor of the city? He could attend to that while convalescing.

Irv. Osborn has been doing some ditching in the north part of town, on his own account, and has succeeded in drying up two or three malaria breeding mud-holes.

Dave Sloan found the corner too small for his growing meat business and so bought one of John Beasley's brick stores, into which he intends to move in the near future.

The friends of Rev. James Wright will give him their annual donotion Thursday evening, Feb. 27th, 1890, at the Christian Church, Britton. Come and enjoy a good time. By order of Com.

Sol. Beevers arrived a day or two ago from the West with a car of fine horses. They were unloaded into the stock yard in the night and it was discovered in the morning that they had all started back to Kansas, but were overhauled and captured during the day.

Where, Oh where, is the Britton cornet band? Are you all dead? Come, boys, blow yourselves up! The ice cream season approaches and the 4th of July can be seen with an opera glass, and you should be prepared against its coming.

Britton has been favored with a number of shows this winter—good, bad and indifferent,—but we think,—take up one side and down the other, crosswise and zig-zag, that for a humbug, a chestnut, a regular penny grab, Woodruff's gang takes the cake.

One of our prominent ladies, who did not propose to have the winter of 89-90 pass without even one little sleigh ride, prevailed upon her big brother to hitch himself up to a hand-sled, just after the last fall of "the beautiful," and mounting the sled started him down town at a lively trot. Everything went merrily until she was just rounding up in front of the hotel with a flourish, when over went the sled, driver and steed. No bones broken and sleigh ride postponed.

Jess has been laying awake nights trying to think who the H. C. can be. He has used necromancy, writing three names on a paper and turning it over, closing his eyes and repeating "Right one stay, fly away two; some McGinty liquid I'll give you;" but it's no go. Now, Jess, I'll tell you. I am the man in the moon and often as I sit in the lower corner, on the ragged edge of the last quarter, fishing for comets, I kind o' squint up one eye and take a look at the folks on the earth. That's how I came to see you playing snap-and-catch-'em Monday forenoon.

The subject for discussion by the Farmer's Union, of North Lenawee, this evening, will be: Has the legislation for the past twenty-five years, been for the interest of the farmers?" Why, how, now? what's the use of discussing the lucid facts that stand for the affirmative? Hasn't the farmer a great big protection on his wheat, potatoes, corn, oats, pork and other things which he raises to sell? Bet your last hog, he has. All the tax in the world he is asked to pay, for this thoughtful provision for his good, is in what he buys and that is merely nominal, ranging from 10 to 250 per cent. Is the tariff a tax? Let him who says so go eat hay. This is the diet, his stomach will get acquainted with, if protection continues much longer. The tariff is a tax.—Adrian Press.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. H. Taft, a boy.

Wm. H. Arner is on the sick list at present writing.

David McNair of Tecumseh was in the village Monday.

Willie Herrington went to Blissfield Monday, on business.

Mrs. John Arner is under the Doctor's care at this writing.

Thomas Aiken of Tecumseh was in the village Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Frank Clarkson is home for a visit of a few days with the boy.

Vote Miller spent Friday and Saturday with his brother Fred, at Dundee.

Mrs. G. W. Jackson of Tecumseh, called on relatives and friends in the village Thursday of last week.

T. H. Temple received 10,000 speckled trout from Paris, Mich., which he put in the little Raisin last week.

The politicians of our village will have to study the questions of the day a little more or the students of the school will be too many for them.

There was a large attendance at the quarterly meeting services Sunday morning and evening. The presiding Elder occupied the pulpit in the morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, who have been spending the last month with their daughter, Mrs. H.J. Williams, started for their home at Poultney, Vermont, on Tuesday morning.

There is but now and then a person that appreciates a good thing any better than Tink. The last real blessing he was permited to enjoy was the arrival of a 9lb. boy, on Saturday eve.

Miss Warner, who had been visiting at Rev. Hoeg's, while waiting at the depot for the train Monday, to return to her home at Franklin, had a severe chill, and at present is at the home of Mr. Wright, being unable to go home.

Those who wish to attend the Sherwood Piano Recital which will be given at the opera house, Tecumseh, the first of next month, can secure tickets of Miss Kitty Clark, or at the Library. As there were only a limited number of tickets sent here, your order should be left early.

Last week Wednesday afternoon free trade and protection was discussed by the larger students, and on Friday afternoon of this week the following question will be, discussed, "That the annexation of Canada will not promote the general welfare of the United States." Some of the best argument put forth is furnished by the young ladies, and it makes the young men scratch their heads to know what to say.

CARD OF THANKS.

We hereby extend our thanks to those who aided and sympathzed with us in our late affliction.

MRS. G. W. CLARK AND FAMILY.

MACON MUSIC.

In time for the census taker; a girl at Wm. Niblack's.

David Sloan and wife, of Britton, called on friends last week.

More orange blossoms this week. And still there are more to follow.

There will be a glass ball shoot Saturday afternoon Feb. 22d.

Rev. Mr. Hubble of Nebraska, filled the Methodist pulpit last Sunday afternoon.

The revival meetings are still continued, and many blind eyes are being opened.

Mrs. Geo. Frost and son, and Mrs. Eugene Burdett, are visiting friends in Leslie this week.

Darius Hendershot and Miss Bell Dildine were married Wednesday evening, Feb. 19th. at the home of her uncle, Mr. Isaac Hendershot.

Those boys who have been in the habit of upsetting wagons and things in general, on their way home from the evening meetings, had better take the hint and look a little oudt.

MACON CENTER CHIPS.

La grippe has let go and the telegraph line is again progressing. The wire is being put on the poles and the work is being superintended by R. J. W. Bowen, which is a sufficient guarantee that the work will be well done. There is ten miles of poles up and it is still traveling east and will soon reach Cone, and perhaps will go to East Milan.

The second contest was held at Grange Hall last Saturday evening. A good time was had, but Oh dear!—Just wait for the Public, which will take place Saturday evening, March 1st Bills and program next week. Everybody invited. The platform in the Hall has been enlarged and the ladies have put down a new carpet and hung new curtains, which makes it one of the finest halls in this section of the country for holding entertainments. Come and see.

CLINTON CLIPPINGS.

Mrs. Ed. Clark is improving slowly.

Chas. Thompson is at home this week.

Miss Carrie Smallidge, of Tecumseh, visited here Sunday.

Rev. Pope, of Manchester, is assisting Rev. A. W. Stalker in special meetings this week.

Miss Embler, of Manchester, was visiting her sister Mrs. Fred. Sherwood, over Sunday.

Pet VanDeMark goes to Adrian next week to engage in photographic work, in Fairbank's gallery.

The Boston Ideal's gave a very pleasing entertainment to a crowded house, Thursday evening.

David Haggart was called to Clayton Friday, by the serious illness of his brother George, who was a former resident of Clinton.

The rowdy element seems to have unlimited sway on our streets at night. Disgraceful riots and fighting disturb our usual peaceful community.

Rollie Woodward met with a very painful accident at the woolen mill last Thursday. His left hand was badly mangled by a flax grinder, the thumb being torn from the hand.

Mr. Alonzo Clark passed through here Thursday morning on his way from Chicago to Ridgeway to attend his brother George Clark's funeral, returning to Clinton the same night.

While driving home Tuesday evening, Mrs. Thomas and Al. VanGelson met with an accident, which while not of a serious nature, caused some delay and inconvenience. The cross bar of the buggy gave out and they were obliged to procure another conveyance.

The examination of Gregory the criminal suspect, on the charge of burglarizing J. J. White's tailor shop, was held before Justice Brown at town hall, Monday P. M. Prosecuting attorney Morgan was on hand and Gregory was bound over to appear at the Circuit court, bail being fixed at $300.

Miss Laura Dainty, who is next on the course of entertainments will give one of her pleasing elocutionary entertainments at the town hall next Monday evening. Rogers' orchestra will furnish music for the occasion.

Edward Coffin Sr. is painfully reminded of his experience on the Southern battle fields. His wound is giving him much trouble this week. Mr. Coffin knows the force and effect of rebel lead, having carried an ounce of that undesirable metal in his limb for ten years.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Wm. Wickwire is visiting relatives here this week.

Hugo Smith and daughter visited at Adrian on Tuesday.

Jerome Pulman returned last week from a visit to Wisconsin.

A. Hoxie is at home for a short visit.

Geo. Hoxie contemplates removing the remainder of his machinery soon.

Mr. Conrad Atwell went to Detroit Monday and came back Wednesday.

Miss Addie Bragg spent last week and part of this at her home in Deerfield.

Mr. Alva Raymond had a severe shock of paralysis last Thursday morning.

Miss Kate Spellman is very low. Dr. Stevenson of Adrian who was called in consultation with Dr. Nelson of Ridgeway, and says she may improve in time.

As Jay Craft was driving home from the station the other day, with two horses in front and one behind with a cart attached, the last named animal objected to being driven tandem and started out all by himself, with the remainder of the party looking on to watch him dart through narrow pathways and cut sharp corners, which it succeeded in doing for about a mile, when the lines caught in a picket fence, thus bringing the fiery steed to a halt with a few bruises and cuts, and a broken thill. Jay thinks one rig is enough to drive at once.

The editor of the Addison Courier, having recovered from a two weeks tussle with the grip, remarks: "The Courier scribe has just recovered from a two-weeks experience with it, and hastens to withdraw his previous opinion that it is not an imported article. Most certainly it is a foreign invention; no American could be so fiendish as to invent a disease of such all around badness. We had no desire to slander America or its institutions,—were simply mistaken in our premises. Hereafter we will concede that Russia is its birthplace, and use our best endeavor to keep out of its clutches.

H. C. Hall is again able to be at his place of business, after one of the hardest tussels with the grippe that has occurred in Hudson. His illness broke his previous excellent record of being impervious to sickness, for during his long continuance in business he had never been so ill that he was unable to be at the store.—Hudson Post.

On Tuesday of this week Silas Fuller, of Plymouth, walked over our village with a peach tree twig, to locate water for a well to be used for water works purposes. The members of the commission were interested lookers on. Mr. Fuller is a water finder from way back, and his services have been secured far and near. He follows the time honored custom of taking a forked peach tree twig, and holding it in front of him, search for water. Whenever he crossed a vein of water the end of the stick drops.—Hudson Post.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, FEB. 20

We shouldn't criticise Speaker Reed too harshly; he is making Democratic votes every day.

The Dakota Cyclones lift most everthing except the farm mortgages. These are cyclone proof.

The jury bribery case in Chicago is now fairly begun. It is to be hoped that this jury will not be bribed.

Mormonism has received its death blow in this country. It has gone up Salt river to stay. The other twin relic, protection, will travel the same highway, at next fall's elections.

The Democratic minority in Congress will "obstruct" the passage of every extravagant and vicious bill until the Republicans furnish their own majority to pass it. If this be treason, make the most of it.

There is probably less politics in the South now than in any other section of the country. The people of the South are attending strictly to business—their own business too—and they are reaping their reward in a genuine business revival.

The Cincinnati Gazette, speaking of the Democratic governors in Ohio and Iowa, says: "It is a testimony of that frenzy for particularism that has developed in the Republican ranks." That is a new name for it certainly. We should call it honest politics.

If protection is a good thing we can't have too much of it. Notwithstanding the tariff of ten cents a pound on wool, our imports of woolen goods are increasing every year. Double up the tariff on wool and secure for our farmers the "home market." If a tariff on wool is right, then give the farmers a degree of protection that will protect.

If the Kansas farmer wants to know what is hurting him let him haul a hundred bushels of protected corn to the nearest market and try to trade it for a Sunday suit of protected woolen clothing. He might thus, if he will put his reasoning apparatus in working order, discover practically whose hand is under the biggest end of the protection cornucopia.—Kansas City Times.

The greatest blunder of all that the Republicans have committed is the adoption of all these revolutionary and suicidal measures unnecessarily. It happens that after all they succeeded in securing a quorum, and might just as well have waited for it, and have been decent and prudent as not. They are now in the position of a man who has committed grand larceny when honesty would have suited his purpose better.—Chicago Herald.

Boss Platt has killed the World's Fair project in the New York legislature. Mr. Platt believes in the motto, "similia similibus curantur." He opposed the original bill because it contained politics, and he would eliminate politics therefrom by injecting more politics of the Platt stamp. With this set back at Albany, the chances of New York to obtain the World's Fair will go glimmering.

In a discussion on the revision question in one of the New York Presbyteries, the Rev. Dr. Hall said:

"Brethren, I understand that missionaries in Africa have difficulty in making the natives comprehend the real purpose and teachings of the Westminster creed, and I must say I am not surprised, when I see the difficulty intelligent men have to understand it here at home."

True, every word; and yet if a Baptist or Methodist or Universalist had made the very same remark, what rank heresy it would have been.

A Washington dispatch says: United States Senator A. H. Colquitt, of Georgia, has allied himself with the platform opponents of the rum traffic, and hereafter his powerful voice will be heard over the country on temperance platforms. He takes the ground that the "race" troubles in the South are liquor conflicts instead of race issues, and that if the rum shops could be driven out of the South, all the troubles would cease.

Senator Colquitt is not alone in entertaining these views. The St. Louis Republic, one of the ablest papers in the west, has always held to the same opinion. We presume that fully three fourths of all shooting affrays between the whites and blacks in the South can be traced directly to bad whiskey.

REED'S NEW RULES.

The new code of rules for the government of the House were put through last week under whip and spur. The speaker attempted to gag the minority and shut off all debate, but better counsels prevailed and a reasonable opportunity was accorded to both the advocates and the opponents of the new rules to discuss them. However men may regard the revised code, it is certainly preferable to no rules at all. Even bad rules are better than none. But the changes and innovations introduced in the new code are a long step toward legislative tyranny and can only be viewed with alarm by the friends of honest and economical government.

The three most radical changes are these:

1st.—The Speaker is accorded the power to record a quorum by his own act when the minority refrain from voting.

2d.—The Speaker can refuse to entertain dilatory motions.

3d.—The Speaker has power in certain cases to refuse to entertain motions of appeal from his decisions.

The second change, in the hands of an honorable Speaker, would not be particularly objectionable. The first and third changes are contrary to the uniform precedents of a hundred years, arbitrary in the extreme, and utterly revolutionary in character. Let us examine them briefly.

The plea under which the first change is made, is that a majority should rule, and yet practically it will introduce the most obnoxious form of minority rule. Under the old rule, the political minority had it in their power to block legislation and obstruct business, that is true, but they had no power to pass affirmative legislation; but under the new code, a mere factional minority of the majority party have the power to pass a bill. Hence it does not promote majority rule at all, but the most vicious form of minority rule. The Constitution provides that a majority of each house shall constitute a quorum to do business; not only must a majority be present but they must actually participate in the transaction of business. This has been the rule in both Senate and House since the foundation of the government. The right to abstain from voting has been always recognized as one which the minority should possess for its own protection. The majority can protect itself. The majority can always make a quorum of its own when its members are present. Then why, in the name of justice and equity, should the minority be compelled, against their will, to aid in carrying measures to which they are opposed? This point is very tersely presented in the last issue of Harper's Weekly. It says: "The question is not one of the right of the majority to rule, because a majority did not vote. A member, except in cases duly provided for, may refuse to vote. The responsibility for legislation lies undoubtedly with the majority. But a majority must manifest its will. Not only must it be a quorum to do business, but it must actually do business. If it declines its duty it is responsible to the country, not to the speaker." So, too, if the minority should abuse this right, and carry filibustering to extremes, they are responsible to the country and not to the speaker.

* * *

Ten years ago, in January and February, 1880, there was a spirited contest in the House over this very question. The Republicans were then in the minority, and a general revision of the rules was under discussion. Randolph Tucker of Virginia, a Democrat, offered an amendment to rule eight, giving the Speaker the right to count a quorum of members present but declining to vote. This proposal was very thoroughly discussed and strongly opposed by Randall and Alex. H. Stephens, on the Democratic side, and by Garfield, Hawley and Reed (the present Speaker) on the Republican side. The opposition to this innovation was so strong on both sides of the Chamber that Mr. Tucker withdrew his amendment without pressing it to a vote. After the adoption of the revision the N. Y. Tribune, —which ought to be good Republican authority,—in an editorial article on March 4th, 1880, said: "The work was undertaken by such experienced parliamentarians as Speaker Randall and Mr. Garfield and seemed to have been done with a view solely to facilitating business and improving the methods of legislation. It was apprehended that an attempt might be made to abridge the rights of the minority, but if that was seriously contemplated the opposition of the Republican members caused its abandonment." In the light of the events of the past four weeks, what a confession this is!

* * *

The rule giving the Speaker power to refuse to entertain a motion for appeal is utterly subversive of the rights of individual members. It not only gives the Speaker power to gag the minority, but to gag his own party majority also. It makes the Speaker's personal will the supreme law in the House. It is worthy of the days of Oliver Cromwell or the French Revolution. It is a disgrace to the American Congress in this enlightened age. Rules for the government of the House should be adopted, not to secure a temporary partisan advantage, but to promote justice and right. The minority to-day may be the majority in the next House. Unless all signs fail, a political revolution will sweep over the land at the fall elections, and the "one-man power," so eagerly bestowed upon Speaker Reed to-day, will return to plague the inventors in the ensuing Congress.

CRAZY FOR SUBSIDIES.

SOME PERTINENT REMARKS ON AN IMPORTANT SUBJECT.

Hungry Lobbyists Trying to Revive American Shipping—Sums for the Taxpayers to Think Of—Blaine vs. New on the British Way of Doing It.

A bill has been introduced in congress by Mr. Farquhar, of New York, for the purpose of reviving American shipping by means of subsidies. The bill proposes a subsidy to American built vessels of thirty cents per ton for every thousand miles sailed. A lobby has been at work in Washington to show how our declining merchant marine would be put upon its legs if the proposed bill [illegible]

Of course it is the men who would get the money who are pushing for the passage of the measure. Mr. H. K. Thurber, president of the Brazil Mail Steamship company, and Mr. J. M. Lachlan, general manager of that line, have been before the house committee to show how good a thing it would be for the country to pay them for doing their own business.

If the bill should be passed a 2,000 ton steamship of Mr. Thurber's line would receive about $10,000 for each round trip between the ports of New York and Rio de Janeiro; and a 5,000 ton vessel would receive almost an equal sum for the round voyage between New York and Liverpool.

If such a steamship should make only twelve round voyages to Liverpool in a year her owners would receive for this single vessel not less than $110,000 a year. This is equivalent to the interest at 5 per cent on $2,200,000.

Evidently the subsidy men know what they want.

Mr. F. B. Crawford, on the other hand, has written a letter to The Manufacturer of Philadelphia showing what a burden to the taxpayers this subsidy scheme would become. Mr. Crawford thinks—and very reasonably—that if we undertake to grant subsidies we ought to aim at the very least, to make our steam shipping half as great as that of Great Britain. If it should have that effect, then, "if each steamer traversed 30,000 miles per annum (a low estimate) and received 30 cents per ton gross (as proposed by the bounty bill) per 1,000 miles, the annual cost would be about $14,000,000."

With figures like these kept before the American taxpayer, how long do these subsidy hunters think they could be able to keep the taxpayer up to the scratch of footing their annual bills? Of course, with these munificent sums going every year into the coffers of the subsidized ship owners, these men could become very promising subjects for "fat frying," and the growing needs of the G. O. P. would render the creation of a wealthy class of ship owners most desirable at this particular time, when there is a growing tendency among manufacturers to demand of congress to remove their shackles by giving them free raw materials.

The argument of the subsidy hunters is one of the queerest things that American politics—with its many queer phenomena—has exhibited for many a day.

The example of England!

The men who have been filling the air for years with exclamations of horror at British free trade, and who have diligently circulated forged extracts from English newspapers to frighten American workingmen, now face about, all of a sudden, and plead the example of England!

But what are the facts?

The best Republican authorities are not agreed.

Mr. Blaine says: "England has never been affrighted by the word subsidy," and he makes a ridiculous attempt to show that England has built up her commercial marine by granting subsidies.

Gen. John C. New, President Harrison's consul general at London, reports to the United States treasury department, under date of Sept. 3, 1889, that "the British government does not grant subsidies, in the general sense of that term, to any steamship company."

The fact is that not more than 2 per cent. of England's shipping receives money in any way from the government. Some owners are paid small sums by the British admiralty on condition that their ships be built so as to carry heavy guns, and that the government have the option of buying or hiring these vessels in time of war. The estimated expenditures for this purpose last year were only £39,380, or about $190,000.

Then England pays for the carriage of her mails; but she is often provokingly careless as to who carries them. For example, a French company holds the contract for carrying the British mails from Aden, in Arabia, to the island of Mauritius—both Aden and Mauritius being British possessions.

Would not the subsidy hunters be more consistent and state their case more effectively if they held fast by their old argument, which serves them so well in election times: "England does it; therefore, we must do the opposite."

President Harrison, in his long and almost pointless message, does at least manage to get up courage to advise the granting of subsidies, under the form of liberal appropriations, for carrying the mails. But applying this to the Brazilian line, which seems to be the hungriest and to cry the loudest of all the subsidy hunters, who wants to send letters to Brazil by that line in twenty-five and often thirty days, when, as at present, those letters can go all the way to England and thus reach Brazil in twenty-three days?

But have we no shipping?

Much more, at least, than the flags on the seas indicate.

The fast steamers, the great "ocean greyhounds" plying between New York and Liverpool, are largely owned by American stockholders, but they are included in the royal naval reserve of England, and in case of war they would become British cruisers.

There is a firm in Boston which carries on a large trade in fruits with Jamaica, but it is forced to sail its vessels under the British flag. A wealthy capitalist of [illegible] owns a ship which he is forced to [illegible] under the flag of the Hawaiian [illegible]

The moral is plain.

Let our ship owners enter their vessels for American registry, from whatever source they procure them.

When this is done, Nellie Bly will not be able, after encircling the globe the next time, to report again that she did not once see the Stars and Stripes at the masthead of a ship all the way from [illegible] to China.

[illegible]ENT POLICY.

[illegible] from South America of [illegible] May Be Built Up.

[illegible] United States in [illegible] make laws pursue a [illegible] building up of domestic [illegible] different from that [illegible]

[illegible] the United States of Colombia, [illegible] America, of which the Isthmus of [illegible] forms a part. This is a country [illegible] which vast forests of the choicest [illegible]ber abound, and this timber varies [illegible] the tropical palm to the hardy Alpine types. There are also vast mineral resources, such as copper, lead and iron, and the precious metals are [illegible]

Although the United States of Colombia raises nearly all of its revenue through tariff duties, still its law makers do not go to the length of refusing to let the citizens of that country buy their ships abroad and enter them for registry as Colombian vessels. They have not yet learned that way of building up home enterprises.

Accordingly we hear of a Pittsburg firm which is building two light draught stern wheel steamers for use on Colombian rivers.

We do not learn that there are any wise Colombian statesmen who would like to refuse entry to these vessels.

Evidently the peculiar type of statesmanship which prevails with us has few imitators in this backward South American state, and the example of our own country as the leading American nation has not been properly presented to these old Spanish fogies of the tropics.

How is it that these men are so dull of perception as not to see that the true and only way to develop Colombian ship building is to shut out these Pittsburg river steamers? The Cauca and the Magdalena rivers of Colombia—are they not better than all the rivers of Pennsylvania?

At the same time another dispatch reaches us from Chili, which states that the government of that country will shortly take steps to reduce materially the duties on raw materials in order to encourage Chilian manufacturing enterprises.

Those persons seem to make a great mistake who assert that the prestige of the United States will make it from this time forth the model of all our southern sister republics.

On the other hand, it seems clear that the South American delegates to the Pan-American congress did not come up here to learn political wisdom from us.

How little the Chilians are disposed to follow our example as the leading nation is further illustrated by an occurrence which happened some years ago. A commission was sent from this country to South America to effect reciprocity treaties with the various nations of that continent. When the commission came to Chili they had a hearing with the president of the republic.

But what did they accomplish?

The Chilian president politely told the commissioners some things which must have struck them as founded on very queer and even heretical principles of political economy.

This is what he said:

"It is out of no want of respect for the United States, but it is my settled belief that all treaties are needless. There can be no control by any convention of the laws of trade. Men will buy and sell where it is most to their advantage, and this cannot be added or materially influenced by national compacts. Chili opens all her coasts to the vessels of any nation, the United States included, and in turn the Chilian flag ought to have access to the ports of the United States on the same terms."

The commission accomplished nothing, and reported that "of course it was not worth while to dwell upon this avowal."

TARIFF NOTES.

Josiah B. Markley and Amos L. Ebert, two farmers of Montgomery county, Pa., the latter of whom was last year a candidate for the Republican nomination for sheriff, have recently failed.

There has been another large failure in the woolen manufacturing business. This time the tariff lightning has struck Philadelphia to the extent of $500,000.

The starch makers have held a meeting at Buffalo to organize a starch trust. Starch is protected by a duty of from 2 to 2½ cents a pound.

A large number of New England manufacturers of iron and steel have petitioned congress to remove all duties on iron ore, coal and coke, and to reduce the duties on pig iron, scrap iron and scrap steel to 24 per cent. ad valorem.

The United States senate has refused to include the statistics of farm mortgages in the census to be taken this summer. "Is it because light on this subject would produce a stampede among the farmers for a reduction of tariff taxes?

There has been great opposition among the importing merchants of New York to the McKinley bill for regulating the collection of customs. One authority estimates that the bill would damage the foreign commerce of that city to the extent of $200,000,000 annually. The New York Commercial Bulletin, which is a strong partisan paper, says that the bill appears to have been framed with the intention of destroying the import trade of the country.

David A. Wells, the greatest statistician of the United States, estimates that the additional cost to this country of steel during the ten years from 1878 to 1887 in consequence of the tariff was $119,000,000.

An Exchange says: "You've met Wanamaker?" "Oh, yes." "What kind of a man is he?" "Well, he is a man of the postage-stamp kind—rather sticky, and a little of him goes a great way."

Another big rumpus has been stirred up over a change in the Dundee post office.

Effects of Modern Life.

Eminent authorities unanimously agree that the high pressure methods of modern life are rapidly making us a race of helpless invalids—subject to all manner of nervous affections, headaches, insanity, dizziness, neuralgia, backache, hysteria, nervous troubles of the heart, stomach, kidneys, brain, etc. Ladies and gentlemen who are thus afflicted, or who are compelled to keep late hours, do much mental or physical work, who worry or fret about business or domestic troubles, should remember that no other remedy in the world will so speedily cure these diseases, remove worry and the blues, induce tranquil sleep, relieve pain, or build up the brain and nervous systems, as Dr. Miles' great discovery, the Restorative Nervine. It contains no opium or morphine. Trial bottles free at Baker & Hall's Drug Store.

RAILROAD BILL.

The Special Committee on Pacific

RAILWAYS AFTER A THOROUGH INVESTIGATION.

Accept the Reports of Senators Frye and Davis and Have Agreed Upon a Bill to be Reported to the Senate To-day—The Conclusions Reached as to Both Roads.

WASHINGTON, February 17.—The special committee on Pacific railroads, after many hearings, thorough investigation and careful consideration, finally accepted the reports of Senator Frye on the Union Pacific and Senator Davis on the Central Pacific and have agreed to a bill which will be reported to the Senate today. The report on the Union Pacific reaches the following conclusions: That the policy of building or acquiring branch lines was wise, and through the period covered by their inquiry honesty and economy was carried out. That the main line has derived an immense advantage from the branches and that there is no foundation for the charge that the latter have received undue benefit from constructive mileage or otherwise at the expense of the main line. That the building of the Oregon Short Line and the subsequent acquirement of the Oregon Railway and Navigation Company's lines, instead of being a menace to the interest of the government, have proved to be a decided advantage.

That the recent consolidation of several branches, under the name of the Oregon Short Line and Utah Northern railway company, simplifies the system of the Union Pacific, makes possible a more effective and economical management and in no regard evinces any purpose of evading the obligations to the government. That the branches instead of being maintained at the expense of the main contribute at least $3,000,000 a year to the treasury of the company. That the improvements have been, for several years past, greater on the main line than on the branches; some of them very important and expensive, like the splendid shops now in process of erection at Cheyenne, the fine station there just completed and the station and hotel at Ogden.

That there is no evidence of any purpose on the part of the company to surrender that portion of their road over which the government has a statutory lien; on the contrary, every reason tending to satisfy any candid person that no such purposes exists.

That this is a capable, well managed road, abundantly able to pay its debts, requiring only, like every other railroad, time in which to pay.

That the present management is honestly trying to effect a fair adjustment with the government.

That the interests of the government and of the railroad company will be promoted by a settlement, and that one can be made under which every dollar of the government debt, with interest, will be paid.

It finds the present security to be a statutory lien on the road commencing three miles west of the Missouri river, extending to a point five miles west of Ogden, and on another road commencing one-half mile west of Kansas City and extending to a point 393 miles westerly, commencing in a prairie and ending in one; not enough to protect the government debt, if it shall not be adjusted until it becomes due, within fifty millions of dollars; while under the bill to be reported the security obtained will be twice the government debt in value, and the payments, according to the terms of the bill, absolutely certain.

The report on the Central Pacific finds that the United States has for security a statutory lien on a road commencing at a point five miles west of Ogden and extending to San Jose without terminal facilities at either end, made subject to a mortgage to secure bonds equal in amount to the original indebtedness of the companies to the United States; that portion of the road from Ogden to the westerly slope of the Sierra Nevadas is practically only a bridge, without any local business of any amount; that the roads reaching from the main line into Nevada do not now pay their actual expenses; that the present security of the United States upon this property is entirely inadequate; that a foreclosure of the first mortgage would substantially exhaust, in satisfaction thereof, the entire property and that it would be inexpedient for the United States to redeem it from said first mortgage, or to become the owner of the property through redemption and foreclosure.

The report finds that it is expedient, necessary and practicable to adjust and further secure the indebtedness to the United States upon extended time at a reduced rate of interest within the ability of the company to pay upon such terms as to advance the development of the country through which said roads pass, and afford the inhabitants thereof reasonable rates of transportation for passengers and freight.

It appears, from the report, that the Central Pacific has not an ability to pay, at all equal, to that of the Union Pacific, but under the terms of the bill to be reported, can make final and full payment reasonably certain.

NEAR HIS FATHER'S OLD DESK.

The New Solicitor General, Mr. Taft, Takes His Seat.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 17.—The new solicitor general, Hon. William H. Taft, of Cincinnati, has assumed the duties of office. His desk occupies a position immediately above that occupied so long by his father, Hon. Alphonsa Taft, as attorney general.

JUDSON GOES.

Mr. Harrison Makes a Move in the Dayton Imbroglio.

WASHINGTON, February 17.—The President has decided upon the recommendation of Postmaster General Wanamaker and removed Lewis J. Judson, postmaster at Dayton, Ohio, and appointed to the vacancy thus caused Edward B. Lyon. Mr. Judson was appointed during the present administration, and was removed for cause.

Mysteries of the Waves.

ROCKLAND, ME., February 17.—The bodies of Ezra Kenny and his wife, who left their home on Moose Island for Greens Landing in a small boat Thursday evening have been found. Mrs. Kenny's body was floating in a cove and the boat was found anchored with Mr. Kenny's body tangled in the ropes. Amos Eaton and another young man who left in a sailboat from Fog Island for Greens Island a week ago Thursday are missing and are supposed to have been drowned.

BONFIELD RETURNS

FROM SALT LAKE CITY, WHERE HE HAS INVESTIGATED

The Election and Registration Frauds—The Gentile Victory a Triumph Over Boomers and Speculaters.

CHICAGO, February 17.—Ex-Inspector John Bonfield, whose detective agency was retained by the Mormon party in Salt Lake to trace out and investigate anticipated registration and election frauds, has returned from Salt Lake City and now explaines his connection with recent events there. He says the Utah commission is supreme in Salt Lake and under its operations there is a practical disfranchisement of the Mormon vote. The members of the registry board, he said, were supposed to be non-partisan; but the reverse was true, as was shown by the fact that four of the five were on the Gentile ticket which was successful last Monday. The members of the board carried their offices in their hats, and voters whom they did not want on the registry never got there. In their house-to-house canvass they managed to skip all the Mormons, and those who attempted to get their names down were put off on one ground or another, and their protests against the injustice to which they were subjected were vain. Mormons who had never been married at all were stricken from the registry on the charge of polygamy. In addition to the wholesale disfranchisement of the Mormons the Gentiles registered hundreds of names without giving the residence or occupation as the law requires. They registered men who lived over two hundred miles from Salt Lake, and the detective says he has more than twenty affidavits from men who had been "fixed" in this way. Mr. Bonfield says the Gentile triumph was a triumph over boomers and speculators who sacrificed everything in the nature of justice for their own purpose. The result is that land values have been pushed up enormously during the last six months, and there is a tremendous speculative craze, which has been helped by Monday's election. The Mormons, he says, all own their homes, and are a well-to-do, respectable and orderly people.

NEW YORK REPUBLICANS

Adopt a Number of Resolutions and Adjourn.

NEW YORK, February 17.—The Republican State Committee, Saturday, considered resolutions endorsing the Saxton ballot reform bill, approving the transfer of the immigration business from state to federal control, congratulating Speaker Reed on his course in the quorum question, which "has been a new inspiration to the Republican party." These resolutions were unanimously adopted. The sub committee also reported a resolution on the World's Fair. It heartily favors the selection of New York, but opposes the plan prepared under the auspices of Mayor Grant and now before the legislature. It declares this plan to be part of a scheme to give Tammany Hall control of New York City and state politics, and thus secure the balance of power in the National election of 1892. It says that nearly four-fifths of the World's Fair general committee are Democrats and only two-fifths of the incorporators are Republicans, while of the executive committee of 29 only nine are Republicans. The resolution shows that the most prominent Democrats in the party are on the executive committee. It denounces Mayor Grant as a dishonest official and a dangerous man to have at the head of such an enterprise. Therefore the resolution insists upon the addition of enough Republican names to the committee named in the bill to make the same non-partisan. The resolution was debated but the discussion was secret. The vote resulted in the adoption of the resolution 23 6. The negative vote was Solon B. Smith, John W. Jacobus, Frank Raymond, Colonel S. V. R. Cruger, John Collins and George Cromwell. The meeting then adjourned sine die.

BIG SUIT.

Mrs. English and Children Sue Wm. Monypeny for Property Worth $200,000.

COLUMBUS, O., February 17.—Mrs. Mary R. English has filed suit against William Monypeny, the millionaire of this city. She is the widow of John C. English, who was a member of the wholesale clothing firm of English & Miller. He died in 1880, leaving a large estate, a large portion of which was a one-half interest in real estate owned in partnership with William Monypeny.

The petition recites that by the will of the deceased, Mr. Monypeny was appointed trustee of the estate for the benefit of Mr. English's heirs.

Mr. Monypeny accordingly qualified, giving bond in the sum of $10,000. It was also provided in the will that this trusteeship should continue until the youngest child should become of age.

It is charged that Mr. Monypeny has not complied with the conditions of his trust, and has not protected the interest of his former partner's family and heirs.

That he instituted suit in the absence of the family from the state and at a partition sale bought in the real estate at $53,614, being bought at $15,000 less than the appraised value.

The court is asked to set aside the proceedings in partition, and to require Mr. Monypeny to render an accounting of his trusteeship.

It is stated that the property involved is now worth about $250,000, or from 200 to 300 per cent. more than it was worth at the time of the transactions in litigation.

Mrs. English and children are represented by the legal firm of Fairbanks, Smith & Steele.

Sprung a Leak.

NEW YORK, February 17.—The British steamship Jersey City hence February 8, for Bristol, was off the lightship this morning returning to port. The Jersey City arrived at her dock at the foot of West Twenty sixth street, shortly before 5 o'clock. A number of men were at once put to work removing the cargo, consisting of grain and meat. The leak was discovered last night. It is thought that it can be repaired so that the vessel can sail again tomorrow.

A Serious Question.

NEW YORK, February 17.—The Sun prints a five column article on Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, entitled, "Is Talmage a Humbug." It dwells upon the preacher's advertising methods and describes his peculiar efforts to secure publicity in all his movements and sayings. It says he has acquired a large fortune by pursuing methods not hitherto considered proper in a clergyman, and accuses him of profaning sacred places for the selfish purposes.

Lynched.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK., February 17.—Hill Larken, colored, who killed Deputy Sheriff Ross, was taken from jail at Camden and hanged by a mob.

CITY OFFICIALS

Arrested by a Woman Who Gets Her Dandruff Up.

VINCENNES, IND., February 17.—All the city officials, consisting of the mayor, councilman, city attorney and street commissioner, were arrested at the instance of Mrs. Clarissa J. Panley, who had enjoined them from grading a street next to her property. The injunction was not observed, and therefore Mayor Murphy, City Attorney Goodman and others were arrested for indirect contempt of court.

The fight that has led up to this wholesale arrest has been a spirited one and has been going on for two years.

The Ohio & Mississippi railroad company was perpetually restrained, two years ago, from raising the track to correspond with the grade of the street, and last December Mrs. Panley recovered damages from the city in the courts for injury to her property from overflow of water on the premises. The fight in the courts will be a bitter one. The city attorney will enter suit against Mrs. Panley for $20,000 damages for false imprisonment. The mayor will also ask for $15,000 damages for the same reason.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

SECRETARY MATTHEWS' CLOSE CALL FROM INSTANT DEATH.

The Report of the Parnell Commission Sells Like Hot Cakes—News From Over the Sea.

LONDON, February 17.—As Home Secretary Matthews was leaving his office to attend the cabinet council, he had a very narrow escape from serious injury, and perhaps death. As he was passing under the skylight two men were standing on a slight scaffolding, cleaning the glass, lost their footing and fell to the tile floor beneath. One of them grazed Mr. Matthews as he fell and was instantly killed upon striking the floor. The other was seriously hurt.

Copies of the report of the Parnell commission, in pamphlet form, are selling as fast as they can be issued. Thousands of copies were rushed off to Ireland the night the report was presented to parliament, and heavy orders for additional supplies have been received daily since. Preparations were made to supply a large demand for the document, but the sales have already been ten fold in excess of the estimates.

The sneering remark made by Edward Clarke, Q. C., Solicitor-General, characterizing the London county council as a "body of fools," is calculated to seriously hurt the government in the coming election in St. Pancras, at which a number of councillors are to be elected. The ill-considered utterance will doubtless be used against the government in the contest in St. Hancras to fill the parliamentary seat made vacant by Mr. Charles W. Cochrane-Baillie, who succeeds to the peerage by the death of his father, Lord Lamington.

The various missionary societies have formally thanked the government for its action toward Portugal in the Southeast African disputes.

The Durham collieries, as the result of a series of meetings held this week, have finally decided to go out on a strike next week. The number of men represented at the meetings is upward of 60,000 and the questions involved are a considerable increase of wages and the adoption by the masters of an eight hour day.

The Persian Monarch Crippled.

QUEENSTOWN, February 17.—The steamship Celtic, from New York for Liverpool, has arrived. She reports that when twenty miles out she sighted the steamship Persian Monarch, from London January 17, via Portland, for New York, before reported returning with her propeller gone. She was in tow of three tugs and was proceeding for Queenstown.

SOUTHERN LAND SCHEME.

In Which Governor Campbell and Other Northern Capitalists are Interested.

ATLANTA, GA., February 17.—Details of a big land company formed by northern visitors who attended the banquet of the Chamber of Commerce, are meager. The whole thing, so far as it has gone, is this:

The John H. Inman party contained a number of eastern gentlemen worth a great deal of money. These, with Governor Campbell, were so much impressed with what they saw here at Atlanta that they determined to have a share in southern developments. To this end they got together and talked over ways and means. Details of that meeting are not attainable, further than it was decided to form a stock company with a million dollars capital, and that Governor Campbell was chosen president. John H. Inman, John C. Calhoun, James Swann and other prominent New Yorkers will be on the directorate, with such men as Sam Inman, Pat Calhoun, E. P. Howell and others from Atlanta. The plan is to invest the money judiciously in southern land, and hold out special invitations to northern and western people to locate here.

AN OHIO SALOONIST

Shoots at an Ex-Convict and Kills an Innocent Man.

COLUMBUS, O., February 17.—At Georgesville, a small village some ten miles from this city, occurred Saturday night a shooting that resulted in death. Tom Ryan, a saloonkeeper, shot at Rolly Stephens, the ball passing through his neck and hitting Napoleon Suver in the head, killing the latter instantly. Ryan was once bound over to court for cutting a woman and is a desperate character. Stephens is an ex convict and has often been in the penitentiary. Suver, the man killed, was a fair kind of a young man who chanced to be in the saloon as a bystander. The whole affair is the result of a doggery debauch. Stephens is not expected to live.

SHOT HIS WIFE

And Then Killed Himself—A Columbus Tragedy.

COLUMBUS, February 17.—Yesterday William Dohn, tiner and dealer in iron cornices, residing at 390 East Fulton street, place of business 490 East Main street, was drinking heavily and had delirium tremens. He went home and shot his wife through her hand with a 22 calibre victor revolver. Then placing the pistol to his own head he shot a ball through his brain, killing himself instantly. Drink and jealousy was the cause. The coroner was notified and took possession of the body. Dohn was 35 years of age.

Champion Shooting.

LOS ANGELES, CAL., February 17.—The championship shoot resulted as follows:

Eastern team—McMurchy 39, Wolstencroft 38, W. E. Perry 32, W. S. Perry 31, Whitney 38; total, 178.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. For sale by

D. RANSOM'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates it cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

WRECKING A RAILROAD TRAIN.

The Toledo and Ann Arbor Railroad is becoming one of the leading lines in this State, and the man whose energy has built up the line has hosts of friends along the line of his road. The following sketch taken from the N. Y. Star, will be read with interest by many people in this section:

"See that man over there?" said a prominent Detroit lawyer to me the other night as we were standing in the rotunda of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, pointing as he spoke to a tall, smooth-shaven, powerful-faced man who had just entered. "He doesn't look much like a man who would deliberately wreck a train, does he? But he did, all the same, less than ten years ago, to my personal knowledge.

"Who is he? Well, that's Michigan's newest millionaire, James M. Ashley, Jr.—"Jim" Ashley, as they call him out there—the grand mogul of the Toledo & Ann Arbor Railroad system. He started out twelve years ago without a dollar, and in that time has built and equipped 400 miles of railroad, and, without freezing out a stockholder or cheating any one out of a penny, now controls it, and is worth $2,000,000 if he's worth a nickel. How did he do it? Simply by a combination of brains, grit and 'gall.' For, while his tongue stutters like sin, I don't believe his brain has missed a cog since the day he was born.

"Speaking to me not long ago of how he came to go into railroad building, he said: "Wh-when I c-c-came out of c-c college and s-s-saw the p-p-power that m-m-money gave to those who had it, I m-made up m-my mind that I w-w-wanted some of it, and I g-g-guess I've g-g-got it.' And he has. After coming to the conclusion that railroading was the quickest way to get rich if you only got on the inside, he put in two years in Detroit in the law office of Ashley Pond, counsel for the Vanderbilt lines in Michigan, and there gained an insight into the inside workings of railroad manipulation. One morning he suddenly resigned, and within a month Pond was dumfounded to hear that his stuttering clerk of a little while before was the head and front of a new railroad company organized at Toledo, for the purpose of building a road from there to Ann Arbor, Mich. The scheme he worked was to get the towns for ten miles on either side of a direct line between his terminals to bidding against one another for the road, he promising to run it through the town that bid the highest. Now the hope of his town getting a railroad has the same effect on the average Western man that a red flag has on a bull; it makes him crazy. Nine out of ten of them would be willing to put a mortgage on all they have to hear a locomotive scream within the corporate limits of their burg. Well, Ashley had to make his road as crooked as a ram's horn in some places in order to take in towns that put up the biggest boodle, but the villages shelled out their money like victims at a church fair. Why, I know of some towns along the line where all the property in them, real and personal, could have been bought for $100,000, that voted and handed over to Ashley bonds to the amount of $25,000, in order to get the road away from rival corporations five miles away. And, mind you, the towns didn't get any stock for their bonds, either. All they were promised, and all they got was a railroad station and two or three trains a day. The scheme worked so well on the first hundred miles of road that no sooner was that done than Ashley organized another company to build an extension on the same plan, and now he has one line clear across the State, one nearly across, that is not quite completed, and is about to push another up through the center. And I'll guarantee that of every $4 that it took to build and equip those roads $3 were paid out of the proceeds of those township bonds. The other dollar was provided for by putting mortgages on the portions already built; and as trains were put to running on each section as fast as it was finished, the roads have paid from the start. They have done so well that Ashley has already paid out of the earnings nearly all the mortgages he put on them to build them, and the next six months' earnings will pay the balance due, and leave him controlling stockholder of 400 miles of one of the best paying railroad properties in the United States.

"But I started in to tell you about his wrecking that train. It was about six years ago, and Jim was in a tight spot, financially, and he couldn't get any more town bonds until he had got his road running forty miles ahead of the terminus at that time. You see, he had received upward of $150,000 in bonds from towns ahead, which he had already hypothecated, but they all contained a provision that they were to become utterly worthless unless he ran a train into the towns that issued them by a certain prescribed date. If they were thus defaulted, of course those who held them would swoop down upon him and drive him into bankruptcy; and every cent he had made so far he had put into the road, for he was playing for a big stake or none at all. Well, one fine morning, while Jim was moving Heaven and earth to get through on time, and just as his graders were preparing to put his track across that of another road that intersected it, Jim was served with an injunction restraining him from crossing the other road. Of course, the whole was a bluff, the management of the rival road well knowing that it would be dissolved at the hearing, but they knew how badly Jim was pinched, and they fondly hoped that the loss of $150,000 would ruin him, so that they could gobble up his lines for a song. Jim read the injunction through, sat down on a stump, scratched his head and looked at the high embankment of the other road. Suddenly an idea struck him, and as soon as the sheriff disappeared he proceeded to put it into execution. The next day the trainmen of the rival line reported to the management that Ashley was tunneling under their track, after shoring it up so that it was perfectly safe for their trains. Down went the sheriff, and ordered Jim to desist, only to be cooly informed by him that:

"The injunction only r-r-restrained from c-crossing the other track, and going under wasn't c-crossing by a d-damed sight.'

"The sheriff didn't dare to interfere with him, with 400 navies at his back, and so went back to the county seat and telegraphed to the Governor for troops to uphold the dignity of the law. The Governor ordered two companies of troops to the seat of war, and so telegraphed the sheriff, all unconscious that Jim had tapped the telegraph wires and was getting ready to receive them. In order to get to the tunnel, their nearest route was to come by rail and strike Jim's road about twenty miles from it, and run down his line to the field of battle. When they reached the junction, the train stopped, and the Major in command got out to see what was the matter. He found an engine in the ditch, and a pile of broken flat cars thirty feet high on the track, while Jim sat on the top rail of an adjacent fence, serenely smoking a corn-cob pipe, and calmly surveying the wreck. You see, he had deliberately taken his oldest engine, hitched thirty dilapidated flat cars to it, taken up two rails at that spot, and then, after telling the trainmen to get out of the way of splinters, had run the train buck up the track a mile, pulled the throttle wide open, jumped off and sauntered leisurely down the track to look at the ruins and witness the discomfiture of his enemies.

"What's the matter here, Mr. Ashley?" asked the Major as, in company with the conductor of the militia train, he approached the silent Sphinx on the fence.

"H-h-had a w-w-wreck,' said Jim.

"When will you get it cleared off?" asked the Major.

"Well,' said Jim, 'my m-m-men are pretty busy up the track, and I r-r-reckon it'll be about t-t-three days. B-but it's only twenty miles to the end of my t-t-track, and you c-can walk it in a day if you're in a h-h-hurry.'

"Of course the soldiers didn't care to hoof it that far, and when, after a long detour that took them at least twelve hours, they arrived at the seat of war, they found the track laid thro' and two of Jim's engines tooting defiance at them from the other side, so they turned around and went home again, and Jim's bonds were saved.

"Doesn't look like a man who had ever deliberately wrecked a train in time of peace, does he? But he has, though."

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug., 1, 1889.

About 12 years ago, while employed as conductor on the N. Y. C. R. R., I was badly troubled with kidney and urinary difficulty. I employed some of the best doctors in the country, but failed to get anything but temporary relief. Three years ago I began taking the F. E. C. Kidney Remedy, and before taking one bottle I was satisfied I was getting better. After taking six bottles I was cured and have never had a return of my trouble. Am a well man, have gained 40 lbs. and feel at least 21 years younger.

FRANK CHADWICK.

OBITUARY.

George W Clark died Feb. 11th, 1890, at nearly 72 years of age.

The deceased was born in Groton, Tompkins Co., New York, April 24, 1818. He was the son of Eliphalet Clark, who, with his wife and family, came to Michigan via the Erie Canal and Lake Erie in the spring of 1829, and settled in Tecumseh. Two years later he moved to Monroe county and located in Raisinville. The subject of this sketch lived at home until the age of 21, receiving his education from the district school. He was first married to Charlotte Youngloye, who died after bearing him a son, and a second time united in marriage, Feb. 11, 1844, in Raisinville, Monroe Co. with Harriet Barnaby. Mr. Clark began his business career as a blacksmith, in Hillsdale, following this occupation for about three years. He then moved with his family to a new farm in Raisinville. He followed farming until 1861, when he moved to Ridgeway, Lenawee Co., and engaged in the mercantile business with his brother Alonzo. This firm did a very successful business during the war. At the close of the war his brother retired, the new firm appearing under the name of George W. Clark and Son. He continued in the mercantile business until 1887, when his health forbade his continuance in active life.

Mr. Clark was liberally endowed with good common sense, having an indomitable will, combined with untiring industry and unquestioned honesty. With these characteristics it is not surprising that he was successful as a blacksmith, farmer and merchant. As a business man he will be remembered as a man of the highest integrity, whose word was as good as his bond. As a Christian, he was, as in all other things, unpretentious, being a consistent member of the M. E. Church. As a neighbor he was kind, obliging and true. In his home, where he was best known, his splendid qualities of mind and heart were fully understood and appreciated. It was in his home that he found his greatest delight, for through his unselfishness and kindness and love his home came very near the ideal. In his death the community has lost a noble citizen, the church a true and valuable member, and his home a tender, loving husband and father.

DANIEL PERRY ALLEN GONE.

The subject of our sketch was born in the town of Eggrament, Berkshire county, Massachusetts, on the 14th day of February, A. D. 1798. He was a cousin of Ethan Allen, of Revolutionary fame, and was one of fourteen children, only eight of whom grew up, and of these five alone,—Mary, John, Perry, Lambert and George,—passed middle age. The father, Elijah Allen, was an officer who fought under Benedict Arnold and was with him in the memorable hungry march to Dubeck.

In his seventeenth year the deceased enlisted in the war of 1812, remaining with the army until the close of the war. On Jan. 27th, 1824, he was married to Anna Shephard in Hillsdale, Columbia Co., N. Y. June 1st, 1835, the family started for Michigan and arrived in Franklin on the 12th, where they have since resided.

Four children were born to them,—Henry, George, Chastina and James,—all of whom, with the wife, who was born Feb. 10th, 1804, and four grandchildren, survive him. James and George married and settled close to the old home. For sixty-six years death seemed to have forgotten this household. The immediate family circle has remained unbroken until the husband and father has been called home. A member of the Methodist Church for many years, he regularly attended the M. E. Church at Tipton as long as his health would permit. Always a sterling Democrat, his first vote was cast for James Monroe, and he has voted for every Democratic nominee since, casting his last vote for Cleveland last November. He was pensioned by the government March 9th, 1878.

A faithful husband, a loving father, a true friend, an honest, upright man, always bright and cheerful, the face that has been familiar to so many of us since childhood will be sorely missed and ever remembered.

Died, on Friday, Feb. 7th, 1890, near Tecumseh, Mich., Mrs. Anna M. Bryan, wife of Newton L. Bryan.

Anna M. Glenn, daughter of Samuel P. and Elizabeth Glenn, was born in Anthony township, Montrose Co., Penn., April 8th, 1854. In 1857 Mr. and Mrs. Glenn came with their family to Michigan and found a home for themselves in the valley, a half mile north of the Raisin Valley Seminary, where Mrs. Glenn still resides. On her nineteenth birthday, April 8th, 1873, Anna was married to Newton L. Bryan and from that time until her death lived happily with him in their pleasant little home two and a half miles southwest of Tecumseh. On Jan. 20th last, Mrs. Bryan was very severely burned by her clothes accidentally taking fire. She bore her intense sufferings with great fortitude and patience. Everything that professional services and kind and loving attention of friends could do to give her comfort and save her life was done, but all proved unavailing to restore her, for on the night of Feb. 7, nearly three weeks from the date of her accident, she was released from her sufferings and entered into rest.

Mrs. Bryan united with the Presbyterian Church of Tecumseh at the age of sixteen. Her spirit and deportment have been such ever since as to win the loving confidence of her fellow members and the respect of all who knew her. There has been universal sympathy with herself and her family in view of her suffering and universal regret at her early death. Yet must we all try to say, "The will of the Lord be done." Mrs. Bryan leaves three sons, the eldest thirteen, bequeathing to them a mother's affectionate and faithful training and her prayers.

"Bub, don't you know it's wrong and wicked to catch fish on Sunday," asked a Palmyra minister of a kid who was patiently waiting for a bite as he sat on the river bank Sunday, holding his pole with a tight grip. Looking over his shoulder and glancing at the dominie, while a look of contempt swept over his face, he simply said: "Who's ketched any fish?"—Adrian Press.

OVER THE RIVER.

Mrs. Caroline Bills, widow of the Hon. Perley Bills, of Tecumseh, and second daughter of Isaac and Electa Brown, was born at Charlemont, Mass., April 27th, 1817.

Having passed through the schools of her native place she completed her education at Bennington, Vt. In 1837 her parents removed to Aurora, Ill., while she accepted a position as assistant in the Tecumseh Academy, of which Mr. Bills was principal. The school then occupied the old Tecumseh Court House and University building. The following year she was united in marriage to Mr. Bills and both continued teaching until he was admitted to the bar and commenced the practice of law in 1843. With superior culture and remarkable cheerfulness and sweetness of disposition her success as a teacher is sufficiently attested by the undying esteem, amounting almost to veneration, with which she is still regarded by the surviving members of those Academic classes of more than half a century ago.

Before leaving her native place she became an ardent Christian and a youthful member of the Presbyterian Church of Charlemont, and during the long years since intervening has always maintained not only an unblemished Christian character, but also an earnest interest in the Church, Sabbath School and society of the home of her adoption. Public spirited and always foremost in every good word and work, her sudden death, on Wednesday evening, February 4th, 1890, was a shock, not only to her immediate family, but to the entire community. Always an unvarying friend to the poor and needy, a safe counselor and earnest helper in all their troubles and vicissitudes, her loss to them is one that cannot be easily supplied. As a kind and affectionate wife and as a mother, unwearied in earnest zeal and thoughtful care for the children of her love, she had no superiors. She was the idol of the little grandchildren of her home, whose innocent prattling she greatly enjoyed, and of whom she was an almost constant companion.

In the midst of home duties, and, so far as we know, without premonition, the call came to her on Monday evening, Feb. 3d, to depart from her home on earth to that house not made with hands, whither so many of her loved ones had gone before, though she lingered unconscious, beyond the reach of medical aid or care, until the Wednesday following, before her freed spirit took its final flight.

She leaves as surviving relatives her sister, Mrs. Harriet Barr, of East Saginaw; her three daughters, Mrs. Caroline M. Saviers, wife of Gen'l Lemuel Saviers, of St. Louis, Mich., Mrs. Mary H. Church, wife of Gen'l N. Church, of Alma, Mich., and Mrs. Harriet V. Brooks, M. D., of East Saginaw, wife of Hon. G. B. Brooks, and her two sons, Oscar P. Bills, of the banking firm of O. P. Bills & Co., of Tecumseh, Mich., and Chandler D. Bills, who, with his family resided with her in the family residence at Tecumseh, besides her numerous grandchildren and her niece, Mrs. Geo. W. Weatherhead, of South Lyons, Mich.

Her children having been summoned, were all at her bedside at the time of her decease, except Mrs. N. Church, who was then on her way home from Europe. A large concourse of citizens, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, attended the funeral services at the house on Friday afternoon, Feb. 7th, conducted in an earnest and impressive manner by the Rev. Wm. H. Babbitt, pastor of the deceased.

The history of many a human life is all told in these words: "She hath done what she could;"—did it quietly, in patience and in love. Such was the life of Mrs. Emeline M. Pattison, who departed this life on February 2d, 1890. She was born in the town of Middlesex, Yates County, N. Y., Aug. 27, 1826. She married B. F. Pattison Dec. 16, 1851, and was the mother of three children, who, save one, passed on before her. The husband and son and two brothers mourn her departure. Like Whittier, they "....."mourn for household voices gone,

And yet feel as he, that God has led their dear ones on,
And He can do no wrong."

The funeral was held at the residence on Maiden Lane, Feb. 4th, at one o'clock p. m. Many old friends and neighbors who knew her,—for she had lived in this community over forty years,—and knew her to love and esteem, were present and blended their sympathy and prayers and tears with those who were overshadowed with sorrow. The burial was at Richard's cemetery, Raisin, Lenawee Co., Mich. The services were conducted by Rev. J. M. Getchell, who briefly, yet touchingly, gave the mourning words of comfort, life and prayer. What joy must one day be when Heaven gives to Human souls beauty for ashes, and for heaviness the garment of praise!

"MY STORY OF THE WAR."

Mrs. Mary A. Livermore's Famous Book

We regard this splendid book as a wholly unique work, for it presents the womanly, or what may very appropriately be termed the heavenly side of the war, and this has never hitherto been written.

But the illustrations! An able critic recently said: "This is the most richly embellished work ever published in America." We endorse this opinion. There are splendid steel-plate portraits of famous nurses of Union soldiers, and many plates illustrating hospital scenes and thrilling incidents in a woman's army life. No newspaper description can do these costly plates justice. They must be seen to be appreciated. There are also splendid facsimile plates of famous old battle flags, from photograps and paintings made from the original flags, printed in sixteen colors from one hundred and twenty-eight engraved stones. The story of each flag is told, with pathetic incidents attending the death of color bearers who died under their folds.

JOHN G. CARLISLE.

The FORUM is of great value to that part of my college work which deals with practical politics and current questions. Two sets are hardly enough for daily use by students.—Prof. ALFRED BUSHNELL HART, of Harvard.

I consider THE FORUM as furnishing the most intelligent and sympathetic audience that a thoughtful writer can find to address in any land.—Prof. ALEXANDER WINCHELL, of the University of Michigan.

THE FORUM continues to hold its place as the foremost of our magazines, for the variety, value, and the weight of its contributions.—THE NEW YORK TIMES.

There has come forward no problem of grave importance since THE FORUM was established that has not been discussed in its pages by masters of the subject. Announcements of forthcoming articles can seldom be made long in advance, for THE FORUM's discussions are always of problems of present concern. Every such problem that the year 1890 will bring forward will be discussed, whether in politics, or religion, or social science, or practical affairs. The January number will contain a reply by ex-Speaker J. G. CARLISLE to Senator Cullom's recent article on "How the Tariff Affects the Farmer."

A BOOMING BUSINESS.

The Tecumseh Coal and Manufacturing Company Opening the New Year with Plenty of Orders and Bright Prospects.

While out on a tour for news last Tuesday afternoon, we dropped into the office of the Tecumseh Coal & Manufacturing Co. near the Lake Shore depot. We found the manager, Mr. S. W. Temple, at home, and he wore a good-natured countenance, too. Upon his invitation we took a stroll through the yard and planing mill, and were quite surprised to see the extent of the business now being done at this establishment. Since the last reorganization of the Company the policy has been to go slow, but safe and sure. A good business was enjoyed last year, but no effort was made to expand it faster than could be done with safety, and with the hard times then existing it was thought prudent to do a close business, rather than a large one. The annual meeting of the Company was held in January, when a detailed report of last year's business was presented, which was extremely satisfactory.

It was then determined by the stockholders to launch out and push the business during the coming year. Mr. Temple first visited the lumber centers in the northern part of the State and bought a very large stock of lumber, which is being received daily. The yards now contain over $10,000 worth of lumber which has been taken in during the past month. Having completed his purchases, he turned his face eastward and visited Toledo, Cleveland, Pittsburg and other cities, where he secured a large amount of gilt-edged orders for finished work, such as sash, doors frames and blinds. Orders were placed aggregating about $50,000, which will require several months to fill, with the shop running to its fullest capacity. One to two carloads of finished work will be turned out weekly, on permanent orders that are already booked, to say nothing of local orders which may be expected during the spring and summer months. The planing mill is a veritable bee hive of industry now, about forty regular hands being employed in the establishment, and the manager confidently expects to increase the number considerably during the next six months. We are glad to see these indications of prosperity. This establishment has met with some reverses during the past few years, but we believe that the present company is established on a stable basis. Mr. S. W. Temple has both experience and business grit and he is bound to build up a big concern within the next few years. We feel confident that his ambition will be gratified.

Mr. Wm. Demott is Vice President of the Company, Dr. B. F. Steinhoff is Secretary and Claude Temple Treasurer. They are all lending their best efforts to building up the business of the concern, and placing it upon a substantial and paying basis.

THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

TECUMSEH, MICH., FEB. 20, 1890

LOCAL AND PERSONAL

Geo. A. Kies of Elkhart was in town last week.

Elbridge Hyde of Adrian spent last Sabbath under the paternal roof.

A rare chance to buy a Carpet, Lace Curtains, Cloaks, and Blankets.
Anderson & Co.

Miss. Kate Bremner of Detroit is the guest of Mrs. N. M. Sutton this week.

Col. Church wife and daughter of Ithica spent part of last week as the guests of O. P. Bills.

Miss Maggie Clarkson has returned home from a very enjoyable visit with relatives in New York City.

Remember the W. C. T. U. entertainment at Dr. H. L. Stewart's next Saturday afternoon and evening.

A new seventy horse power engine and boiler has been purchased at the Lansing Iron Works for the table company.

Last Monday forenoon Will Anderson sent out eight boxes of Good Cheer Soap. A pretty good half day's work.

A Piano recital by Prof. Sherwood will be held in Tecumseh early next month. Fuller particulars will be given hereafter.

A pleasant social party was given by Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hollister last Monday evening. Music and cards were the chief attractions.

Ed Hough of Ypsilanti was visiting his Tecumseh friends over Sunday. Ed is prospering in his present location.

We want cash. All persons who are indebted to us, please call and settle by Feb. 1st, and oblige,
Anderson & Co.

We are indebted to Thos. R. Lovett for the late copies of the Huron, South Dakota, Herald—Democrat. Mr. Lovett has got pretty well "out West."

Geo Miles of the Detroit Tribune staff was in town Monday, and gave us a call, of course. Geo. is well pleased with his present position and evidently fills the bill, for he is kept right there.

Francis A. Dewey of Cambridge was a caller at the HERALD office one day last week. His health has been quite poorly this winter and this was the first time he had been to Tecumseh in several weeks.

"The City of St. Paul" will be the subject of a four-page supplement, by William Willard Howard, in the number of Harper's Weekly to be published February 19th. The article will be profusely illustrated.

An agent of the English Syndicate, which has been trying to buy up the flouring mills on the line of the Michigan Central Railroad, has been operating in Tecumseh. Whether he accomplished anything here, time will tell.

The Standard, owned and published by Henry George, is one of the oldest papers in this country. It advocates Free Trade, the Single Tax, and ballot Reform. Sample copies are sent free. Address The Standard, 12 Union Square, New York City.

The report has been circulated about town that Henry W. Stevens had withdrawn from the postoffice contest. We learn that this report is entirely erroneous, that he is in the field to-day. He has not deemed it advisable to circulate a petition until the proper time arrives.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Meeker of Chicago were the guests of Dr. Meeker last week. Mrs. Meekespe nt the entire week here. He came out on Friday and they both returned on Monday last. His visits are short, as his position in the North Chicago Street Ry offices keeps him closely confined to his business duties.

The next dance of the series will be a masquerade and will take place to morrow, Friday, evening at the old G. A. R. Hall. Music will be furnished by Skinner and Southwicks Orchestra. Dance tickets only fifty cents. Refreshments will be served by H. L. Jones at fifty cents a couple. Those wishing to take part in the masque are requested to come early.

Last Wednesday being the birthday of President Lincoln was celebrated throughout the land by the camps of the Sons of Veterans. The Tecumseh camp held a very pleasant social at their rooms on that evening. Speeches were made by comrades J. W. Wightman, J. D. Shull and others. Music was furnished by Will and Edith Ingersoll, and others, and an enjoyable evening was passed by all present.

The services in St. Peter's Church during the season of Lent will be on Sundays at the usual hours 10 and 5 P. M. On Wednesday's the Common Prayer and Litany will be said at 10:30 A. M. On Friday the shortened Service as authorized, will be said, and a lecture delivered at seven P. M. Special daily services during Holy Week

Little Trixie is coming March 1st.

Look out for Little Trixie Saturday March 1st.

L. M. Waldron visited friends in Weston last week.

Chas. Burger of Elgin, Ill. is visiting his parents in Tecumseh.

Geo. H. Seelye is spending a few days at his old home in Eaton Rapids.

N. M. Sutton will attend the Michigan Club Banquet at Detroit on Friday the 21st.

Wm. Bresie of Decatur, Ill was in Tecumseh a day or two the first of the week.

Seth Bean, Capt. Fred B. Wood and Prosecutor Morgan were in town Tuesday afternoon.

C. H. Hopkins has gone to Battle Creek for a few weeks visit with his daughter, Mrs. Will Wooden.

Attorney Wightman went to Lansing Monday to appear in the Ridgeway School District case.

Mrs. H. E. Wheeler of Adrian visited in Tecumseh over Sunday.

A report was received here on Tuesday that Jas. Glasgow was badly hurt. He was breaking on a freight train on the Michigan Central road and lost a hand while coupling cars at Dexter.

Abner Wilson, in addition to raising several thousand cabbage plants, for his own use, is raising 50.000 celery plants for the new celery company of Franklin.

E. A. Tribou, who has been suffering from rheumatism for several weeks, had a serious fall on Chicago street last Saturday. Although quite badly shaken up he sustained no serious injury.

H. Brewer & Co. are driven with orders now for tile machines. Most of the machines they are furnishing now are of the Sword make and these are all sent South. These machines seem to work best in Southern clay, while the Tiffany and Brewer patterns give better satisfaction in the western states.

The rumor that Alva Spayde contemplated leaving town is without foundation. He has become the sole owner of the stock of clothing, and boots and shoes in the Mills block, and proposes to remain right here in Tecumseh. What is more, he is offering bigger bargains than ever this winter. Read his new announcement on the first page.

About forty members of the Masonic fraternity from Tecumseh attended the Knights Templar party at Adrian last Friday evening, and report a most enjoyable time. The Adrian Masons left nothing undone to entertain their guests in a sumptuous manner. A special car went down from here returning shortly after midnight, the entire delegation being conveyed to and from the depot in hacks. The dancers numbered over one hundred couples.

The Farmer's Union was appointed at Alonzo Biddle's for Friday evening, Feb. 14th. The officers of the Union, being detained at home, by the storm, the company proceeded to entertain themselves, which they did, to the satisfaction of all present. The program consisted mostly of music. A short intermission was taken during which time the hostess served refreshments, liberally. The party adjourned at an early hour, but decided to repeat that program in the near future.

The W. C. T. U. had the pleasure of visiting Mrs. Kyle's room, in the east branch building, last Thursday afternoon, and listened to one of the most interesting Temperance programs, ever given in Tecumseh. The exercises consisted of Instrumental and Vocal music and Recitations The music was in charge of Miss Grayson. The selections by the Teacher, were all of the best. They were well committed and delivered in tones that could be heard throughout the room. There was a very good attendance, and it reflected a great deal of credit on both Teacher and Pupils.

The Tecumseh W. C. T. U. will give their Washington Entertainment at the home of Dr. H. L. Stewart, Feb. 22d afternoon and evening. The program will consist of Instrumental and vocal music, by our best home talent, and recitations. The Musical program will commence promptly at eight o'clock. Usual supper will be served from 5 to 10 P. M. at ten cents. Oysters 20 cents. Admission fee of 5 cents charged at the door. Object to replenish the W. C. T. U. Treasury.

We call attention to the ad. of Messrs. Powell Brothers, whose stock has become so well known throughout America that no argument is needed to convince one's desiring choice animals of any breed, of the wisdom of visiting their establishment before making a selection. They feel justified in saying that their experience as breeders and importers, their facilities, low rates of transportation, large numbers constantly on hand, (now being over 1000 head of pure bred live stock), and the extent of their business, enables them to offer inducements to any wishing to purchase fine live stock, not surpassed by any firm in this country.

Lots of fun in Little Trixie.

Charley Smith, of Onsted was in town yesterday.

Claude VanTine, of Oscoda, is spending a few days at the old home.

Editor Stearns of the Adrian Press gave us a short call Tuesday afternoon.

Miss Nellie Rowley, of Hillsdale, is the guest of Ella Jackson this week.

J. S. Gilman has been quite sick for the past few days, but is on the gain now.

If anybody has found a five dollar bill, it is Ed. Rowland's. He lost it Saturday evening.

Satterthwaite Bros. & Boyd tell a story about the Garland Stoves in a new card this week.

Our Britton letter arrived too late last week so we have two budgets rolled into one this week.

Chas. E. Barry has bought the D. W. Clark grocery stock and will open the store in a day or two.

Evening meetings are in progress this week at the M. E. church, every evening except Saturday.

E. E. Russell has rented a house in Jackson, and his family will make their home in that city hereafter.

Wm. Gray is at Ionia this week attending the State Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows. There are nearly one thousand delegates and visitors in attendance.

Chas Bidwell, of Raisin, has rented his farm and will have an auction sale of stock and farm implements at the premises on Wednesday of next week, Feb. 26. A large list of property will be sold.

Mrs. Dr. Jones invited a few of her many friends to join in commemorating the 16th anniversary of her marriage which occured last evening. The Doctor himself was taken wholly by surprise, and a most enjoyable evening was passed by the lucky ones who were invited.

Co. C. a held special election on Tuesday evening to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of 1st Lieut. Doke. Second Lieutenant Kyle was promoted to First, and Will Hayden was elected to second place. Both are excellent selections. By the resignation of Lieut. Doke, Co. C. loses one of its oldest and most active members. He was one of the most proficent officers in the state service.

Levi B. Stevens has obtained a position as proof reader on the Detroit Free Press staff and began work last Monday. Levi has almost grown up in the HERALD office and we sincerely regret his departure. But he got as far up the ladder as he could expect to in a country office, and we cannot blame him for wishing to step up a little higher. The HERALD congratulates him on his good luck and extends to him its heartiest wishes for his future welfare.

DR. BENNETT will be at the Lilley House Wednesday, Feb. 26. Trouble of Liver, Kidneys and stomach is his specialty and do you want to hear an explanation on them as he sees there is no trouble in them, but a lack of power which drives them. Did you ever think of it? He will explain as he has proven in the past seven years, to any one, free of charge. Go and hear ye that are troubled in this way. Piles of all kinds cured, no matter how bad or how long standing.

Card of Thanks.

To all those friends who so kindly favored me with their sympathy and assistance in my recent affliction, I tender my sincere thanks.

HUMAN NATURE.

If you are interested in the study of HUMAN NATURE and Character, and the improvement of yourself and others in any way, we would like to call your attention to the PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL AND SCIENCE OF HEALTH, a well-known magazine which has been published for fifty years, and is devoted to all that will improve men Mentally, Morally, or Physically. It is the only magazine of its kind published in this country, and in every way the most important.

The specialty of PORTRAITS of distinguished, or notorious persons, with studies of their character and sketches of their lives, which has always been a marked and attractive feature of the JOURNAL, will still lead the host of good things prepared for the reader.

No one can study themselves or others and not be greatly benefited by the results, and therefore no one can afford NOT to read the JOURNAL. A knowledge of HUMAN NATURE would enable us to understand ourselves and others and to avoid many of the disappointments in life.

TERMS.—Monthly at $2 a year, or 20 cents a Number. To each new subscriber is given either the PHRENOLOGICAL BUST OF NEW PHRENOLOGICAL CHART Premium. When the premiums are sent, 15 cents extra must be received with each subscription to pay postage on the JOURNAL and the expense of boxing and packing the Bust, which will be sent by express, or No. 2, a smaller size, or the Chart Premium, will be sent by mail, postpaid. "When he was within twenty yards I stooped down, and grasping Gumbo by the ankles from behind, lifted his legs from under him, making him fall forward on his hands. I ran him right at the lion, wheelbarrow fashion, the bewildered nigger instinctively putting one hand before the other before he knew what he was about. This brought us within a spring of the lion. I hurled his legs forward over his head with such force that when they struck the ground his body rose and he described a convulsive somersault. This carried him two lengths ahead of me—into the very jaws of the lion, if the latter had stayed"—

Big Banquet of Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

OHIO'S GOVERNOR RESPONDS TO A TOAST.

Hon. W. E. Russell, of Massachusetts, the Orator of the Evening—His Magnificent Tribute to the Deceased Southern Editor, Henry W. Grady.

ATLANTA, GA., February 15.—The first annual banquet of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce was held last evening at the Kimball house, about 400 guests being present. Among the prominent guests from the north were:

New York—President C. S. Smith, of the Chamber of Commerce; J. Edward Simmons, president of the Fourth National bank; A. Foster Higgins, F. B. Thurber, John A. Stewart, John Sloane, John E. Parsons, James D. Smith, R. T. Wilson, jr., John C. Calhoun, H. R. Garden, John H. Inman, Russell Harrison, James Swann, John H. Hall, G. J. Wetsler and C. N. Bliss.

Boston—Jonathan A. Lane, president of the Merchants Association; George W. Morse, Hon. W. E. Russell, Colonel Charles H. Taylor, of the Globe; Weston Lewis, George F. Babbitt, of the Herald; Frank Huckings, Hon. E. J. Hathorn, Hon. E. P. Wilbur, O. D. Richardson, W. J. Draper, Isaac P. Edmunds, Stephen B. Simmons and John J. Henry.

Chicago—J. P. Rumsey and M. J. Downing.

Ohio—Governor Campbell, Hon. J. B. Hughes, Claude Meeker, Colonel Price McKinney, G. H. Burrows, N. R. Adrian, H. H. Meyer and C. H. VanCleaf.

West Virginia—Congressman Wilson.

Denver—President Chamberlain, of the chamber of commerce.

A telegram of regret was received from Hon. C. M. Depew, of New York.

President J. G. Oglesby, of the Atlanta chamber of commerce, welcomed the visitors in behalf of that body, and Governor Gordon, in the first regular speech of the evening, welcomed them on behalf of the state. Mayor Glenn then spoke for the city.

Hon. W. E. Russell, of Massachusetts, the orator of the occasion, in his eloquent address, spoke as follows of the late Henry W. Grady, of the Atlanta Constitution. Mr. Russell said: Gladly I find myself to night in the land of the Sunny South and under the charm of its warm hearted hospitality. I come without office or title, yet bearing, I am sure, from the old Bay State, greeting and good wishes to a younger of the thirteen sisters, who, joined in sympathy and friendship in the days of peril and oppression, now in time of peace, independence and liberty, are united as parts of a great republic, joint heirs of its glorious heritage and equal factors in achieving its grand destiny. May we tonight, meeting as fellow-countrymen, pledge anew our love to a common country; and sharing in her glory, consider the duties and perils that confront her. In this spirit there is no north, no south, nor east nor west; no burden on one that is not felt by all; the prosperity of each is the sacred duty of all.

I know the sorrow that pervades this meeting: I feel the thought in every mind. A friend, a leader, statesman and patriot has gone. He loved the south, but spoke for all. With matchless eloquence and the manly frankness of a noble soul he proclaimed the undying loyalty of 70,000,000 people to our common country, to all her institutions, and to all her laws; and then he asked forbearance, sympathy and aid while the new south adjusted the past to the present, and solved those momentous problems vital to her; vital to all; and gave his life to the discharge of this patriotic duty.

Responses to toasts followed from Governor Campbell, of Ohio; Hon. Charles Smith, of New York; Hon. Patrick Calhoun, of Atlanta; Congressman Wilson, Hon. W. E. Russell and Hon. Jonathan Lane.

The visitors will be entertained at breakfast at the Kimball house this morning, after which they will be shown the various points about the city. Returning to the chamber of commerce at noon an informal reception will be held, the citizens generally taking part. The Piedmont driving club will entertain the visitors this afternoon at lunch, and the Capital City club will give them a reception tonight.

BRITISH PRESS

On the Report to Parliament of Parnell's Case.

LONDON, February 15.—The Standard says: "We may say generally that while the verdict favors the accused upon a few of the most heinous charges, in support of which few people expected any proof would be brought, there are more than enough behind to substantiate all that has been generally believed of the connection between home rulers and conspiracies against law, and to bring home to respondents at same time moral responsibility for the worst crimes committed by the league and its agents. If Parnell condemned crime in one breath he encouraged it in another. Whatever his supporters may say the independent public will form but one opinion of conduct that three impartial judges so severely censured."

The Star (T. P. O'Connor's paper), says the report is a triumphant acquittal.

The Pall Mall Gazette says the report is a more complete vindication of Parnellites and more sweeping condemnation of the Times than the most sanguine home rulers dared to hope for.

The St. James Gazette says it would be a monstrous perversion of the report to infer from it a general verdict of not guilty.

DUBLIN, February 15.—The Freemans Journal says the report of the Parnell commission acquits Parnellite members of the House all along the line, and is virtually a verdict against their accusers.

A GREAT SCHEME.

The River Business to be Revived Again.

KANSAS CITY, MO., February 15.—J. M. Phillips, of New York, representing the Merchants' River Line Navigation Company, is in the city en route to Omaha, where final arrangements will be made for establishing a river freight line from that place to Pittsburg, Pa. The line will be put into operation within a year, and will consist of sixty light draught river steamers and 300 barges. It is understood the Inman line is backing the enterprise with the purpose to secure an inlet from the seaboard by which it can compete for the export grain trade of the northwest.

Copyright Bill.

WASHINGTON, February 15.—Congressman Adams, of the House judicial committee, reported favorably on the international copyright bill.

CRUEL CAPTAIN

McCalla's Tyranny on U. S. Steamer Enterprise.

HIS BOAT BEARING THE BODY OF MR. PENDLETON.

Struck One of His Men With a Sword—Has the Engineer and Ensign Below the Hatches—A Sensation on the Tapis—Two Court Martials a Brewing.

WASHINGTON, February 15.—From private advices received at the navy department it would appear that the arrival of United States steamer Enterprise in New York from Europe, early next month, will be the signal for somewhat of a sensation in naval circles. This vessel is under the command of Commander B. H. McCalla, who has the reputation of being a strict disciplinarian. He has been some time abroad on the European station and is now on his way home bearing the body of ex-Minister Pendleton, who died in Germany. Upward of seventy seamen, the letters referred to state, have deserted from time to time, unable to bear what they consider the captain's harshness, and there is a rumor of his having struck one man with his sword, injuring him severely. Ensign Kline and Chief Engineer Entwistle are now under hatches, for offenses, awaiting the arrival of the ship home, when there will be at least two courts-martial.

Kline's offense, it is stated, was "sleeping on watch and denying it." The offense for which Engineer Entwistle was suspended, was talking back to the captain when the latter was administering a reproof. The two officers were having a conversation, so the story goes, when the commander took occasion to use language which led the engineer to remonstrate. For this he was imprisoned below deck.

THE FAIR OF 1892.

CHAIRMAN CHANDLER AT LAST MAKES A REPORT.

It Favors a World's Fair, and is Accompanied by Two Bills—How the Question of Site is to be Determined.

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 15.—Chairman Chandler, of the world's fair committee, presented a report and two bills to accompany it. The bills have already been printed. The report is very brief, and recommends the holding of a world's fair in 1892 to commemorate the discovery of America and to do honor to the memory of Columbus. It says it is impracticable to comprise in one bill the ten propositions which would make it suit all points desiring the exposition, and therefore presents two bills, one of which is suitable to Washington, the other to St. Louis, Chicago or New York. It urges the importance of an exposition, which shall not only be participated in by all parts of the country and continent, but in which all sections shall be asked to join. It recommends a general discussion of the two bills and the subject generally, including the propositions of the various cities, and that on the day closing this discussion, a vote be had on the question of site, each member to announce viva voce his choice of site, and the balloting to be continued until one city receives a majority of the votes cast, after which the bill is to be completed.

Canada and United States.

WASHINGTON, February 15.—The modus vivendi between Canada and United States expired by limitation at noon. Inquiry at state department failed to elicit any information as to whether it would be continued, and officials claimed utter ignorance on subject. At the White House, Secretary Halford said he had no official information, but he believed the modus vivendi would be continued, as soon as Secretary Blaine and the British minister had agreed upon certain details, they had power to contique it. At the navy department emphatic denial was given by acting Secretary Ramsey of the story that the United States men-of-war had been ordered to Canada waters.

IMMENSE LAND SLIDE

Blocks the Course of Trinity River, California.

WEAVERSVILLE, CAL., February 15.—One of the biggest land slides ever known on the Pacific coast occurred fifty miles below here a few days ago, sliding into the Trinity river, raising the water to the depth of three hundred feet, and backing up the river fourteen miles.

The slide was about a mile long and four hundred yards wide. Many buildings were swept away with their entire contents. Two Chinamen were buried in the debris and several persons barely escaped. Great damage was done to ranch and mining property.

Suspicious to Say the Least.

ROCHESTER, N. H., February 15.—Isaac Sawtelle refuses to make a statement, except to declare that his brother is all right, and that everything will be explained when the time comes. The search for Hiram's body has been fruitless.

His Chum Missing.

BOSTON, February 14.—C. L. Blood, of this city, a so-called doctor, who was a crony of Isaac Sawtelles in the prison, is missing, and it is suspected that he had something to do with Hiram Sawtelles' murder.

A U. S. MARSHAL SHOT.

While After Election Law Violaters He is Ambushed.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., February 15.—Deputy U. S. Marshal Saunders was shot last night near Quincy, Garden county, while attempting to serve warrants for the violation of election laws. Marshall Mazell organized a posse at Quincy, and sent it out under Saunders' command. When several miles out of town the posse was fired on by parties in ambush. Saunders was instantly killed and several others of the posse seriously injured.

DEATH AT A FESTIVAL.

A Sad Accident Overtakes a Wedding Party.

PARIS, February 15.—A vehicle carrying a newly wedded pair and several friends was upset yesterday at Pontivy while they were returning from a wedding. The party was precipitated into a river and the bride and bridegroom and ten others drowned.

A Crooked Official.

CINCINNATI, O., February 15.—It has been found that W. R. Forbush, Cincinnati's inspector of buildings, is short in his accounts with the city $1,455.50.

TEMPTATION OF JESUS.

LESSON VIII, FIRST QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, FEB. 23.

Text of the Lesson, Luke iv, 1-12—Commit Verses 1-4—Golden Text, Heb. ii, 18—Commentary by the Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadelphia.]

1. "And Jesus being full of the Holy Ghost, returned from Jordan." This lesson seems to follow immediately the last one, which told us of the baptism of Jesus by John in Jordan, and of the descent of the 1, 2. "And was led by the Spirit into the wilderness, being forty days tempted of the devil."

"And in those days He did eat nothing; and when they were ended, He afterward hungered." The forty days' fast reminds us of the fastings of the two men who afterwards appeared with Him on the Mount of Transfiguration. Of Moses it is written, in reference to both periods of forty days and nights when he was in the mount with God, that he did neither eat bread nor drink water (Deut. ix, 9, 18), and of Elijah it is written that he went in the strength of that meal (which the angel had prepared) forty days and forty nights unto Horeb the Mount of God (I Kings xix, 8). There is no doubt more in the forty days' fast of these wonderful three than we have yet seen or shall see till the kingdom comes; but we shall do well day by day to see no man save Jesus only (Matt. xvii, 8).

3. "If Thou be the Son of God, command this stone that it be made bread." The father of lies insinuates that perhaps He is not the Son of God, but only a mere man, just a poor carpenter from Nazareth, making pretensions of being some great one, and that He had better return to his humble home or else give some token of His power.

4. "It is written that man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God." This is the reply of Christ to the tempter. The outward indications were that God had failed him, but Jesus places the word of God against all other evidences and rests unmoved on what is written. Believing is better than seeing. The Word of God is more than food or raiment.

5-7. "If Thou therefore wilt worship me, all shall be Thine." The statements of these verses that the devil took him to an high mountain and shewed Him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time, cannot be understood or explained by us, but can be received, on the authority of the Holy Spirit, who, through the servant of God, wrote these things, and implicitly believed. The full power of the devil we are not familiar with (nor do we want to be), nor is it fully revealed. Jesus elsewhere calls him the prince of this world, and Paul speaks of him as the prince of the power of the air and the god of this world; while John, in Revelation, speaks of a time when the devil will give to Antichrist that which in our lesson he offered to Christ (John xii, 31; xiv, 30; Eph. ii, 2; II Cor. iv, 4; Rev. xiii, 2, 7); so that his boast in this temptation does not seem to have been altogether a vain one. This world is the Lord's by creation; He gave it to Adam, but Adam, by his sin, gave the devil a claim to it which he has not failed to make use of, and it is true today that "The whole world lieth in the evil one" (I John v, 10, R. V.). This statement is true not only of heathendom, but also of Christendom, and, in some measure, of the Christian church. If the manifest works of the devil indicate his property, then that which he does not control is a small section of earth and a small number of people. But Daniel saw in vision the kingdom and dominion under the whole heaven given to the Son of Man and to the saints of the Most High (Dan. vii, 13, 14, 27), and this temptation was to obtain by a short cut and apart from suffering that which in due time will be all His. (See Rev. xi, 15, 18.) The two classes of people in the world today are those who, by bowing down to the devil, take their portion now; and those who, by bowing down to Christ, are willing to wait for their portion till the kingdom comes and the whole earth is manifestly His. It is to be feared that many who profess to bear the name of Christ are often found bowing down to the devil for the sake of a little earthly gain or pleasure.

8. "Get thee behind me, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and Him only shalt thou serve." Again Jesus is victor, and the sword of the Spirit is the successful weapon. The substance of this quotation is found in Ex. xxxiv, 14; Deut. vi, 13. The Word of God is more to Jesus than all the glory of all the kingdoms of this world, and eagerness to do the will of God crowds out all else. The one only living and true God is the only proper object of worship, and He must be worshiped in spirit and in truth. The principal Old Testament word for worship is in about fifty places translated as "bowing self down," as in Gen. xvii., 2; xix, 1. As there can be no salvation without the casting aside of self righteousness (Isa. lxiv, 6; Tit. iii, 5), and no Christian life apart from the denial and death of self (Matt. xvi, 24; II Cor. iv, 11; Gal. ii, 20), so there can be no true worship apart from "no confidence in the flesh and joy in Christ Jesus!" (Phil. iii, 3). At Jesus' feet, trusting in Him and rejoicing in Him, His sufferings and glory ever before us, is the way in which by the Spirit we may truly worship God.

9-11. "If Thou be the Son of God cast Thyself down from hence." The conflict is now in Jerusalem, the Holy City, and on a pinnacle of the temple, and in presenting this temptation the adversary also seeks to wield the sword of the Spirit, but he did as so many do today, quoted only the part of the passage which seemed to suit his purpose, omitting that which would have condemned him. The words quoted are given in the Psalm (Ps. xci, 9-13) as the result of making the Lord, the Most High, one's Refuge and Habitation. To do as the devil suggested would surely be a ceasing to abide under the shadow of the Almighty, or to make the Most High one's habitation, and therefore, the conditions being broken, the promise would be forfeited. Abiding in Christ and in the love of God we need fear no evil, but are perfectly safe in His keeping. In the middle of the path the lions cannot reach us, for they are chained. Walking hand in hand with Jesus, the Lion of the tribe of Judah, we need never fear the adversary, the devouring lion, for our Lion is more powerful than he, and will awfully roar at him (Isa. xli, 13; Rev. v, 5; x, 1-3; I Pet. v, 8).

12. "And Jesus, answering, said unto him, it is said, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God." Again the sword of the Spirit flashes, and this time it is a word from Deut. vi, 16, the context of which is, "Ye shall diligently keep the commandments of the Lord your God, * * * and thou shalt do that which is right and good in the sight of the Lord." If we would not be guilty of tempting the Lord, let us keep His commandments and do right in His sight. Listening to any other voice but His, even to the voice of the best of men, we are apt to be led astray. Had David been allowed to follow the advice of Nathan, good men though both were, both would have been astray (II Sam. vii, 1-3). The only safe way is to bring everything to "the law and the testimony," the unerring Word and Will of God (Isa. viii, 20, R. V.).

MORTGAGE SALE.

WHEREAS, default has been made in the payment of a certain indenture of mortgage, bearing date the 16th day of January A. D. 1884, made and executed by Jeremiah M. Burleson and Julia E. Burleson, his wife of the first part, to Enoch G. Cook, of Tecumseh, Michigan of the second part, which mortgage was on the 17th day of January, A. D., 1884, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for the county of Lenawee, Michigan, in Liber 109 of Mortgages on page 591, and which said mortgage was afterwards on the 27th day of May, A. D. 1885, duly assigned by the said Enoch G. Cook to Moses Bartlett, which deed of assignment was on the 20th day of January, A. D., 1890, duly recorded in the office of Register of Deeds for Lenawee county aforesaid, in Liber 118 of Mortgages on page 656; by which default the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative, and whereas there is at this date claimed to be due and unpaid, as principal and interest on the said mortgage, the sum of One Thousand Seven Hundred and Fifty-one and 12-100 Dollars ($1751.12) and no proceedings have been instituted at law or in equity to collect the same. Notice is therefore hereby given that, by virtue of said power of sale and the statutes of the State of Michigan, in such case made and provided, for the purpose of satisfying the money now, as aforesaid, due and unpaid on said mortgage, together with interest to accrue thereon, and the costs and charges of foreclosure, including an attorney fee of Fifty-five Dollars, as provided by law and stipulated in said mortgage, I shall on the 21st day of April A. D. 1890, at the east front door of the court house in the city of Adrian, in said county of Lenawee, (that being the place where the circuit court for said county is holden) sell at public vendue to the highest bidder, all those parcels of land situate in the township of Macon, in the county of Lenawee and state of Michigan known and described as follows, to wit: The east half of the northwest quarter of section five (5) town five (5) south, of range five (5) east. Also all that part of the east half of the southwest quarter of said section five (5), town five (5) south, of range five (5) east, bounded as follows: Beginning at the intersection of the Tecumseh and Saline road, so called, with the east line of the southwest quarter of said section five (5); thence running southwesterly in center of said road six (6) rods and twelve (12) links; thence north parallel with east line of said southwest quarter of section five (5) to the north line of said southwest quarter of section five (5); thence east to northeast corner of said southwest quarter of section five (5), thence south to the place of beginning, containing eighty-one acres of land, more or less.

Dated Jan. 23d, 1890.

CLEOPATRA.

Being an Account of the Fall and Vengeance of Harmachis, the Royal Egyptian,

"That Harmachis whom once thy foolish heart did love, O Charmion! Yes, I am he, and what thou seest, most fair lady. Yet is Harmachis dead whom thou didst love; but Olympus, the skilled Egyptian, waits upon thy words!"

"Cease!" she said, "and of the past but one word, and then—why, let it go. Not well with all thy wisdom canst thou know a true woman's heart if thou dost believe, Harmachis, that it can change with the changes of the outer form, for then assuredly could no love follow its beloved to that last place of change—the Grave. Know thou, learned Physician, I am of that sort who, loving once, love always, and being not beloved again, go virgin to the death."

She ceased and, having naught to say, I bowed my head in answer. Yet, though naught I said, and though this woman's passionate folly had been the cause of all our ruin, to speak truth, in secret I was thankful to her who, wooed of all and living in this shameless Court, had still through the long years poured out her unreturned love upon an outcast, and who, when that poor broken slave of Fortune came back in such unlovely guise, did yet hold him dear at heart. For what man is there who does not prize that gift most rare and beautiful, that one perfect thing which no gold can buy—a woman's unfeigned love?

"I thank thee that thou didst not answer," she said; "for the bitter words which thou didst pour upon me in those days that long are dead, and far away in Tarsus, have not lost their poisonous sting, and in my heart is no more place for the arrows of thy scorn, new venomed through thy solitary years. So let it be. Behold! I put it from me, that wild passion of my soul," and she looked up and stretched out her hands as though to press some unseen presence back. "I put it from me—though forget it I may not! There, 'tis done, Harmachis; no more shall my love trouble thee. Enough for me that once more my eyes behold thee, before sleep seals thee from their sight. Dost remember how when I would have died by thy dear hand, thou wouldst not slay, but didst bid me live to pluck the bitter fruit of crime, and be accursed by visions of the evil I had wrought and memories of thee whom I had ruined?"

"Ay, Charmion, well do I remember."

"Surely hath the cup of punishment been filled. Oh! couldst thou see into the record of my heart and read thereon the suffering that I have borne—borne with a smiling face—thy justice would be satisfied indeed!"

"And yet, if report be true, Charmion, thou art the first of all the Court, and therein the most powerful and beloved. Doth not Octavianus give it forth that he makes war not on Antony, nor even on his mistress, Cleopatra; but on Charmion and Iras?"

"Yea, and think what it has been to me thus, even of my oath to thee, to be forced to eat the bread and do the biddings of one whom so bitterly I hate!—one who has robbed me of thee, and who, through the workings of my jealousy, brought me to that which I am, brought thee to shame, and all Egypt to its ruin! Can jewels and riches and the flattery of princes and nobles bring happiness to such a one as I, who am more wretched than the meanest scullion wench? Oh, often have I wept till I was blind; and then, when the hour came, I must arise and tire me, and, with a smile, go do the bidding of the Queen and that heavy Antony. May the Gods grant me to see them dead—ay, the twain of them!—then myself shall I be content to die! Hard hath been thy lot, Harmachis; but at least thou hast been free, and many is the time that I have envied thee the quiet of thy haunted cave."

"I do perceive, O Charmion, that thou art mindful of thy oaths; and it is well, for methinks the hour of vengeance is at hand."

"I am mindful, and in all things have I worked for thee in secret—for thee, and for the utter ruin of Cleopatra and the Roman. I have fanned his passion and her jealousy, I have egged her on to wickedness and him to folly, and of all have I caused report to be brought to Cæsar. Listen! thus stands the matter. Thou knowest how went the fight at Actium. Thither with her fleet went Cleopatra, sorely against the will of Antony. But, as thou sendest me word, I entreated him for the Queen, vowing to him, with tears, that, did he leave her, she would die of grief; and he, poor slave, believed me. And so she went, and in the thick of the fight, for what cause I know not, she made signal to her squadron, and, putting about, fled from the battle, sailing for Peloponnesus. And now mark the end. When Antony saw that she was gone, he, in his madness, took a galley, and, deserting all, followed hard after her, leaving his fleet to be shattered and sunk, and his great army in Greece of twenty legions and twelve thousand horses without a leader. And all this would no man believe, that Antony, the smitten of the gods, had fallen so deep in shame. Therefore for awhile the army tarried, and but now to-night comes news brought by Canidius, the General, that, worn with doubt and being at length sure that Antony had deserted them, the whole of that great force hath yielded to Cæsar."

"And where, then, is Antony?"

"On a little isle in the Great Harbor hath he built him a habitation and named it Timonium; because, forsooth, like Timon, he cries out of the ingratitude of mankind that hath forsaken him. And there he lies smitten by a fever of the mind, and thither must thou go at dawn, so wills the Queen, to cure him of his ills and draw him to her arms; for her he will not see, nor knows he yet the full measure of his woe. But it is my bidding is to lead thee instantly to Cleopatra, who fain would ask thy counsel."

"I come," I answered, rising. "Lead thou on."

And so we passed the palace gates and along the Alabaster Hall, and presently once again I stood before the door of Cleopatra's chamber, and once again Charmion left me to warn her of my coming.

Presently she came back and beckoned to me. "Make strong thy heart," she whispered, "and see that thou dost not betray thyself, for still are the eyes of Cleopatra keen. Enter."

"Keen, indeed, must they be to find Harmachis in the learned Olympus! Had I not willed it, thyself thou hadst not known me, Charmion," I made answer.

Then I entered that remembered place and listened once more to the splash of the fountain, the song of the nightingale, and the murmur of the summer sea. With bowed head and halting gait I came, till at length I stood before the couch of Cleopatra—that same golden couch whereon she had sat the night she did o'ercome me. Then I gathered my strength and looked up. There before me was Cleopatra, glorious as of old, but, oh! how changed since that night when I saw Antony clasp her in his arms at Tarsus! Her beauty still clothed her like a garment; the eyes were yet deep and unfathomable as the blue sea. The face still splendid in its great loveliness. And yet all was changed. Time, that could not touch her charms, had stamped upon her presence such a look of weary grief as may not be written. Passion, beating ever in that fierce heart of hers, had written his record on her brow, and in her eyes shone the sad light of sorrow.

Low I bowed before this most royal woman, who once had been my love and my destruction, and yet knew me not.

She looked up wearily, and spoke in her slow, well-remembered voice.

"So thou art come at length, Physician. How tallest thou thyself—Olympus? 'Tis a name of promise, for surely now that the Gods of Egypt have deserted us, we do need aid from Olympus. Well, thou hast a learned air, for learning goes not with beauty. Strange, too, there is that about thee which doth recall what I know not. Say, Olympus, have we met before?"

"Never, O Queen, have my eyes fallen on thee in the body," I answered. "Never till this hour, when I come forth from my solitude to do thy bidding and cure thee of thy ills."

"Strange! and even in the voice—Pshaw! 'tis some memory that I can not catch. In the body thou sayest? then, perchance, I know thee in a dream!"

BEFORE ME WAS CLEOPATRA, BUT OH, HOW CHANGED.

"Ay, O Queen, in dreams have we met."

"Thou art a strange man who talkest thus, but if what I hear be true, one well learned; and, indeed, I do mind me of thy counsel when thou didst bid me join my Lord Antony in Syria, and how things befell according to thy work. Skilled must thou be in the casting of nativities and in the law of auguries, whereof these Alexandrian fools have little knowledge. Once knew I such another man, one Harmachis," and she sighed; "but long is he dead—as I would I were!—and at times I sorrow for him." She paused, while I sank my head upon my breast and stood silent.

"Interpret me this, Olympus. In the battle at that accursed Actium, just as the fight raged thickest and victory began to smile upon us, a great terror seized my heart, and thick darkness seemed to fall before my eyes, while in my ears a voice cried: 'Fly! fly or perish!' and I fled. But from my heart the terror leapt to the heart of Antony, and he followed after me, and thus was the battle lost. Say, then, what God brought this evil thing about?"

"Nay, O Queen," I answered, "it was no God—for wherein hast thou angered the Gods of Egypt? Hast thou robbed the temples of their faith? Hast thou betrayed the trust of Egypt? Having done none of these things, how, then, can the Gods of Egypt be wroth with thee? Fear not, 'twas naught but some natural vapor of the mind that o'ercame thy gentle soul made sick with the sight and sound of slaughter; and as for the noble Antony, where thou didst go needs must that he should follow."

And as I spoke Cleopatra turned white and trembled, glancing at me the while to find my meaning. But well I knew that the thing was of the avenging Gods, for, by their will, I myself had some hand therein.

"Learned Olympus," she said, not answering my words; "my Lord Antony is sick and crazed with grief. Like some poor hunted slave he hides himself in yonder sea-girt tower and shuns mankind—yea, e'en me he shuns, who, for his sake, endures so many woes. Now, this is my bidding to thee. To-morrow, at the coming of the light, do thou, led by Charmion, my waiting lady, take boat and row thee to the Tower and there crave entry, saying that ye bring tidings from the army. Then will he cause you to be let in, and thou, Charmion, must break this heavy news that Canidius bears; for Canidius himself I dare not send. And when his grief is past do thou, Olympus, soothe his fevered frame with thy draughts of value, and his soul with honeyed words, and draw him back to me, and all will yet be well. Do thou this and thou shalt have gifts more than thou canst count, for I am yet a Queen and yet can pay back those who serve my will."

"Fear not, O Queen," I answered, "this thing shall be done, and no reward ask I who have come hither to do thy bidding to the end."

So I went and, summoning Atoua, made ready a certain potion.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

OF THE DRAWING FORTH OF ANTONY FROM THE TIMONIUM BACK TO CLEOPATRA; OF THE FEAST MADE BY CLEOPATRA; AND OF THE MANNER OF DEATH OF EUDOSIUS THE STEWARD.

'TIS IT was yet dawn came Charmion once again, and we walked to the private harbor of the palace. There, taking boat, we rowed to the island mount whereon stands the Timonium, a vaulted tower, strong, small and round. And having landed, we twain came to the door and knocked thereon, till at length a grating was thrown open in the door, and an aged eunuch, looking forth, roughly asked our business.

"Our business is with the Lord Antony," said Charmion.

"Then it is no business, for Antony, my master, sees neither man or woman."

"Yet will he see us, for we bring tidings. Go tell him that the Lady Charmion brings tidings from the army."

The man went, and presently returned.

"The Lord Antony would know if the tidings be good or ill, for, if ill, then will he none of it, for with evil tidings hath he been overfed of late."

"Why—why, 'tis both good and ill. Open, slave, I will make answer to thy master!" and she slipped a purse of gold through the bars.

"Well, well," he grumbled as he took the purse, "the times are hard, and likely to be harder; for when the lion's down who will feed the jackal? Give thy news thyself, and if it do but draw the noble Antony out of this hall of Groans, I care not what it be. Now, the palace door is open, and there's he road to the banqueting chamber!"

We passed on, to find ourselves in a narrow passage, and, leaving the eunuch to bar the door, advanced till we came to a curtain. Through this we went, and found ourselves in a vaulted chamber, ill-lighted from the roof. On the further side of this rude chamber was a bed of rugs, and thereon crouched the figure of a man, his face hid in the folds of his toga.

"Most noble Antony," said Charmion, drawing near, "unwrap thy face and hearken unto me, for I bring thee tidings."

Then he lifted up his head. Marred was his face by sorrow; his tangled hair, grizzled with years, hung about his hollow eyes, and white on his chin was the stubble of an unshaved beard. Squalid was his robe, and more wretched his aspect than that of the poorest beggar at the Temple gates. To this, then, had the love of Cleopatra brought the glorious and renowned Antony, aforetime Master of Half the World!

"What will ye with me, Lady," he asked, "who would perish here alone? And who is this man who comes to gaze on fallen and forsaken Antony?"

"This is Olympus, noble Antony, that wise physician, the skilled in auguries, of whom thou hast heard much, and who Cleopatra, ever mindful of thy welfare, though but little doth thou think of hers, hath sent to minister to thee."

"And can thy physician minister to a grief such as my grief? Can his drugs give me back my galleys, my honor and my peace? Nay! Away with thy physician! What is thy tidings? quick—out with it! Hath Canidius, perchance, conquered Cæsar? Tell me but that, and thou shalt have a province for thy guerdon—ay! and if Octavianus is dead, twenty thousand sestertia to fill its treasury. Speak—nay; speak not! I fear the opening of thy lips as I never feared an earthly thing! Surely the wheel of Fortune hath gone round and Canidius hath conquered? Is it not so? Nay—out with it! I can no more!"

"O noble Antony!" she said, "steel thy heart to hear that which I needs must tell thee! Canidius is in Alexandria. He hath fled fast and far, and this is his report. For seven whole days did the legions wait the coming of Antony, as aforetime, to lead them to victory, putting aside the offers of the envoys of Cæsar. But Antony came not. And then 'twas rumored that Antony had fled to Tænarus, drawn thither by Cleopatra. The man who first brought that tale to the camp the legionaries cried shame on—ay, and beat him to the death! But ever it grew, until at length there was no more room to doubt; and then, O Antony, thy officers slipped one by one away to Cæsar, and where the officers go there the men follow. Nor is this all the story; for thy allies—Bocchus of Africa, Tarcondimotus of Cilicia, Mithridates of Commagene, Adallas of Thrace, Philadelphus of Paphlagonia, Archelaus of Cappadocia, Herod of Judæa, Amyntas of Galatia, Polemon of Pontus, and Malchus of Arabia—all, all have fled or bid their generals fly back to whence they came; and already their ambassadors do crave cold Cæsar's clemency."

"Hast done thy croaking, thou raven in a peacock's dress, or is there more to come?" asked the smitten man, lifting his white and trembling face from the shelter of his hands. "Tell me more; say that Egypt's dead in all her beauty, say that Octavianus lowers at the Canopic gate, and that, headed by dead Cicero, all the ghosts of hell do audibly shriek out the fall of Antony! Yea, gather up every woe that can o'erwhelm those who once were great, and loose them on the hoary head of him whom—in thy gentleness—thou art still pleased to name 'the noble Antony!'"

"Nay, my lord, I have done."

"Nay, and so have I done—done, quite done! 'Tis altogether finished, and thus I seal the end," and snatching a sword from his couch he would, indeed, have slain himself had I not sprung forward and grasped his hand. For it was not my purpose that he should die as yet; since, had he died at that hour, Cleopatra had made her peace with Cæsar, who rather wished the death of Antony than the ruin of Egypt.

"WHO IS THIS MAN WHO COMES TO GAZE ON FALLEN ANTONY?"

"Art mad, Antony? Art indeed a coward?" cried Charmion, "that thou wouldst thus escape thy woes and leave thy partner to face the sorrow out alone?"

"Why not, woman? Why not? She would not be long alone. There's Cæsar to keep her company. Octavianus loves a fair woman in his cold way, and still is Cleopatra fair. Come now, thou Olympus! thou hast held my hand my dealing death upon myself, advise me of thy wisdom. Shall I, then, submit myself to Cæsar, and I, Triumvir, twice Consul, and aforetime absolute Monarch of all the East, endure to follow in his triumph along those Roman ways where I myself have passed in triumph?"

"Nay, Sire," I answered. "If thou dost yield, then art thou doomed. All last night I questioned of the Fates concerning thee, and this I saw: When thy star draws near to Cæsar's it pales and is swallowed up; but when it passes from his radiance, then bright and big it shines, equal in glory to his own. All is not lost, and while some part remains, every thing may be regained. Egypt can yet be held, armies can still be raised. Cæsar hath withdrawn himself; he is not yet at the gates of Alexandria, and perchance may be appeased. Thy mind in its fever hath fired thy body; thou art sick and canst not judge aright. See here, I have a potion that shall make thee whole, for well skilled am I in the art of medicine," and I held out the phial.

"A potion, thou sayest, mah!" he cried. "More like it is a poison, and thou a murderer, sent by false Egypt, who would fain be rid of me now that I may no more be of service to her. The head of Antony is the peace offering she would send to Cæsar—she for whom I have lost all! Give me thy draught. By Bacchus! I will drink it, though it be the very elixir of Death!"

"Nay, noble Antony; it is no poison, and no murderer am I. See, I will taste it, if thou wilt," and I held forth the subtile potion that has power to fire the veins of men.

"Give it me, Physician. Desperate men are brave men. There!— Why, what is this! Yours is a magic draught! My sorrows seem to roll away like thunder clouds before the southern gale, and the spring of Hope blooms fresh upon the desert of my heart. Once more am I Antony, and once again I see my legions' spears a-sparkle in the sun, and hear the thunderous shouts of welcome as Antony—beloved Antony!—rides in his pomp of war along his deep-formed lines! There's hope! there's hope! Yet may I see the cold brows of Cæsar—that Cæsar who never erra except from policy—robbed of their victor bays, and crowned with shameful dust!"

"Ay," cried Charmion, "there is yet hope, if thou wilt but play the man! O my Lord! come back with us; come back to the loving arms of Cleopatra! All night she lies upon her golden bed, and fills the hollow darkness with her groans for 'Antony!' who, enamored now of Grief, forgets his duty and his love!"

"I come! I come! Shame upon me, that I dared to doubt her! Slave, bring water, and a purple robe; not thus can I be seen of Cleopatra. Even now I come."

In this fashion, then, did we draw Antony back to Cleopatra, that the ruin of the twain might be made sure.

We led him up the Alabaster Hall and into Cleopatra's chamber, where she lay, her cloudy hair about her face and breast, and tears flowing from her deep eyes.

"O Egypt!" he cried, "behold me at thy feet!"

She sprang from the couch. "And art thou here, my love?" she murmured; "then once again are all things well. Come near, and in these arms forget thy sorrows and turn my grief to joy. Oh, Antony, while love is left to us, still have we all!"

And she fell upon his breast and wildly kissed him.

That same day Charmion came to me and bade me prepare a poison of the most deadly power. And this at first I would not do, fearing that Cleopatra would therewith make an end of Antony before the time. But Charmion showed me that this was not so, and showed to me also for what purpose was the poison. Therefore I summoned Atoua, the skilled in simples, and all that afternoon we labored at the deadly work. And when it was done, Charmion came once more, bearing with her a chaplet of fresh roses that she bade me steep in the poison.

This then I did.

That night at the great feast of Cleopatra I sat nigh to Antony, who was at her side, and wore the poisoned wreath. Now, as the feast went on, fast flowed the wine, till Antony and the Queen grew merry. And she told him of her plans, and of how even now her galleys were being drawn by the canal that leads from Bubastis on the Pelusiac branch of the Nile, to Clysma at the head of the Bay of Hieraopolis. For it was her design, should Cæsar prove stubborn, to fly with Antony and her treasure down the Arabian Gulf, where Cæsar had no fleet, and seek some new home in India, whither her foes might not follow. But, indeed, this plan came to nothing, for the Arabs of Petra burnt the galleys, incited thereto by a message sent by the Jews of Alexandria, who hated Cleopatra and were hated of her.

Now, when she had made an end of telling him, the Queen called on him to drink a cup with her to the success of this new scheme, bidding him, as she did so, steep his wreath of roses in the wine, and make the draught more sweet. This, then, he did, and it being done, she pledged him. But when he was about to pledge her back, she caught his hand, crying "Hold!" whereat he paused, wondering.

Now, among the servants of Cleopatra was one Eudosius, a steward; and this Eudosius, seeing that the fortunes of Cleopatra were at an end, had laid a plan to fly that very night to Cæsar, as had done many of his betters, taking with him all the treasures in the palace that he could steal. But this design being discovered to Cleopatra, she determined to be avenged upon Eudosius.

"Eudosius," she cried, for the man stood near, "come hither, thou faithful servant! Seest thou this man, most noble Antony; through all our troubles he hath clung to us and been of comfort to us. Now, therefore, he shall be rewarded according to his deserts and the measure of his faithfulness, and that from thine own hand. Give him thy golden cup of wine, and let him drink a pledge to our success; the cup shall be his guerdon."

And still wondering, Antony gave it to the man, who, stricken in his guilty mind, took it, and stood trembling. But he drank not.

"Drink, thou slave, drink!" cried Cleopatra, half rising from her seat and flashing a fierce look on his white face. "By Serapis! so surely as I yet shall sit in the Capitol at Rome, and thou dost thus flout the Lord Antony, I'll have thee scourged to the bones, and the red wine poured upon thy open wounds to heal them! Ah! at length though drinkest! Why, what is it, good Eudosius? art sick? Surely, then, must this wine be as the water of jealousy of those Jews, that hath power to slay the false and strengthen the honest only. Go, some of you, search this man's room; methinks he is a traitor!"

Meanwhile the man stood, his hands to his head. Presently he began to tremble, and then fell, shrieking, to the ground. Anon he was on his feet again, clutching at his bosom, as though to tear out the fire in his heart. He staggered, with livid, twisted face and foaming lips, to where Cleopatra lay watching him with a slow and cruel smile.

"Ah, traitor! thou hast it now!" she said. "Prithee, is death sweet?"

"Thou wanton!" yelled the dying man, "thou hast poisoned me! Thus mayst thou also perish!" and with one shriek he flung himself upon her. She saw his purpose, and swift and supple as a tiger sprang to one side, so that he did but grasp her Royal cloak, tearing it from its emerald clasp. Down he fell upon the ground, rolling over and over in the purple chiton till presently he lay still and dead, his tormented face and frozen eyes peering ghastly from its folds.

"Ah!" said the Queen, with a hard laugh, "the slave died wondrous hard, and fain would have drawn me with him. See, he hath borrowed my garment for a pall! Take him away and bury him in his livery."

"What means Cleopatra?" said Antony, as the guards dragged the corpse away; "the man drank of my cup. What is the purpose of this most sorry jest?"

"It serves a double end, noble Antony! This very night would that man have fled to Octavianus, bearing of our treasure with him. Well, I have lent him wings, for the dead fly fast! Also this: thou didst fear that I should poison thee, my Lord; nay, I know it. See now, Antony, how easy were it that I should slay thee if I had the will. That wreath of roses which thou didst steep within the cup is dewed with deadly bane. Had I, then, a mind to make an end of thee, I had not stayed thy hand. O Antony, henceforth trust me; sooner would I slay myself than harm one hair of thy beloved head! See, here come my messengers! Speak, what tid ye find?"

"Royal Egypt, this we found. All things in the chamber of Eudosius are made ready for flight, and in his baggage is much treasure."

"Thou hearest!" said she, smiling darkly. "Think ye, my loyal servants all, that Cleopatra is one with whom it is well to play the traitor! Be warned by this Roman's fate!"

Then a great silence of fear fell upon the company, and Antony sat also silent.

A MUSICAL TREAT.

Efforts are making to secure Prof. Wm. H. Sherwood, the celebrated pianist, to conduct a musical recital in this village, and if successful, the entertainment will be given early next month. From a large number of press notices we take the following comments in regard to Prof. Sherwood as a musician.

With the accession of William H. Sherwood to the Chicago Conservatory faculty as head of the piano department, the city assumes a new position in the musical world. Instead of students flocking to New York and Boston for instruction in piano playing, the travel will be the other way. Many pupils from the East South and West have arranged to attend the Conservatory this winter. —Chicago Herald.

We must honor Mr. Sherwood as one of the most eminent pianists of the present age.—Berlin Post.

He plays with taste and finish that distinguish him as a musical scholar of the first rank.—New York Times.

Mr. Sherwood's performance from first to last was a pure and unalloyed delight.—Boston Advertiser.

OBITUARY.

Amanda F. Ives was born in the State of Rhode Island. When quite young her parents moved to Saratoga N. Y. and afterwards to Homer N. Y. where she married and lived with her husband, now deceased, for 43 years. For some years after her husbands death she continued to live at Homer, seven years ago she came to Michigan and made her home with a daughter at Jackson. While residing at Homer. She united with the Presbyterian Church and upon moving to Jackson she transferred her membership to the Congregational Church of that city. A few weeks ago she came to Tecumseh to visit her daughter, Mrs. L. L. Bates, and while here she was taken suddenly ill with trouble of the heart. Medical aid was of no avail, and after a brief illness, she passed away, at the ripe age of eighty years and five months. The funeral services were held at the home of Mr. Bates on Monday afternoon Feb. 10th and the remains were conveyed to Homer, N. Y. for final interment.

Poison Oak.

The following extract, taken from a letter written by Mr. E. A. Bell, fully explains itself:

While surveying land, in 1883 I accidentally handled poison oak vine and in less than three hours (the eruption usually resulting from such contact begins in ten days) my face was swollen and disfigured, and my hands and arms seriously affected. I immediately began taking Swift's Specific (S. S. S.), and after taking three large bottles I found all signs of the breaking out entirely removed. I was led to suspect its return at the same time next year, but it did not, nor has there been any indications of its return since.

My little boy, eight years old, was afflicted with the same poison in 1884. After taking several bottles of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) the eruptions entirely disappeared. A very slight form of the same eruption returned during the next spring, but we then resumed the S. S. S. and having taken enough during that season to make the cure permanent, he has not since had any return of the disease. Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) certainly effected thorough cures in both these cases, and I regard it as a most effective remedy for all such diseases.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury,

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O, contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE, with its varied and excellent contents, is a library in itself.

It was indeed a happy thought to print an entire novel in each number.

Not a short novelette, but a long story such as you are used to get in book form and pay from one dollar to one dollar and a half for.

Not only that, but with each number you get an abundance of other contributions, which gives you a good magazine besides the novel.

The ringing blows which have been struck on the gateway of popular favor, have resounded throughout the entire land, and to-day Lippincott's Magazine stands in the front rank of monthly publications, and is the most widely-read-and-talked-of publication of its kind in the world. ESTATE OF NATHAN MORSE.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee.

At a session of the Probate Court, for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, on Tuesday, the 11th day of February, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety.

Present Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Nathan Morse, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Frederick B. Wood and James W. Patterson, executors of the last will and testament and upon the estate of said deceased, alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased and the expenses of administration thus far incurred have been fully paid, and that they are now ready to render their first administration account, and praying that said account may be allowed, and that the funds of said estate so far as collected be by an order of this court distributed to the parties entitled thereto under the terms of said will, and for such other order and decree as to this court shall seem proper.

It is ordered, That Monday, the 10th day of March next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said Petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks, previous to said day of hearing.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

BRITTON BUDGET.

Jesse Collar entertained his brother and family of Macon, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Oirth of Dunkirk, O., are visiting Dr. and Mrs. Hendershot.

Grandma Britton, who has been quite poorly for some days, is improving again.

Rev. Chas. Harris and wife of Dundee, spent Sunday with Edgar Wells and family.

Charlie Underwood's little four year old daughter died Saturday evening of diptheria.

Will Randall is moving into the old Oliver homestead, which he intends to work the coming season.

Walter Exelby has moved his family onto his prairie farm. He proposes to open the spring campaign early.

Miss Bowerman, teacher of primary department, has gone home to stay during the suspension of school.

Operator Parshall now has his wife and children domiciled at the Exelby house, and looks as contented as an old shoe.

Myrtle Osgood, daughter of Elmer Osgood, has the diptheria quite severe, but at this writing is improving. This is the only case in the village so far.

At the time of closing school the pupils were working hard on a program for an entertainment to be given at the close of the term. We hope this arrangement will still be carried out.

They do say that some of the larger boys have appeared in school with dust in their pockets, which the teacher has found it necessary to remove. Boys, be gentlemen every day, and there wo'nt any of this dust accumulate.

Mr. Britton promptly ordered the school closed Friday noon upon receiving intelligence that there was a case of diptheria in the place. That this was wise there can be no doubt, as it is reported that little Bertie Smith, who was a pupil in Miss Bowerman's room, has since come down with the disease. Bertie is the son of Chas. Smith, living a mile south of the village.

How it looks to stand off the resident physicians who have trotted out to your relief, rain or shine, night or day, year in and year out, and finally hand out your money—not yours either; because it rightfully belongs to your family physician—to some traveling quack, who promises to cure you, but gets your money first and then lets you "whistle." Its but a few moons since a dusky redskin, leather breeches, beaded moccasins, wampun belt and all, struck this burg when it was wormy, and every body had worms; ear worms, angle worms, tape worms, pin worms, in fact all the late varieties of worms; but Ogalalahwauklechaw come to cure--he came to save the village from crawling away—so he got a lot of old leather chips from John's shoe shop and steeped up some worm medicine, and all one Sunday he took in one dollar, two dollars, and some five dollars. Sunday night he flitted away and you had his memory and a decoction of old rubbers. And now there is another lot who have lately paid their fooltax, but who will when the first pangs denote that green corn is getting there, send for your resident doctor and after he has yanked your liver around right end first, and stood you on your feet will say "just put it down with that other." It's time to reverse this matter.

MACON MUSIC.

The revival meetings have closed, with the addition of nine new members to the Baptist Church.

The temperance tea meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Isaac Pennington, Friday afternoon, Feb. 28th.

The "ball shoot" came off Saturday afternoon, as announced, with Will Carter in the lead. It will be repeated Saturday afternoon, March 1st.

John Mansfield and Agnes Kuder were married at the home of the bride's parents, Thursday, Feb. 20th. We wish for their future happiness.

M. V. Sickley returned from his southern trip last Monday. By his looks we would conclude he had escaped the grip, especially the Russian type.

Charles Hendershot, who has been in the west for the past four years, and late of Denver, Col., is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Hendershot, for a few weeks.

There will be a donation visit for the Rev. A. W. Stalker at the residence of Edwin Howell in Macon, on Thursday evening, March 6th, 1890. Clergy: Robert Hendershot and William Niblack.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Mabel Hayden, of Tecumseh, visited Belle Barlow Thursday afternoon

Diptheria is reported to be in the neighborhood.

of last week.

C. W. Culbertson, Jr., and family spent Thursday with his parents in North Tecumseh.

Lawrence Rappleye enjoyed a pleasant day with Clarence Jackson, of Tecumseh, Saturday.

Chas Bennett, of Plymouth, visited Lou Arner Thursday and Friday of last week, on his return from a trip through the eastern and southern states, where he has been wholesaling the Iron Windmill. He only visited the larger cities.

Prof. Daniels spent the Sabbath with his parents at Onsted, returning accompanied by his sister Clara, who will visit friends here for a few days.

Mrs. J. R. Miller and son Sidney, who have been spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. Harriet Clark, since the death of her father, returned to her home at Dowagiac Saturday.

Mrs. Jessie Patten, of Chicago, has, after repeated efforts were made to secure her for a course of elocutionary instruction, consented to come and will be here about March 6th to give a term. Any who wish to avail themselves of this grand opportunity can obtain the necessary information of Geo. D. Arner, her brother, who will give the price of tuition and make the necessary arrangements.

Chas. Underwood's little girl, who has been sick and suffering for the past two weeks with diptheria, died Sunday morning.

The death of Mrs. Beach at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Seger, last week, is rather hard to credit in this day and generation. We give it to our readers as we were informed. It seems that Mr. and Mrs. Seger went away Friday night and left the old lady alone to look after things. Saturday evening she went to the barn to milk and, having a bad spell, was unable to get up. She dragged herself for some distance, but getting into a mud hole was unable to get out. The night being chilly, she froze quite badly as she was dressed very thinly. She was found about one o'clock Sunday morning by some neighbors who were returning home from a friend's, and she informed them that she went to the barn to milk to get some milk to drink as she was hungry. It was found upon investigation there was no flour and only one pancake in the house. Dr. Hendershot was called to her aid, but could do nothing as death soon relieved the old lady of sufferings. The funeral services were held at the Free Methodist church on Friday P. M.

The people in this vicinity would like to look into the future and see what boys are going to be worth.

Chas. Luther has had the pleasure of two of Job's comforters the past week. The one on his cheek looks rather bad.

John Lee, who has lived on the Layard place for the last two years, is moving onto a farm he has bought below Deerfield.

Jones & Westgate are ready to do picket sawing and sawing wood, having just bought a new Hoxie picket saw, which is claimed to be the best in the market.

Bret Simonds met with a bad accident Friday morning. While drawing dent Friday morning. While drawing fence posts one of the posts fell from the wagon, carrying him with it, breaking his leg below the knee in such a manner that the bone protruded from the flesh. Being nearly half a mile from the house no one heard him call, so he climbed on the wagon and drove home. Dr. Catlin set the limb and at present he is doing as well as could be expected, but he thinks it will take a good deal of patience.

Judge V. H. Lane will give a series of lectures on Commercial Law, commencing Wednesday evening of this week, at Raisin Valley Seminary. The series will contain three lectures: "Contracts," "Negotiable Paper" and "Real Estate Transfers." They will begin at 7 o'clock and an admittance fee of 10c. will be charged to those outside of the School. These lectures by so competent a man will surely be intensely practical, for there are very few that will not find it necessary to use them some time in life. The dates for the last two lectures are not decided on but notice will be given in time.

SPRINGVILLE SIFTINGS.

The ladies' home missionary society will meet at Mrs. Wm. Ayres' Thursday afternoon.

DEVILS LAKE DOINGS.

A valuable colt of Fred Brazee's got his leg broken last week.

A. Bedell is spending his time in Adrian, as juryman, this week.

It is rumored that Lew Bedell and family intend moving to Toledo in the spring.

Yes, boys, we will help you all we can, providing you will bring us a good mess of fish.

F. Wood was in Adrian Monday and shook hands with Frank Rector, of Tecumseh, and Charlie Dubois, of Britton.

They didn't go home till morning, —till daylight did appear,—from the dance other night; but nevertheless their buggies came in contact with each other; consequently one rig is minus two spokes, and the other is sadly demoralized. Better be a little more careful next time, John.

ONSTED ODDS.

James Brooks and sons have rented John Brooks' farm for one year.

Parties are in this vicinity buying up whitewood trees for shipment.

Two young ladies from Chicago are stopping at Peter Maxwell's at present.

Ezra Horton has moved from the David Aldrich farm into Rome township.

Frank Pratt has purchased the old Marcus Palmer place in North Rome and has moved thereon.

On the 8th inst. occurred the very udden death of Charles R. Baker, an old pioneer of North Rome.

Abram Bateman has an engraving of a naval engagement which is over one hundred years old. Mr. B. brought it from old England and has had it over forty years.

A few days ago W. Milla Taylor, of North Rome, had a valuable colt, coming one year old, break one of its fore legs by some unknown cause, and as the damage could not be repaired the colt was shot. Mr. T. has lost eight horses since he began farming in Rome township.

Roxana, wife of William Aldrich and mother of M. O. Aldrich, aged 81 years, died on Monday of last week and was buried on the following Thursday. The cause of her death was an injury which she received by falling and striking on the end of an upright board, injuring her left side very badly. Mr. and Mrs. James Aldrich, of Metamora, Lapeer Co., and Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Faling, of Jonesville, Hillsdale Co., were here to attend their mother's funeral.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

S. C. Easlick is at Monroe Junction learning the station agent business.

Mrs. L. C. Grady and son Newman, of Caro, are on a three weeks' visit with friends here.

Aunt Polly Royce has just been granted a pension of $1800, back pay, and $12 per month, henceforth.

It is a game of "freeze out" with clover threshers, who dare not leave "camp" through fear of a mud blockade.

Aggie Stewart, Dolly and Aggie Pattison took an outing at Jerome and Summerset Center from Saturday to Tuesday.

We are having a remarkably early spring. Orange blossoms, blue birds, robins, wild geese and horse radish in great abundance.

Abe Harrington takes to auctioneering as naturally as an alderman to boodle. If you want your farm property to bring war prices, call on Abe.

There are about 7 miles of wire strung on the new telegraph annex, with three miles yet to string. Manager Bowen will have his hands full in keeping up steam and the belt on, for 50 new operators.

I wish somebody would inform the mail service where Lake Ridge is. It takes four days for a letter to come from Dundee, three days from Ridgeway, and the HERALD usually arrives on Saturday.

HOLLOWAY HASH.

Miss Etta Carpenter spent Sunday at home.

Mrs. Geo. Hoxie, of Blissfield, visited at Benj. Kelley's over Sunday.

The Spider Web social of the young people, at Mrs. Binns' last Saturday evening, was a success financially, though how successful the many snares that were set may prove to be is yet a conundrum. The poor flows buzzed and floundered helplessly in the network drawn by skillful and dextrous fingers. One young fellow attempted to descend from an upper window by the frail woven web, but was restrained from his perilous descent by his friends. The next will probably be a shadow social and will be held at the house of James McIntyre.

TECUMSEH, THURSDAY, FEB. 27

We believe that the majority should rule in Congress. The converse of this proposition is also true. It should require a full majority vote to pass bills in Congress. The Democracy is prepared to go to the country on that issue.

The Republican majority in the present House could be depended upon to vote for a revision of the Westminister Confession of Faith. The diligence with which they are going about the task of unseating Democratic members, shows conclusively that they have no faith in the doctrine of election.

The first result of the adoption of the new rules will be the unseating of enough Democrats to make easy sailing. The second result will be a raid on the treasury which will wipe out the surplus. The third result will be the election of a Democratic House next fall by about fifty majority.

Governor Larrabee of Iowa tells the Legislature in his message that "the fruitful cause" of agricultural depression in Iowa is "the incongruity of the present tariff" This is a great and plain truth, but it is a very mild way of putting it. The "incongruity" of the war tariff is the very quintessence of incongruity.

With Dakota farmers starving, New England farmers "gone away somewhere" and Kansas farmers handing their lands over to mortgagees, it would seem that protection is a failure so far as the agriculturist is concerned. It must be adverse laws that work such results, for nowhere on the face of the green earth are natural conditions so good for the tillers of the soil.

The New York Sun, which loses no opportunity to belittle Ex-President Cleveland, repeats the silly story that Samuel J. Tilden once said of Mr. Cleveland: "He is the most selfish politician I have ever known." What Mr. Tilden actually said was this: "He is the boldest politician I have ever known." And this remark was a very sagacious as well as a truthful one.

"You have no ruins," an Englishman once contemptuously remarked to an American. Just wait until Tom Reed's Congress gets through its monkey business and the cyclone of American wrath has a good chance at the Republican party, and then Uncle Sam will be able to point to ruins that will take the charm of antiquity from Nineveh.—Galveston News.

The Washington correspondent of the Pittsburg Dispatch: I have never heard anything like the "cussing" Harrison and his Cabinet officers are getting from Republicans of all shades and colors and kinds. The criticisms of Cleveland by the Democrats after he had been in office for a year were caresses compared with those of Harrison by the Republicans. I verily believe that Andy Johnson was as popular with the Republican party at any time, as the grandson of William Henry Harrison is now.

These rules by which the Speaker is allowed to count a quorum, to judge of the motives of men who make motions and refuse to entertain any motion he does not wish to, must be considered in other ways than as simply depriving the minority of time-honored rights. They make the Speaker and his chairmen of committees, already too powerful, practically absolute, and reduce the House from a representative and deliberative body to an unlimited oligarchy placed under the thumb of one man. The House should never be allowed to assume such a character.—Springfield Republican.

There is not a shadow of doubt that two years from now, the Democrats will have an opportunity to turn these rules against the Republicans. But the trouble is about the Republican meaness that it is so excessively mean that decent people hate to imitate it, even in retaliation. Democrats cannot very well insult Mrs. Harrison simply to retaliate for the incessant insults which Republicans offered Mrs. Cleveland. Nor is it by any means certain that they will ever condescend to enforce against a Republican minority the disgracefully oppressive rules with which the Republicans are now overriding the interests of a Democratic minority.—Chicago Herald.

DEDICATION

Of the Carnegie New Free Library

AT ALLEGHENY CITY WITH THE PRESIDENT'S PRESENCE.

A Magnificent Demonstration—Speeches by the Donor and the Chief Magistrate of the Nation—A Noble Gift From a Grand Man.

PITTSBURG, February 22.—At 7:30 o'clock last evening, Andrew Carnegie, accompanied by President Harrison and the other invited guests, took carriages at the Duquesne club and were driven directly to the free library building corner of Ohio and Federal streets, Allegheny City. The spacious music hall was filled to overflowing when the distinguished party entered the building. They were greeted with thunders of applause. The national hymn "America" was rendered by the Mozart society, and the audience accompanied by the Carnegie organ. Right Rev. Cortlandt Whitehead led in prayer. The hymn "The Heavens are Telling" was sung by the Mozarts, and Mr. Carnegie was presented to the audience. Mr. Carnegie was almost overcome at the warmth of the greeting accorded him, and with difficulty delivered a brief address during which he transferred the golden key of the free library building to the keeping of R. T. Pearson, mayor of the city of Allegheny. In the course of Mr. Carnegie's remarks he was profuse in thanks to those whose aid had been given in carrying his plans to completion. He was proud of the honor conferred by the President of the United States in that he stands forth the industrious sponsor of the free library at its christening. Mr. Carnegie stated that the library was for all time to come the property of the people and that "every citizen of Allegheny, rich or poor, black or white, can enter this building and truthfully say: "I am joint proprietor here." Mr. Carnegie's remarks were greeted with justly deserving enthusiasm.

Mr. Pearson accepted the golden key, replying in a few well chosen remarks.

President Harrison was introduced and warmly received. He commented on his experiences of the day in his visit to the more prominent industries and their probable influence in the commercial world. He then spoke relative to Mr. Carnegie's gift to the city as the transfer of precious metal into something that blooms for eternity. He believed that the generosity of the donor would serve as an impulse and inspiration, and that others would be influenced to do likewise. President Harrison then declared the library open to the public, charging the recipients to be jealous and circumspect.

Enoch Pratt, the well-known philanthropist of Baltimore, spoke of the benefits to be derived. Governor Beaver followed in well appropriated remarks declarind that no man could render higher service to his country than had Mr. Carnegie in that he had dedicated his own self to the good of his fellows. The remarks of Hon. John Dalzell were highly camplimentary to Mr. Carnegie. He was followed by Dr. Riddle, President Hunter, of Allegheny Councils, Hon. John H. Rickets and Rev. Dr. Purvis.

Chairman James B. Scott, of the library commission, closed the exercises by reading the report of the commission and transferring the deed of the property to the city of Allegheny.

The hallelujah chorus was sung and the benediction pronounced by Bishop Phelan.

President Harrison, accompanied by Governor Beaver, Enoch Pratt and Professor Langley, were driven directly to the Union station. The party occupied a special car and left for home at 10:35 o'clock.

It is reliably reported that Andrew Carnegie, in addition to his donation of $1,000,000 for a free library in Pittsburg, has signified his intention of purchasing the site for the main building. This means an additional expenditure of probably half a million dollars.

THE GRAND STEWART MANSION

Secured by the Manhattan Club for a Term of Years.

NEW YORK, February 22.—The lease of the Stewart mansion to the Manhattan club which has been under consideration many months, was consummated yesterday and the instrument was formally signed at the club house at a meeting of the governing board. Another paper which guarantees the undertaking of the club in fulfilling the provisions of the lease, was also signed and sealed. The terms of the lease gives to the club the rental of the Stewart mansion for twenty-one years with the privilege of a renewal for a similar term. During the first five years the annual rental will be $35,000; during the next five years $37,500 and the remaining period $40,000. So little is to be done to fit up the mansion for the club's use that it is hoped occupancy can begin March 1.

EVANSVILLE PROPERTY

Invested in Heavily by Eastern Capitalists.

EVANSVILLE, IND., February 22.—The gas and electric light company's plant have been sold to the Standard Oil company, and the Jenney electric light company for $700,000. The street railway company was also sold to eastern parties at a price supposed to be $225,000. It is reported that the Lelands, of New York, have secured an option on the site of the court house, and that a hotel will be erected and conducted under their managements.

FREE AGAIN.

Mrs. Jessie Shaw, the Second Time, Divorced from E. B. Shaw.

CHICAGO, February 22.—Mrs. Jessie Shaw, nee Caldwell, has procured a divorce for the second time from E. B. Shaw, a young man who two years ago eloped with May Yohe, an actress. The divorce was obtained on the ground of cruelty. Mrs. Shaw procured a divorce shortly after the Yohe escapade, but remarried her husband within a few months.

General Grant's Monument.

NEW YORK, February 22.—The Grant monument association, at its annual meeting last night decided that none of the designs submitted in response to invitation was worthy of being adopted. A second competition will probably be arranged. W. R. Grace was elected president, Hamilton Fish and Sidney Dillon vice presidents, A. B. Cornell, A. L. Sanger, C. H. T. Collis, E. M. Knox, C. H. Woodman and C. O'Reilly executive committee.

The Duke Will Be Pardoned.

LONDON, February 22.—M. De Blowitz, Paris correspondent of the Times, telegraphs that paper that a pardon will be granted to the Duke of Orleans.
